TALMADGE OUSTS SON OF YEOMANS AS ENTOMOLOGIST

Drops Manning Yeomans
Because of His Refusal
To Accept 1936 Funds
Not Appropriated by Act of General Assembly.

GIRARDEAU NAMED TO OCCUPY OFFICE

Head of Georgia Legal Force Expected To Rule
De Facto Appointees
Not Officers of State.

State Entomologist Manning S. Yeomans, the son of Attorney-General M. J. Yeomans, who has declined to uphold Governor Talmadge's dictatorship of state finances, yesterday addressed a letter to the Governor saying that he could not accept 1936 funds unless they were appropriated by the general assembly. The Governor promptly dropped young Yeomans as a state official and swore in his successor.

The action immediately intensified reports that the attorney-general, who has been absent for a month on account of illness, would return to the capitol this week and announce as head of the state department of law that de facto officials, appointed by the Governor, are not officers of the state and cannot speak for the state in litigation growing out of their appointments by the Governor and their attempts to function in the positions they now occupy.

Declared Illegal.
Judge Yeomans previously has announced that he believes the course being pursued by the Governor is illegal and that he does not believe the state can be operated according to law without an appropriations act.

An open clash between the Governor and the attorney-general was in prospect when the Governor tries to get the assistants in the department of law to carry on lawsuits without the approval of the attorney-general who may even go so far as to represent the other side of the issue.

The Governor made no announcement of receipt of the letter from State Entomologist Yeomans. He merely announced the appointment of Girardeau to the position.

Woman Is Shot Down By Estranged Mate

Mrs. Dora Crowell, of Conyers, last night was fatally wounded by a man identified by Sheriff E. Floyd Cook, of Rockdale county, as her estranged husband.

Sheriff Cook quoted Miss Essie McDonald, her sister, operator of a roadside lunch stand four miles from Conyers, as saying the husband E. G. Crowell, demanded that Mrs. Crowell return to him, and upon her refusal, shot her twice, one bullet piercing the stomach and the other a lung.

The man fled. Mrs. Crowell was taken to the Emory University hospital, where an emergency operation was performed and a blood transfusion given. Rockdale and Newton county officers were seeking the missing husband.

Loot That Brought Death to Drug Addict

Here is more than $10,000 worth of morphine, cocaine and codeine—if you were a drug fiend and had to buy it off a sidewalk peddler. United States Narcotic Agent P. A. Williams, right, is shown returning the drugs to F. Reeves Hart, manager of the Park-Davis drug supply company. Stolen three weeks ago, it was found early yesterday in a downtown hotel under a bed on which lay the body of George C. Ormond, to whom the robbery has been traced. Ormond, jittery with fear, took an overdose from his costly loot. Story at bottom of page. Staff photo by Hiers.

HOMER FLANAGAN CLEARED BY JURY

Convict Goes To Finish Term After Acquittal on Charge of Murder.

Homer Flanagan went back to the Atlanta federal penitentiary yesterday, acquitted of murder in the slaying of Russell Smith, a fellow convict. A jury debated for 24 hours, before it was decided that Flanagan should be acquitted. From 12:15 p. m. Friday until 12:25 p. m. yesterday, the grim balloting went on inside the jury room. A sharp rap on the locked door announced a verdict had been reached just as the opinion was freely expressed around the corridors of the old federal building, "this is a mistrial."

The jury filed into the courtroom and W. Stanton Hale, the foreman, read the verdict.

Flanagan sat in a daze of incomprehension. He stared at the jury and he stared at the judge.

A few minutes later, while Judge E. Marvin Underwood was thanking the courtroom, so Flanagan's 45-year-old mother, his sister and his brother sat quietly.

The boy was led out of the courtroom by penitentiary guards, manacled. He still has 20 months to serve on the automobile theft that put him inside the penitentiary. The guards permitted the mother to see her son in Judge Underwood's library for a few moments. She embraced him again and again.

"I'll stay in Atlanta," she told him.

LINDER ACCUSED OF VIOLATING LAW

Agriculture Office Deficit
$28,111.42 in 1935;
Commissioner Is Flayed

Reporting the State Department of Agriculture finished 1935 with $28,111.42 deficit, State Auditor Tom Wisdom yesterday criticized Commissioner Tom Linder for retaining control of $6,800.98 in farm markets rental.

Wisdom charged Linder violated the law in transferring the $6,800.98 directly to departmental maintenance instead of placing it in the state treasury.

"This transfer direct to the maintenance account," the auditor reported to Governor Talmadge, "is contrary to law."

"The law provides that all funds collected under the operation of this act shall be deposited by the commissioner of agriculture with the state treasury in a separate fund to be paid out on warrant signed by the Governor (acts 1935, page 375)."

The balance sheet of the department showed cash in hand of $734.50 and undrawn treasury balance of $14,570 making total assets of $15,304.50, and accounts payable of $43,415.92, an operating loss of $28,011.42 for the year 1935. A balance of $905.98 carried over from the previous year reduced the actual cash deficit to $28,111.42.

The Department of Agriculture collected a total of $259,357 during the year, of which $183,231 came from fertilizer tag fees, $43,379 from feed stamp fees, and $120,555 from fertilizer registration fees. Of these collections $242,536.23 was turned over to the state treasury, and $135,620 was withdrawn from the treasury on regular appropriations and $41,500 on account of revenue received from a general license for the sale of fertilizer.

The chief expenditures of the department were $107,462 for personal services, $32,670 traveling expenses, $22,308 for stamping, printing and publicity, $13,234 for communication service, $3,177 for supplies and materials, and $1,767 for miscellaneous purposes.

Commissioner Linder was assigned $4,683.24 on his salary account and $2,326.28 drawn for traveling expenses.

South Carolina Shows Heavy Sales of Liquor

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 28.—(UP)—More than 5,000,000 quarts of legal whiskey have been sold in South Carolina since the state's liquor law became effective 10 months ago, it was revealed last night by the license bureau of the state tax commission.

The total was struck by reviewing the records of the state's liquor tax meter tax placed on liquor sold in the state and inspection stamps required for out-of-state shipments.

As the 10-month period ended, meter tax revenue totaled $1,000,773 and revenue from inspection stamps aggregated $28,939.

Revenue from confiscated liquor amounted to more than $1,500 and retail license brought more than $106,000. Wholesale license fees totaled $39,000, bringing the aggregate revenue to approximately $2,000,000.

The commission said 445 retail liquor stores now are licensed in the state, with Columbia leading with 43. Only three licenses have been revoked.

MANY LOSE LIVES AS TRAIN HITS BUS IN PEACH COUNTY

Engine Plows in Stage at Byron, 15 Miles South of Macon; 5 to 8 Reported Killed; 6 Are Injured.

BYRON, Ga., March 28.—(AP)—A fast train of the Central of Georgia railroad crashed into a bus at a crossing in the heart of the business section here tonight, killing, according to first reports, eight persons and injuring five others.

Dr. James B. Kay, who treated the injured before they were taken to a hospital at Macon, a score of miles northeast of here, said apparently seven bodies were taken from the wreckage. Another victim died at Macon.

The physician said the best information was that one white woman, a white man, two negro men, three negro women and a negro child were killed.

Macon Man Identified.
A Macon undertaking establishment, where bodies of the dead were taken, said the white man was tentatively identified as Walter J. Whitehurst, 45, of Macon, who was returning from a lumber camp near Ocklochnee.

The white woman was tentatively identified as Mrs. Sara Sumter, of Americus, formerly of Albany, Ga., a stenographer in the Soil Conservation office at Americus.

None of the negroes had been identified late tonight.

The bus had just made a stop at the depot at Byron and started across the railway crossing, some 50 feet away, when the train struck it almost squarely behind, carrying the wreckage several hundred yards down the track.

Bodies Mangled.
Twisted steel, glass and wreckage hampered the work of rescuers. Bodies of many of the victims, Dr. Kay said, were terribly mangled. Several were stripped of clothing, he said.

Dr. Kay said the injured included the driver of the bus, whose name was given as O. H. Looney, of Macon, who he doubted if the latter would survive.

RETAIL SALES TOP SIX-YEAR RECORDS

Sixth District Reports
Reveal 16.5 Per Cent
Increase Over 1935 Mark.

Reaching the highest level for February since 1930, department store sales in this district of the Federal Reserve system last month piled up a 16.5 per cent increase over February of last year and 16.1 per cent increase over the initial month of this year, according to the reserve bank's monthly financial review issued yesterday.

Atlanta's department store trade index figure for last month was 147.8, showing an increase over the 115.9 figure for January and well above the index number of 88.1 for the entire district.

Several hundred thousand dollars increase was noted in building and construction contracts for last month over February, 1935, with a material increase shown throughout the district.

Georgia led in cotton consumption with 99,674 bales, more than half the total of the district. General cotton consumption in the cotton states, however, showed a slight decrease from February of last year.

Leads in Insurance.
Georgia placed well in the lead also in life insurance sales, with a $5,250,000 business done during the month. A general decrease in insurance sales was declared elsewhere in the district as well as throughout the country.

Death of Addict Mute Testimony Of Life of Horror, Fear He Faced

George C. Ormond, burglar, dope peddler and addict, died the death of a slave, but the only death that trudge the sidewalks of Atlanta with miserable, shrieking nerves, shattered wills and wasted bodies.

BOYKIN AWARDED DAMAGES IN LIBEL

$1,000 Verdict Against McRae Is Affirmed by State Supreme Court.

The state supreme court yesterday upheld the $1,000 libel suit verdict awarded Solicitor-General John A. Boykin against William G. McRae, his opponent in the 1932 primary. The alleged libel grew out of charges heaped by McRae against the solicitor during the campaign in which Boykin was re-elected.

In its decision yesterday the supreme court reversed an earlier decision from the court of appeals in which the case was remanded for a second trial.

Tob high court upheld Judge Hugh M. Dorsey, of the old city court, which now has become a division of the Fulton superior court.

The heated campaign in which charges flew thick and fast McRae sued Boykin for $200,000 and Boykin came back with a cross suit for $500,000. The case was tried before a jury in Judge Dorsey's court and the jury awarded Boykin $1,000.

McRae carried the case to the higher courts, contending that despite his request Judge Dorsey had failed to give the jury a written charge. The court of appeals upheld this contention but the supreme court decided that although the trial judge erred in failing to give a written charge McRae had subsequently waived his demand for it.

It is generally expected that McRae will be a candidate for solicitor-general against Boykin in the September primary this year.

$25,000 College Fund Is Given by Roberts

FORSYTH, Ga., March 28.—Dr. A. M. Chamble, president of Besiege Tift College, today announced receipt of a donation of $25,000 to the college endowment fund from Columbus Roberts, of Columbus, president of the Georgia Milk Producers' Confederation, and prominent Columbus citizen.

The gift to Besiege Tift was made in honor of Mr. Roberts' wife, Mrs. Fannie Cobb Roberts.

Some years ago Mr. Roberts, a leading Baptist layman of Georgia, made a substantial gift to Mercer University.

"We are very happy to announce receipt of Mr. Roberts' fine gift," Dr. Chamble said. "For several years Mr. and Mrs. Roberts have been helping young ladies through our school, and so well were they satisfied with the results obtained that Mr. Roberts is making the gift."

Dr. Chamble said that the gift would be invested properly and the income from it used to aid the Bible school.

Wilentz Declares 'Bruno Still Guilty'

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., March 28.—(AP)—Attorney-General David F. Wilentz said today that Bruno Hauptmann "is as guilty today as he was the day he was convicted."

He declined to make public his position regarding another gubernatorial reprieve for the convicted murderer of the Lindbergh baby, saying Governor Harold G. Hoffman had indicated he would ask him his opinion and that he would "withhold it until that time."

"Hauptmann is as guilty today as he was the day he was convicted," Wilentz said in a formal statement. "Nothing has happened to change that. At that time, the New Jersey court of errors and appeals said: 'Our conclusion is that the verdict is not only not contrary to the weight of the evidence but is one to which the evidence inescapably led. And discarding the testimony of witnesses classified as irresponsible the result is the same. From three different angles the result is the same.'"

NAZIS TO APPROVE HITLER'S POLICIES

Election To Be Held, But No Opportunity Will Be Given To Vote "No."

BERLIN, March 28.—(AP)—The German nation will approve Reichsfuehrer Hitler's policies tomorrow. Germans will participate in one of the greatest civic mobilizations the world has ever seen, and they will vote an unconditional "Ja" of approval concerning their leader's actions of the last three years.

Not a German "Aryan"—man or woman—above the age of 20 years, except soldiers, will dodge the polling places if Hitler's Nazi storm troops can help it.

Unless the German voter wishes to be branded a traitor, he will be unable to do anything but, put a cross in the ballot's single circle.

Election Is Unique.
The election, nominally for the reichstag (parliament), is unique. There is no provision for voting "no" on Nazi policies and no provision for any choice of candidates.

The voter's sole option is to take the Nazi party's list or leave it. If the voter leaves the ballot blank or treats it any other manner except that of placing an "X" in the circle, his vote will be invalid.

Despite this fact, Hitler and his lieutenants have conducted a wide and intense election campaign. Hitler has spoken repeatedly, declaring that his policies have made Germany self-sustaining and that through these policies, Germany is regaining her position as an equal power among nations.

When Hitler withdrew Germany from the League of Nations in 1933

Judge Quoted as Saying a

Evidence Is Worthless.

TRENTON, N. J., March 28.—(AP)—A purported "confession" of the Lindbergh baby kidnapping by a former Trenton man was disclosed to have been used by Governor Harold G. Hoffman as a basis for calling the court of pardons Monday to hear Bruno Hauptmann's plea for clemency.

The Governor was reported to have mailed to all members of the pardons court copies of a statement made by the man to Ellis H. Parker, chief of Burlington county detectives, who has insisted that Hauptmann is innocent.

At the same time this became known, prosecution officials met in a hotel here to outline their plans to meet this new attack upon the case against Hauptmann.

The statement was said to have been unsigned and not in affidavit form but consisted of questions by Parker and answers by the man.

Wilentz, Anthony M. Hauck Jr., Hunterdon county prosecutor, and Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the state police, and Captain John J. Land, of the state police, met in the hotel session to consider a course of action.

A high prosecution source said that the man was in custody "somewhere in New Jersey."

State troopers were ordered to begin an intensive investigation into all angles of the man's story.

Could Grant Reprieve.
This development was given added significance by the fact that prosecution officials agreed the court of pardons itself could grant a reprieve to Hauptmann—something which it has never done in any other case.

The Governor said on Wednesday

Bags of Mail Sent To F. D. R. at Islands

MIAMI, Fla., March 28.—(AP)—Three mail pouches sent over the bright blue waters to America's vacationing President today forebode a full day of work for the sun-tanned Mr. Roosevelt.

Two navy seaplanes under command of Lieutenant P. D. Quinn took off from the coast guard station here this afternoon for Nassau, arriving safely this afternoon, and will meet the President tomorrow near Crooked Island.

The mail was an accumulation of several days, resulting from bad weather which forbade flying near Washington.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt and his aides had an opportunity today in the bright sunshine of the Bahama Islands to try for some more big game of the deep.

Do Political Spoils Belong to Winners?

Politicians have squabbled for many years over the question of civil service versus party patronage in the filling of government posts. Should jobs go to those who help elect the winning party, or to those who receive the highest marks in civil service examinations?

For the first time in recent history the wishes of the people have been consulted directly in a nation-wide poll conducted by the Institute of Public Opinion. The results of this election since Jan. 1, into "Ayes" and "Noes" in today's Constitution in page 4-K.

ADDITIONAL CROPPERS EVICTED BY PLANTERS

108 Tenant Farmers Living in Tents After Removal From Lands.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—(AP)—A report of an investigator sent out by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, asserted today there had been additional evictions of tenant farmers and sharecroppers in Arkansas by planters bent upon crushing the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union.

The report, made by W. J. Speed, representative of the mine workers, said 21 negro families, comprising 108 persons, had recently been evicted from a plantation in Cross county, Arkansas, and were living in tents supplied by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Speed said other families had been evicted, and were being fed and sheltered by other organizations.

The Cross county evictions, Speed said, had been investigated by Governor J. M. E. Frazier, of Arkansas, who "reported there was much ado about nothing."

"In no other section of America," said the report, "has there been so outrageously mistreated and oppressed than in certain areas of southern states."

When the tenants organized their union, Speed continued, "the landlords inaugurated a ruthless campaign of evictions and violence to workers and their families, and to the extent to which cost miners were forced to contend years ago in some mining fields of the country."

"Many sharecroppers and tenant farmers," the report continued, "were thrown out of work when vast areas of cotton-growing land were taken out of cultivation by the government. Bad as was their plight before this happened, the situation of these people became many times worse."

The report contained also a statement from E. L. Mitchell, president of the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, in which he said the landlords had refused to cooperate with "interested people such as Brooks Hays, assistant resettlement administrator in Washington, 'mediating' the intolerable situation now existing."

The statement said also there were "reports from reliable sources, union and non-union, to indicate that bands of outlaws are being formed to wipe out the union."

Newspaper Syndicate President
Announces Candidacy in Fall Primary.

James C. Wilson, president of Newspaper Features, Inc., announced today that he will be a candidate for the Georgia house of representatives in the democratic primary to be held this fall.

Wilson has been a newspaperman since he was a boy in his teens. He has worked on the editorial and advertising staffs of numerous newspapers of the United States and in the London advertising staff of the New York Times.

His newspaper experience has brought him in frequent contact with legislatures in numerous states and with the national congress.

Prior to organizing Newspaper Features, Inc., which is serving more than 100 Georgia newspapers, Wilson was business and industrial editor of the Atlanta Journal.

His newspaper career was interrupted by his service in the army during the World War. He is a leader in many civic and fraternal activities.

Struck down by a hit-and-run automobile as he crossed Stewart avenue to catch a bus, J. C. Duke, employee of a filling station at the intersection of Stewart and Stewart avenues, was admitted to Grady hospital shortly after 8 o'clock last night suffering from a fractured leg and severe lacerations.

Duke was hit by a car, said to have been driven by a white man, going to Stewart avenue toward Hapeville, police were told. He is a leader in many civic and fraternal activities.

VERA STRETZ TO FACE NEW ORDEAL IN COURT

Blonde Secretary To Be Questioned Sharply in Slaying of German Lover.

NEW YORK, March 28.—(AP)—Vera Stretz, the 32-year-old blond secretary who ended a year of illicit romance by firing four bullets into her former employer from a snub-nosed pistol, stood herself in a prison cell tonight against an ordeal of sharp questioning by state's attorneys.

Her composure has visibly been broken whenever the gentle questions of her attorney, Samuel Leibowitz, turned toward her relationship with the man she calmly admitted killing, Dr. Fritz Gebhardt, head of a German export-import firm.

But she regained some of her composure last night after she was returned to her cell in the women's detention house, the cell that has housed her since her arrest in the sky-raper apartment house where she shot Gebhardt last November 12.

Leibowitz declined to disclose to-night what other witnesses he would summon to support his client's implied contention she killed Gebhardt in ward off a "brutal assault."

Nor would state's attorneys disclose the testimony they might offer in rebuttal.

Cross-Examination.

Miss Stretz has before her at least another day on the stand under the state's questioning of her own attorney after Monday's preliminary hearing to a sharp cross-examination by the state.

Leibowitz developed one angle that appeared significant to courtroom listeners. He heard him draw from the heretofore impassive lawyer testimony that she had confessed to Gebhardt's case the pistol which the state says she used and at the sight of which she paled on the stand when Leibowitz produced it.

A murmuring courtroom, sprinkled with notables, hung on her words this week as she chockingly told some of the story of her clandestine relationship with the middle-aged husband and father she is charged with murdering.

The epilogue to her idyl that became a tragedy is to be told in her own words Monday under the direct examination of her counsel, Samuel S. Leibowitz, who intimated that more of the ardent love letters that passed between the sweethearts would be read into the record.

The sallow-cheeked defendant, between recurrent fits of loud sobbing, during her first day on the witness stand blurted out some of the details of her affair with Gebhardt before jurors who remained as impassive as spectators were audibly sympathetic.

She met Dr. Gebhardt first on a tropical cruise, she said, weeping every time she mentioned his name. He was "gallant." He pled her with attentions and gifts when she returned to New York, persuaded her to become his secretary at $10 a week, wooed her ardently in his native German and broken English, she continued.

She had been married 12 years ago, but it was annulled, she went on, and she was getting "a great deal of camouflage." His courtship and pleas "to build things together" finally won her, Miss Stretz whispered, and she accompanied him to a little country inn where they had journeyed to view "the lovely country side" during the spring of 1935.

Gebhardt was silent, vivacious, exuberant, she related.

They exchanged letters filled with endearing terms, with expressions of "a great love." Some of the letters were read. Miss Stretz objected to the official translation of several, attempted to read them herself to the jury.

But her voice broke. After two attempts she returned the letters to her attorney, who continued reading them.

She loved Gebhardt, she said, "very, very dearly."

But to Leibowitz's blunt, direct questioning, she replied flatly she killed Gebhardt, and she identified the stubby pistol with which she pumped four bullets into his body in his expensive apartment to which she had a duplicate key.

Clad only in an old-fashioned night shirt, the body of Dr. Gebhardt was shown to the jury.

GOVERNOR REMOVES STATE ENTOMOLOGIST

J. H. Girardeau, of McRae, for 10 years chief inspector in the department of entomology, as young Yeomans' successor. In the term of the entomologist, who himself was appointed by Talmadge as commissioner of agriculture in 1928, expired January 1 and he was serving without reappointment as was R. E. Matheson who was displaced as a member of the revenue commission last week when he refused to follow Talmadge in what he believed to be a violation of a court injunction against him.

The Governor did not inform young Yeomans of his dismissal. He swore Girardeau into office and sent him to the department of entomology with his executive secretary, Carlton Mobley.

Mobley, a close friend of Manning Yeomans, informed the entomologist of the change and asked him if he wanted to say anything.

"Just tell the Governor that I am the son of my father," young Yeomans said. "Just tell him that for me."

Like other officials who have been awaiting the appointment of their successors, Yeomans was packed and ready to go. He conferred a few minutes with Girardeau about the affairs of the department, and then he was gone out of the capital, the fifteenth state official to lose his post during the regime of Talmadge.

Believed Violation.
The former entomologist in public life said he felt that he would be violating his oath to uphold the constitution if he accepted the position in 1936 funds.

The letter follows:
The office of state entomologist has been operated since January 1, 1936, on 1935 funds which were legally appropriated for that year. I have been able to pay all salaries through March 15 of this year except the salary due one other employee and myself. We did not have sufficient 1936 funds to pay those salaries. My salary, $3,000 a year, which is the lowest salary paid the official in charge of any department, is being paid out of the 1935 funds. I do not feel that I should draw my salary and not pay the other employees.

I now have only $22 of 1936 funds legally appropriated for the maintenance of the department. I have been legally advised that under the constitution and laws of this state which I swore to uphold that the oath I took at the time that I was sworn in as state entomologist, no money could be paid out of the state treasury except through continuing appropriation and under a specific appropriation and under the general assembly and approved by the Governor.

Attorney General Homes.
Attorney General Homes has been in south Georgia recuperating from an illness, returned to his home on Adams street, Decatur, Friday. His son makes a statement with him and it is understood that the letter of the letter to the Governor was taken up when Judge Yeomans returned. He yesterday advised the attorney general said he had nothing to say except that he hoped to be back in his office in a few days.

Reports about the capital Judge Yeomans, acting under authority vested in him in the reorganization act of 1931 which gave him the right to go into court in an attempt to end Governor Talmadge's dictatorship of state funds for these reports so far as to say that he will represent George B. Hamilton, the suspended state treasurer and William B. Harrison, the suspended controller general in their effort to regain their offices from de facto officials, J. B. Daniel and G. B. Carreker, who were appointed by the Governor.

The Yeomans replacement was the only major development of the day, the Governor announcing it as he displayed a number of telegrams of letters which he said he had received in praise of his speech over the radio Friday night.

Displays Cash.
The Governor also displayed several hundred dollars in small bills which he said he had received to help pay the expenses of his trip to the state capital. "I am going back on the air next Friday night following," he said. "The people of Georgia are going to hear it. They already have contributed enough for the broadcasts."

He said his speeches would begin at 7:15 o'clock. They will continue for 30 minutes.

Meanwhile Talmadge's legal aids prepared their defense of Daniel, Carreker and Hamilton. Commissioner Paul H. Doyal who must appear before Judge Claude Porter, of Rome, Saturday to answer charges of contempt of court growing out of his withdrawal of gasoline taxes from Atlanta banks.

While in Rome the de facto officials and Doyal also will answer a suit seeking to restrain them from transmitting gasoline taxes to the treasury.

Another litigation growing out of the Talmadge dictatorship is before Judge Lee B. Wyatt, of LaGrange, who has under advisement a petition of officers of the Georgia Federation of Labor to enjoin Daniel from functioning as treasurer. A decision from Judge Wyatt is expected shortly.

The supreme court on April 20 will hear arguments on a suit appealed from the Fulton superior court in which the lower court held that the courts have the right to inquire into the setup at the capital. Contending that the matter is no one for judicial inquiry the Governor has taken the case to the supreme court on appeal.

OKLAHOMA GOVERNOR CALLS OUT TROOPS

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 28.—(UP)—Besieged by federal process server, Governor E. W. Marland hastily called out several national guardsmen and defied the federal court's attempt to serve him with a subpoena.

Marland was said to suspect a ruse to enjoin him from declaring martial law over state property, and threatened, in an oil drilling controversy with city officials.

Direct Payment to All Counties Of U. S. Highway Funds Favored

ATHENS, Ga., March 28.—Declaring that local funds are not sufficient to give their rural residents adequate farm-to-market roads, 57 Georgia counties were on record today as emphatically favoring allocation of more than $13,000,000 impounded federal highway funds direct to the counties.

Most of the counties have already repudiated the Georgia Association of County Commissioners, under whose auspices a state-wide poll of commissioners is being conducted, which called that 62 counties have already repudiated the association's plan.

The large percentage of counties that have voted in favor of direct allotment of impounded federal funds indicates, Mr. Wright said, "that when the poll is completed nearly 100 per cent of Georgia's 150 counties will be revealed as being strongly in favor of getting highway funds under way in Georgia with federal funds that are being held up due to the uncertain financial status of the state government."

Mr. Wright said the counties that have already voted in the poll, Mr. Wright said, are in rural sections of the state and most of them report that funds are able to raise locally and are sufficient to provide their rural residents with adequate secondary, or farm-to-market roads.

CONFESSOR OF THE LINDBERGH CASE

he had faith Attorney-General Willets would consent to a judicial stay of execution in the event of a "confession" of such a nature as would make it necessary to continue a man's life to prove the statements.

The statement sent to members of the pardons court was dated February 23, and Hoffman may have had this in mind when he spoke.

The man involved in the new investigation was once under observation in a mental institution and served a term for perjury.

What Confessed.
He was quoted in the statement as having said he constructed the kidnap ladder, but found it was too short and used a rear stairway to enter the Lindbergh nursery at Hopewell.

Continuing, the statement said he took the child from the crib, leaving the ransom note, and returned to the nursery in the automobile.

He was quoted as saying he kept the child at his house for three days, but the baby fell out of bed, fracturing the skull. He said that the body of the child, the Lindbergh baby's body was found, and that no attempt was made to collect ransom.

Parker was quoted tonight by the Trenton Times-Advertiser as saying "I won't confirm or deny anything." He previously had denied any knowledge of the statement or of a new arrest in the case.

It was reported that the man went to Parker and submitted to questioning voluntarily.

Previous governors, and Governor Hoffman, as well, have interpreted the 90-day period to date from the day of the conviction, which in the case of the United States supreme court review was December 13, 1935.

Not only were state police at work on this latest development, but the Governor's private investigators were continuing their check-up on the man's story.

The author of the statement was said to be in custody of Gus Lockwood, state motor vehicle inspector, and was being held at the state prison, near Mt. Holly, where Parker lives.

The opinion of the prosecution that the man would not talk for a long time was shared by a member of the state's highest tribunal.

BRUNO'S CHANCES
REPORTED 100 TO 1

TRENTON, N. J., March 28.—(AP)—The life of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, thrice offered for execution, was still under review tonight by the Governor's pardon board.

Governor Harold G. Hoffman, informed that the man had been further executive interference, said he had no intention of granting a second reprieve. He was silent, however, as to what he might do in the event of a confession of such a nature as would make it necessary to continue a man's life to prove the statements.

Willets' Position.
Attorney-General David T. Willets, stating that Hauptmann is "as guilty today as he was the day he was convicted," has reiterated that there is no power in the Governor's reach that will further delay in the execution, set for Tuesday night.

Willets did not make public his position on another reprieve. He said he would continue to wait for a confession from the man, and that he would "withhold it until that time."

Willets said nothing has happened in the case of the man, and that he would "withhold it until that time."

By PHIL NEWSON.
(Copyright 1936 by United Press.)
CHICAGO, March 28.—(UP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann is entitled to another trial, Clarence Darrow said tonight.

The brilliant criminal attorney, in virtual retirement after a life spent battling for the underdog, charged that the German carpenter's first conviction was a "farce," and said that Hauptmann "never yet has had a trial in the true sense of American jurisprudence."

Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the murdered baby for whose death Hauptmann was hanged, was himself partly responsible for the "travesty" which led to the condemned man's conviction, Darrow contended.

"Lindbergh, a public hero, sat day after day in the full gaze of the jury," he said, "and while it is natural that he should want to attend a trial which concerned him so intimately, it doubtless was not in the best interests of justice."

Admiral Hoffman.
He said he had nothing but admiration for Governor Harold G. Hoffman, who already has granted the German alien one reprieve.

Darrow confessed he was not familiar with New Jersey law but he believed that the Governor "has the moral right to grant a second reprieve."

A study of court records and other evidence, he said, had convinced him that "persons seeking publicity for themselves had ruined Hauptmann's first chance of a fair trial."

"Jurors thought more of their own place in the public limelight than they did of a man's life. The testimony of the chief witness, 'Jafie' Condon, is open to serious question."

"And it is even doubtful if other principals in the case thought as much of the fact that a man's life was in the balance as they did of their own personal glory."

Ladder Too Short.
Bar associations both in England and America criticized the trial because it was "fair and judicial," he pointed out.

Darrow pointed particularly at the prosecution's contention that a ladder several feet short of the window from which the baby allegedly was removed was used in the kidnapping.

"The ladder was at least three feet short of the window, testimony has shown," he said, "and the trip would have been particularly difficult for one man to negotiate."

He called attention to the fact that a mug or stool near the center of the window sill in the baby's room was undisturbed and that there were no fingerprints on the ladder, the window sill or the stool.

"Not a piece of furniture, not a rug, not a chair was displaced," he said.

"Whoever removed the baby did it so quietly and so expertly that not a person in the house was disturbed. It seems difficult to believe that a person with knowledge of the house could have removed the baby so quietly and with such ease."

He questioned Condon's statement that while he dangled $50,000 in his hand the kidnaper came from behind a dark hedge and talked to him on a street bench.

He declared it "absurd" to believe that a kidnaper, desperate and sought by the law, would take Condon's word that he would not be seized and killed.

WE DRINK OUR BLOOD, SCIENTIST DISCOVERS

WASHINGTON, March 28.—(UP)—When persons can't get water to drink, their bodies take it out of their blood, Dr. Manns I. Gregersen, of the University of Maryland Medical school, told the Federation of American Societies of Experimental Biology today.

The Baltimore experimenter told how two volunteers went thirsty for three days, not taking a drop of water, and that he could study resulting changes in their blood. He found they actually were "drinking their own blood" in that the plasma of liquid part was greatly decreased.

Dr. Gregersen found that there was a connection between thirst and the amount of plasma in the blood. Apparently, he discovered, it serves as an automatic self-regulating mechanism to control the amount of water which human beings drink. As the system's water supply is lowered, there is a lowering of the plasma volume. Automatically this reaction causes a decrease in the secretion of saliva flowing into the mouth and this in turn causes thirstiness.

When the two volunteers failed to satisfy their thirst by drinking water during the three-day experiment, their bodies tried to make up for the deficiency in the best way possible, taking out the plasma from the blood.

At the end of the experimental forbearance from water, the pair drank more than a quart of water. Dr. Gregersen reported that the plasma of the blood was lowered, there is a lowering of the plasma volume. Automatically this reaction causes a decrease in the secretion of saliva flowing into the mouth and this in turn causes thirstiness.

SOUTHEAST URGED TO DEVELOP PARKS

Georgia, of All States, Should Protect Natural Beauties, Says Expert.

Unusual opportunities for the development of state parks and recreation areas are within the immediate grasp of the southeast if the region will utilize its natural advantages. This was the view expressed yesterday by J. B. Williams, collaborator with the National Park Service, as he paused in Atlanta on route to Birmingham to attend a conference of park and conservation executives. He has come from Washington to participate in the regional meeting of the national conference on state parks, which will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Fort McLean, Ala.

"The south was slow in realizing the potential values of her natural resources," said Mr. Williams, "but a new interest has been stimulated in Georgia, as well as in surrounding states. It appears probable that the region ultimately will excel in the development of its scenic gifts, provided there is co-ordinated planning and long-range preparation."

"Georgia, of all states, should guard against neglecting her unusual natural endowments."

COMMITTEE TO PICK AVIATION AWARDS

Professor Montgomery Knight, head of the Guggenheim Aeronautical school at Georgia Tech, left yesterday for Chicago, where he will join several other members of the committee named to select winners of the awards offered by the Boeing School of Aviation.

The members of the committee will proceed to Oakland, Cal., where the awards will be made. Knight will visit the aeronautical center at Los Angeles and also the Guggenheim schools at Stanford University and California Tech. He will return to Atlanta next week.

These Men Making Atlanta Cabs Safest in U. S.

Shooting at the challenge they have issued themselves, these Atlanta taxicab operators, members of the Taxicab Drivers' Safety Council, have set out to make Atlanta the city of the nation's safest taxi drivers. Members of the council shown above at a call meeting Friday are, seated left to right, J. D. Bryant, J. W. Fuller, president of the council, and H. F. Everett. Standing, Brack Warr, R. J. Thompson, H. A. Kerr, J. H. Williams and J. W. Halston, acting secretary. Other members of the safety council include L. A. Ludl, secretary; A. C. Baker and T. T. Collins. Staff photo by George Cornett.

Atlanta as Safest Taxicab City Is Goal of Drivers' Own Council

Enforcement by "Court" of Stringent "Laws" Has Resulted in Substantial Reduction of Accident Rates; National Organization Is Predicted.

Police department and city council having failed to solve Atlanta's traffic problem, an organization of taxi drivers has tackled the subject with better prospect of success than from any effort that has yet been made.

The movement is initiated through the Black & White Drivers' Safety Council and it contemplates the inclusion of the drivers of every commercial fleet in the city. Assurance of co-operation has already been received from leading commercial houses.

The organization thus extended expects through intensive effort to bring about new traffic regulations for the city and to put an end to the tragic toll of life which makes Atlanta one of the leaders of traffic deaths throughout the country.

These taxi drivers are tremendously in earnest and they have started about their work in a businesslike way.

Other cities through similar organizations of their taxi drivers have accomplished wonderful results. Results are what count, in the opinion of taxi drivers in this city. And the Atlanta council drivers have gone after results and obtained them, to the extent of reducing accidents during some months of last year by as much as 43.2 per cent.

Secure in Court.

"And that is not all," declared J. W. Fuller, driver-president of the safety council. "There was a time, not so long ago, when taxi drivers were paying more money in police traffic court fines than they were giving to the sick drivers' fund. But you can take Judge John L. Cone's word for it that a taxi driver practically never appears in court now and when one does it is usually the other fellow's fault. We are just driving carefully. That's all."

With the work of "house-cleaning" under way within their own organization, the taxi drivers are now studying the best means of spreading safe driving practices among other fleet drivers of the city as their first "expansion" endeavor.

Luncheons are held by the council every other week, with invited guests, including representatives of other firms employing a large group of drivers, as well as a number of taxi drivers who are not members of the executive council. In this way the parties most affected by driving practices are made familiar with the actual work of the taxi drivers' safety council.

The "dirty work," as Mr. Fuller terms it, is done on alternate weeks with a council traffic court. Drivers who have been given a copy of charges by fellow workers in violation of city or company driving rules are haled before the court for trial, the president of the council acting as judge, the driver who wrote the "copy" acting as prosecutor and the remainder of the council serving as a jury.

Convictions bring a range of penalties from reprimands to temporary suspension or a fine, which goes into the sick drivers' fund.

The same plan, in the opinion of the taxi drivers' council, can be worked out with success by drivers of other companies employing fleet vehicles with the result that traffic deaths and injuries in Atlanta will be greatly reduced.

"The biggest trouble we had at first," declared Mr. Fuller, "was in making the other drivers understand that the council was not a bunch of men trying to carry complaints against other taxi drivers to the company officials. When the first few copies of charges were given careless drivers, they raised a big howl. But it didn't take them long to realize that the safety council is their own organization, that the trials are carried on by the drivers themselves, without any company jurisdiction and that the results of the trials are the drivers' own affairs, without the necessity of notifying company officials."

"And after we saved a few men their jobs it didn't take us long to get a 100 per cent co-operation from the other drivers."

A. G. Henley, company advisor of the council, related an example of the council's work in saving a driver's job. The driver, he explained, had been fired because of habitual recklessness. The man applied to the company for reinstatement and was told his only recourse lay in the drivers' safety council. He appeared before the council and was given a thorough "going over" for his past record. By the time the members of the council got through with him he knew more about careful driving and was more impressed by the necessity of safety than any 10 average automobile drivers.

After that, the council recommended that he be reinstated. He was, and has since become one of the company's safest drivers.

Drivers' Decision Final.

"In such cases, the company abides by the decision of the drivers themselves, as members of the safety council," Mr. Henley declared. "And the secret of the success of the safety council lies in the fact that it is the drivers' own organization, from the initial idea to every detail of administration."

"Mr. Fuller is a good example of the way the taxi drivers mean business. He has four days off each month and he spends on an average of two and a half of these days here in the garage, checking brakes on every car recommending adjustment or relining when needed, so that no accident will occur because of bad brakes."

ACHIEVEMENT AWARDS WILL BE PRESENTED

CITY MANAGER DRIVE WILL BE REOPENED

Belief Grows Councilman
White Will Make Plan
Issue in Primary.

A demand that voters of Atlanta be allowed to decide whether they want to substitute a council-city manager government for the present set-up will be renewed in city council April 6, Councilman John A. White, author of the proposal, announced yesterday.

White warned those who oppose the referendum, which he proposes shall take place in the September primary, that the people will remember them when they ask re-nominations. That announcement was construed to mean that White will attempt to make the local governmental change one of the major issues in the forthcoming primary.

The plan provides for a mayor, who would be a figure head, 12 councilmen and six aldermen, the same number who will hold office after January, 1937, and the city manager, who will be the administrative officer.

There would be five subdepartment heads in charge as follows: Director of public safety, director of finance, director of public works, director of health and recreation and director of municipal industries.

White pointed out that four successive grand juries and 13 leading civic organizations of Atlanta have recommended that the referendum be held. He contended that Atlanta will lose $4,000,000 at the end of this year.

He is vice chairman of the finance committee. The only solution of the perplexing fiscal status of the municipality is through a revolutionary change in the operations of the city, he contends.

BANK GIVEN AWARD IN COURT'S VERDICT

The Georgia court of appeals held yesterday that a suit to recover usury and forfeited interest must distinctly allege the amount of usury paid and the date of payment together with the amount of legal interest claimed to have been forfeited and recovery cannot extend beyond one year.

The court of appeals in this ruling affirmed the city court of Moultrie which held that D. J. Baker must pay the Moultrie Banking Company $5,344.87 and that he is entitled to $1,807.06 as a penalty for usury.

The amount due the bank is the net sum after the $1,807 credit.

Included in the list of subscribers to the police burglar alarm system is the state treasurer's office, which has been recently wired to the police system.

CHATTANOOGA IS HIT AS TENNESSEE RISES

125 Residences Deserted
Close Down.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 28.—(AP)—The flooded Tennessee river, still rising steadily, poured far into the low-lying sections of Chattanooga tonight, washing about the foundations of more than 125 deserted homes and spilling destructively into the basements of numerous industrial plants.

The city department of streets and sewers, operating day and night, reported 65 families had been moved from the stricken area and estimated as many more had left without assistance. Others were still to go.

Two factories were forced to close, throwing approximately 600 men out of work. In other plants workmen were engaged in hastily moving machinery and expensive equipment beyond reach of the advancing flood.

Emergency Quarters Set Up.
Emergency quarters were set up for refugee families in city schools. Soup kitchens were organized in nearby fire halls. Health officers planned extraordinary precautions to prevent any outbreak of disease.

In Nashville Adjutant General J. H. Bellow said the national guard is available for duty in flood areas "in the event their services may become necessary." No requests for the guardsmen had been reported, however.

From here the river below the city of the river bore down upon north Alabama. At Bridgeport late today it had passed 22.9 feet, 4.9 feet above flood stage. It had gone 3.3 feet above Gunterville's 25-foot flood level.

Weather bureau officials reported they could not say what the exact crest for the Alabama towns will be, but expressed the belief it will exceed flood stages by at least five feet.

River Still Rising.
The river is still rising slowly upstream as far as Knoxville, the weather bureau said. The tributary rivers above Knoxville, however, were expected to begin falling tomorrow, draining lowlands that have been inundated for several days.

The Tennessee hit a 35-foot level, five above flood stage, here this afternoon and may go as high as 37 feet tomorrow morning when, it is expected, the crest will be reached. The flood is the worst since 1932.

Possibly more than 200 families have been driven from their homes by the flood. At Knoxville 25 had to evacuate "shantytown" shacks. Others fled from the bottom lands at Lenoir City and Loudon, where ferries stopped running. Many highways were flooded.

Two main thoroughfares, Rossville boulevard and Hooker road, were under water here. Scores of streets were inundated.

The factories forced to close were those of the O. B. Andrews Paper Box Company and one plant of the Tennessee Furniture Corporation. Further rises will bring additional shutdowns.

OHIO RIVER RISES
BELOW CINCINNATI
CINCINNATI, March 28.—(AP)—The Ohio river, receding from above flood stage levels in the upper valley, pushed to higher stages below Cincinnati tonight and inundated additional thousands of acres of lowland sections in Kentucky and Indiana.

Serious flood conditions threatened in western Kentucky where the Kentucky river and other lower valley tributaries burst their banks.

Louisville feared a major flood should additional rains add to the water that kept the river at or above flood stage throughout its 981-mile length from Pittsburgh to Cairo.

Meteorologist W. C. Devereaux said only light and scattered showers with colder weather, were in prospect and that the rain would not affect the river.

The river stood stationary slightly above 60 feet here after reaching a crest of 60.6, and was similarly eight feet above flood stage as far as Evansville, Ind.

It fell virtually all the way from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati.

"Can't You Keep Away From Those Stills?"

Judge Ed S. Griffith was reappointed yesterday for another four-year term as United States commissioner at Atlanta. Judge Griffith has held the job for 12 years and knows every nook and cranny of the Atlanta area. Here he is shown as the federal law enforcer in the old postoffice building. Staff photo by Turner Hiers.

Commissioner Griffith Renamed To His Post for Fourth Term Here

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

He's a hard man to shave, of Judge Griffith—and this is not a message to barbers.

Neither is it news to the north Georgia moonshiners—all of them know it. They have met the judge. They know that he's hard to fool—but all of them like him.

Everybody likes Judge Griffith, which is saying a lot for a rock-ribbed, unwavering prohibitionist.

And everybody knows there is no use of arguing with Judge Griffith about the liquor question.

He'll tell you:
"I don't believe that liquor is the cause of all crimes—I know it."

Knows Both Sides.
Judge Griffith knows both sides of the liquor question. He has defended bootleggers in Georgia courts and he has sentenced them to Georgia jails.

He has fought for them like a wildcat when they hired him to defend them and he has fought against them like wildcats when he has been paid to condemn them.

But, no matter which side of the law Judge Griffith is tussling with, he's against liquor. He has saved drunken criminals from jail sentences and then has handed them a tongue-lashing that has made them wish they had gone to jail instead.

That's Judge Ed S. Griffith, farm hand, blacksmith, school teacher, horse car driver, furniture store clerk, lawyer, mayor of Buchanan, Ga., and United States commissioner today in Atlanta.

Never a Mistake.
Yesterday, they swore Judge Griffith for another four-year term. He was reappointed by United States Judge E. Marvin Underwood. He will be 74 years old next October 6, but the judge has lived a clean life and a sane life and there's no telling how long he will be in there. He has been in there eight years already and no one has ever traced a mistake to him.

The judge knows criminals and he knows the law. He knows how to make unwilling prisoners talk. He never gets mad. He takes everyone in his usual stride. A prisoner might try to lie to the judge, but he will change his mind when the judge squints sideways over his spectacles.

It's very seldom that you'll hear the judge resort to:
"Oh, you know that ain't so!"

Then the truth comes pouring off an unwilling tongue.

Every criminal picked up by federal officers in the Atlanta territory is brought before the judge for a hearing. The judge hears the story and fixes the amount of bond until the grand jury can act.

Parade of Criminals.
Bootleggers, automobile thieves, postoffice burglars, white slaves, swindlers parade through his office day after day and the judge sits there pecking at his typewriter getting their stories into the record so the grand jury and the investigating officers will know how it all happened. And not a man has ever passed out of the commissioner's office swearing at the judge. There's a record that very few judges can duplicate.

Judge Griffith is self-educated. He was born on a farm in Paulding county, two miles from Draketown, back in 1862 when Draketown was not the thriving place it is today. He had no schooling during his childhood. He worked on the farm. When he was 15, his father handed him a sledgehammer and put him to work in their blacksmith shop.

"I never was cut out for hard work," said the judge, but everybody knows that his only idea of hard work is wielding a sledgehammer. "The view was limited in that blacksmith shop. I got to see nothing but the rear end of horses. That's tiresome, any way you look at it."

When he was 20, his father sent him to school for seven months. Then he cut loose on his own hook and clerked in a Draketown furniture shop. Then he went to school for a year or so at Buchanan and after that he taught school.

Moved to Birmingham.
In 1890, he moved to the thriving metropolis of Birmingham, where he was soon driving a mule car on Twentieth street. His favorite mule was Scaly.

"I guess old Scaly was the most loyal and devoted friend I ever had," said the judge yesterday. "When the car jumped the track, old Scaly would just cut around and put it back on the track without either of us waking up."

Two years of this and the judge decided that the rear end of a mule was as dull an outlook as the rear end of a horse. He went back to Buchanan, where he studied law under Judge Price Edwards and passed the bar examinations.

He has practiced law ever since. Two or three times, the instance him to become mayor of Buchanan. He served in that job for a total of 13 years.

Empty Treasury.
"There never seemed to be enough money in the city treasury to pay me off," the judge recalls. "It was an expensive job."

Judge Samuel H. Sibley appointed Judge Griffith as United States commissioner in Atlanta in 1923 and he has been here ever since.

The judge's lucky number is three. "My wife and I were married on the 13th day of the third month in 1886. We had three daughters and three sons, three daughters-in-law, and three grandsons and three granddaughters. Mrs. Griffith had three brothers and three sisters and 33 nieces and nephews."

Mrs. Griffith died in 1935 and the judge lives alone at a downtown hotel. He spends his week-ends visiting his children.

CONFERENCE PLANNED ON RHINE SITUATION

Four Powers To Plan Joint Action in Event of German Aggression.

LONDON, March 28.—(AP)—Authoritative sources indicated tonight that the general staffs of the armies of France, Belgium, Great Britain, and Italy will soon confer over plans for joint military action in the event of German aggression against France or Belgium.

This information, it was understood, was conveyed to Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Reichsfuehrer Hitler's special ambassador, before he returned to Germany yesterday from London.

The conference of the general staffs was called for by the four nations following Hitler's action in militarizing the Rhine in violation of the Locarno and Versailles treaties, to work out joint methods for defense against attacks.

Dispatches from Paris told of varied preparations by the French government against any eventualities. The air ministry, for example, ordered a wide region of France's eastern border closed to all aircraft except military planes on official trips.

Although General Louis Felix Mautier, French minister of war, announced that no "further reinforcements" were necessary on the French frontier, "militia" units were being recruited for territorial defense along the border.

SOIL PLAN DECLARED UNSUITED TO TOBACCO

Bill Governing Production
To Reach House This Week.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—(AP)—The new soil conservation act was described as "inadequate to meet the situation which tobacco growers now face" in a report filed with the house today on proposed federal legislation authorizing state contracts to regulate leaf production.

Failure of the new agricultural program to solve the tobacco problem, the report said, "lies in the peculiar character of tobacco." Payments proposed to tobacco farmers for diverting lands from production of tobacco were said not to "adequately compensate a grower for planting tobacco lands to soil-conserving and soil-building crops."

The report, prepared by Representative Harold D. Cooley, of North Carolina, was authorized by the house agriculture committee which yesterday approved the proposed tobacco compact legislation. The bill, by Representative John H. Kerr, also of North Carolina, is expected to reach the house floor next week.

Under the proposed act, states growing fine-cured, burley and dark fire-cured tobacco would be authorized to enter into compact to regulate production of those types of leaf. Each state could enact virtually similar regulatory control laws.

States growing these types of tobacco are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee and Kentucky. Virginia already has passed state control legislation which would regulate production of tobacco of similar laws by the other states.

Cooley, in his report, warned that unless some form of control is approved to supplement the soil conservation act "there will be excessive production of tobacco and a corresponding trend downward from the prices which growers received for their 1935 crops."

The committee's action in approving the Kerr bill was unanimous.

Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra Values Instruments at $250,000

Rare Group Includes $35,000
Guarnerius Violin and Fine Stradivarius.

The Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under the magnetic hands of Leopold Stokowski, appearing in Atlanta on Monday night, April 20, will display a wealth of instruments valued at about $250,000.

Nor are these instruments notable for price alone—they rival in rarity some of the finest instruments in the world, and collectively are one of the most amazingly valuable groups in the orchestral world today. It is extremely doubtful if this collection can be equaled or duplicated by any other orchestra anywhere.

The string section, consisting of 18 first violins, 15 second violins, 12 violas, 11 cellos and 10 double basses, has been roughly estimated as costing from $80,000 to $100,000 and additions are being made all the time.

Has $35,000 Violin.
For example, Alexander Hilsberg, one of the "firsts," recently acquired a $35,000 Guarnerius violin, dating back to 1735.

The famous Strad family is represented in the first violin section by a noted instrument made by Francesco Stradivarius in 1720 and owned by Henry Schmidt.

Samuel Lifschey, of the viola section, has a noted Gaspard de Salo, dated 1614. William Schmidt, cellist, plays a Nicholas Lupot cello, an instrument dating back 175 years and made by the Stradivarius of the 'cello.

Among the basses, the Terebelli, Anton and Carl, his son, are avid collectors of rare instruments. Anton uses a Giuseppe dell'Ogli bass made in Mantua in 1723, and Carl, a Venetian instrument fashioned in 1670.

Gathering Around World.
Another inveterate collector of instruments is William Kincaid, flutist of the orchestra. Among his collection are instruments from China, Japan and Hawaii. He takes no chances however, when playing with the Philadelphia orchestra, but uses a priceless instrument now 70 years old and made by Louis Lot, of Paris.

Keenly interested in instruments as they are, the members of the orchestra, follow developments in the field with great attention. It is their belief that America is not only becoming the music center of the world, but that it is achieving pre-eminence also in the manufacture of instruments for the symphony orchestra.

A striking example of this is cited by Paul Lotz, trombonist, and personal manager of the orchestra. "Until a quarter of a century ago," he says, "Germany held first rank in the manufacture of trombones, but today American manufacturers give precedence to no one."

There are 130 instrumentalists in the Philadelphia orchestra. They are making the coast-to-coast tour in a special de luxe 10-car train, with all the comforts of home—a circulating library of fiction and biography, a special shower-car, a bar and recreation room, menus to suit all tastes and even a dog as mascot.

The Atlanta concert is sponsored by the Atlanta Philharmonic Society and the Atlanta Music Club. Advance reservations may be made through Marvin McDonald, manager, 35 Peachtree circle, N. E. Telephone Hemlock 2235.

in Miami.

OCALA, Fla., March 28.—(AP)—An address by Sidney Paige, senior geologist of the United States engineers' office at Camp Roosevelt, on the effect of the Florida cross-lake canal on Florida ground water, will feature the 10th annual convention of the Florida section, American Waterworks Association, which opens in Tampa Tuesday for a three-day session.

Herman Ganster, state geologist, and Malcolm Pirnie, consulting engineer, of New York, will lead the discussion.

Paige and Pirnie, together with Clarence E. Boesch, head engineer; Frank C. Carey, principal engineer; and E. B. Burwell, geologist, composed the special board appointed by Colonel Brehon Somervell, chief in charge of construction on the Florida ship canal, to make an analysis of the probable effects of construction of the canal on the underground water resources of Florida.

JEFFERSON DAY HONOR SUGGESTED BY ALLEN

Allen Asks Georgia Democrats To Honor Leaders on April 13.

Marion H. Allen, President Roosevelt's Georgia campaign manager, yesterday called upon the democracy of Georgia to join members of the party over the nation in celebrating jointly the birthday anniversary of Thomas Jefferson and Roosevelt Democracy Day on April 13.

In a statement issued from his headquarters in the Henry Grady hotel here, Campaign Manager Allen pointed out that Jefferson was the founder of the party and the President is its leader today. He said in making state-wide commemoration of the events he was following a suggestion from James A. Farley, the chairman of the democratic national committee.

Text of Statement.
"As manager of President Roosevelt's campaign in Georgia, I wish to call attention to the fact that Monday, April 13, is the birthday of Thomas Jefferson, author of the American Declaration of Independence, founder of the democratic party, and twice president of the United States. On this date, therefore, the friends of Jefferson and the friends of Roosevelt should join in a commemorative celebration of the birth of the father of our party by providing for a Roosevelt Democracy Day."

"I respectfully suggest that the friends of Mr. Roosevelt and the various clubs throughout Georgia celebrate this auspicious occasion by sponsoring get-together meetings to pay honor to the memory of Thomas Jefferson, and at the same time listen to the radio address of our present democratic leader, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Campaign Manager Allen in another statement issued yesterday reiterated that Georgia will have a Roosevelt pledged delegation at the democratic national convention at Philadelphia in June. He asserted that any "underhand efforts" on the part of leaders of the opposition to do anything to take the delegation from the state would meet with "righteous condemnation and indignation," he added that Georgia then would select delegates who will properly represent the state at the convention.

Second Statement.
This statement follows:
"While the chairman of the state democratic executive committee for several months procrastinated and side-stepped my demand for a call of the state executive committee for the purpose of providing a presidential preference primary, the democrats of Georgia have answered the demand, either through the medium of the ballot, or by letter, or by personal visit. Moreover, the newspapers all over Georgia, both daily and weekly, have insisted, editorially, upon the rights of Georgia democrats to express themselves in a primary."

"Within the last week, the city executive committee of Waycross, as well as the county executive committees of Ware county, of Clarke county, of Tift county, and of Chatham county, have passed the adopted resolutions calling upon the state executive committee for a preference primary. The number will continue to increase. "In addition to this, at the regular county primary held last Wednesday, the voters of Tift county registered an overwhelming approval of and desire for a statewide primary. The vote was 1,055 for and 314 against, a majority of approximately three to one."

Forced To Issue Call.
"Thus confronted with these demands from all sides and from all sections of the state, and from all walks of life, Chairman Howell was finally forced to issue a call for a meeting of the state executive committee, which meeting is scheduled to be held on April 15—a date three months later than that on which the state executive committee has been called in the past for the purpose of fixing a date for a preference primary."

"The democrats of Georgia are on the alert and are patiently but vigilantly awaiting the action of the state committee. It is unbelievable that the members of the state committee will ignore the overwhelming evidences of the desire of the people that a presidential preference primary be held. "At any rate, the sentiment of the state is so unmistakable that any underhand efforts on the part of several political bigwigs to deprive President Roosevelt of the delegation will result in righteous condemnation and indignation, and the selection of a delegation by the democrats of Georgia that will properly represent Georgia at the national convention to be held in Philadelphia on June 25."

"I have heretofore said and now repeat that the vote in Seminole county and in Harris county is a true barometer of Georgia's unswerving loyalty and devotion to the democratic party and its great leader, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

FLANAGAN ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF MURDER

"Until I can have you moved to another prison, I want to know that you'll be safe."

She embraced Hal Lindsay. "I'll never forget you," she told the lawyer, who had worked without a fee, at the appointment of the court. She thanked Frank Doughman, Atlanta attorney, who had volunteered his help to Lindsay and worked with him throughout the trial.

The jury, it was said, was split about evenly at the start—half being for manslaughter and half for acquittal. There was never a vote for first-degree murder.

The jury's decision in favor of Flanagan was said to have been caused by the lack of responsible witnesses to the actual murder. Flanagan's scar, showing how his head had been almost severed from his body in a mysterious knife attack, helped to sway the jurors.

The boy had admitted the slaying, but maintained he had killed Smith in self-defense. The trial lasted four days.

Seasonal Declines.
In the six states located wholly or partially in the sixth banking district slight seasonal declines in both the number of workers employed and in pay rolls were noted from December to January, but the number of workers reported for January was 3.6 per cent greater than for January, 1933, and pay rolls were 11.3 per cent greater. Both number of workers and pay rolls were larger than for January of other recent years.

Increase in acreage in hay, corn, peanuts, potatoes, soy beans and rice was indicated for the six states of the district. Unusually cold and wet weather retarded farmers in the far south during the first two months of the year, but improvement was noted in the latter part of February, according to the report.

SALES ARE ACTIVE Peak of Easter Buying To Start This Week.

Easter buying was reported started in the sixth federal reserve district yesterday by merchants, but was not expected to reach its peak until this and next week.

General ready-to-wear predominated as a buyers' favorite, with other lines of merchandise getting good response, executives said.

Inclement weather had a slight effect on sales.

Bank clearings were slightly down last week, the Federal Reserve Bank reported $44,600,000 for the week, against $51,300,000 for the previous week.

Steel operations in the Birmingham district continued unchanged at 69 per cent of capacity.

WORLD WAR AVERTED, PEACE MEETING TOLD
Newton D. Baker Praises Accomplishments of League of Nations.

NEW YORK, March 23.—(AP)—Fashion designers picked a new list of "best dressed" women today.

The list, prepared by a poll conducted by Emil Alvin Hartman, director of the Rockefeller Center Fashion Academy, names as leaders in their respective fields:

Key Francis, the movies.
Princess Ketty Mikelande, society.
Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, sports.
Jane Pickens, the radio.
Shelby Barrett, night clubs.
Mrs. James J. Farley, public life.
Helen Gleason, the opera.
Ika Chase, the stage.

Previous winners of the Fashion Academy awards, among whom were Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Gladys Swarthout, Constance Cummings, Irene Bordone, Mrs. Claire, Mrs. Marion Williams, Betty Morris and Mary I. Brown were not eligible for the selections this year.

Hartman's announcement of the new list commented on the varied preferences of the eight named.

The princess favors simple clothes and avoidance of jewelry unless it is real.

Miss Barrett finds tweed suits appealing, and Miss Pickens goes in for "originality" with rich colors of her own design.

Mrs. Farley, wife of the postmaster-general, was described as personifying the mature type of woman, and one who has been able to "edit" her wardrobe with excellent taste.

The others, Hartman said, are noted for their ability to select types of essential simplicity and wear them in a most effective manner.

Personally, charm and ability to wear clothes were the standards used in making the selections.

PICKENS SISTERS
NATIVES OF MACON
The sisters and her sisters, Helen and Betty, who comprise the famous radio trio, are natives of Macon.

Jane first sang over the radio from an Atlanta broadcasting station in 1925. This was in the days when music teachers looked rather askance at radio.

For this reason, Jane first sang over the air in Atlanta as "Miss Incognito," as she feared her "music teacher" wouldn't like the idea.

There were many programs from this city before the sisters made their bid for fame in New York.

TWO FEDERAL AGENTS
GUARD JOHN ROOSEVELT
BOSTON, March 23.—(AP)—Two secret service agents guarded John A. Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, when he appeared last night at the Copley theater in Harvard's Hasty Pudding Club play, it was learned today.

It was the first time that the President's sons have been guarded here, but secret service officials said it was merely a routine precaution.

DR. TOWNSEND FLIES TO WASHINGTON

third floor room for several days. She sent a negro elevator operator up to see if the room was occupied. The door was locked. She sent him back with the key to learn if anyone was inside.

He unlocked the door, but found the chair barring further entry. He staid and tugged and smashed his way in.

Sprawled across the bed was Ormond's body. On a table near by was a fully loaded revolver. Police were called, but City Detective W. D. McGee made the identification after his brother officers had discovered the costly drug loot under the bed and called him in.

McGee spotted Ormond immediately. He had a rogue's gallery picture of the man in his pocket. Asaga, city and federal, had been hunting for him as a suspect ever since the Park-Davis robbery three weeks ago and had trailed him through several downtown hotels.

"He knew we were after him," said McGee yesterday. "He has been skulking in these hotel rooms until he felt he could move safely to some place where he could peddle this stuff."

Using Opium.
On the floor beside Ormond's body was the needle that he had used and the teaspoon in which he had mixed the drug. Chemical tests yesterday proved that Ormond had been using nothing but cocaine recently, although this drug was a minor item in the rich loot from the safe of the wholesale druggists.

A drug addict will stick to morphine if he can get cocaine," said P. A. Williams, deputy United States narcotic agent, yesterday. "They will always turn to much cocaine. It's more dangerous—an overdose is more possible."

Ormond could have died from any one of several reasons. He could have shot an air bubble into his arm and this is fatal when it strikes the heart. It is more likely, though, that he has just taken too much cocaine."

Officers told the story of their tracking of Ormond from hotel to hotel. At one downtown hotel, he rented three rooms, two together and one down the hall. He lived in the two-room suite and hid the drug in the other room.

Knew He Was Wanted.
Ormond knew that police were after him. He had a trail of arrests and jail sentences for burglaries and dope peddling stretching across the country from Georgia to California.

February 12 he burglarized a drug store near Emory University, the store owner catching him as he was looting the safe of the narcotic supply. He was paid $2,000 bond.

In the DeKalb superior court and jumped this bond. When the Park-Davis safe was ripped open on March 8, he was found with $2,000 bond.

His greed for the drug that he had stolen saved officers and courts the problem of dealing with him. He had been dead several hours when his body was found. Downstairs he was registered as R. P. Kane, of Macon.

In the loot were quarter-grain, one-eighth grain, one-sixth and one-half grain tablets of morphine, cocaine and cocaine. Nine bottles contained 1,000 quarter-grain tablets of morphine.

The drugs were returned to the Park-Davis Company yesterday, which Ormond's body was being held for relatives.

"Death from accidental cocaine poisoning" was the verdict returned yesterday afternoon by Coroner Paul B. Donohoe following an inquest into Ormond's death. The verdict was explained meaning Ormond had taken an overdose of the drug.

The inquest was held at Awtry & Lowndes. Funeral arrangements will be announced.

WORLD WAR AVERTED, PEACE MEETING TOLD
Newton D. Baker Praises Accomplishments of League of Nations.

NEW YORK, March 23.—(AP)—Newton D. Baker, who as secretary of war in the Wilson cabinet, tonight credited the League of Nations with having averted a European plunge into "the second world war" during the past year.

Baker spoke on a national peace conference program on the radio (NBC network).

"This thing is clear—the existence of the League has for a year required the greatest military powers of the world to discuss and debate in the open their plans and their controversies, and accordingly no nation is now bold enough to believe that it can nurse a plan which it cannot explain persuasively enough to secure the sympathy of the disinterested part of the world," he said.

It seems quite certain that but for the existence of the League of Nations, Europe would long since have been plunged into the disaster of the second world war. The League at least has given the world a year of debate instead of a year of battle and it may yet save us from catastrophe."

Baker praised Russian diplomacy. The Soviet's "commission" of foreign affairs, Maxim Litvinoff, he said, "speaks with the authority of the greatest armed nation in the modern world."

The former secretary urged the United States to keep its thinking "up to date" in foreign relations.

NEWSPAPER'S WIRES RETURNED BY PROBERS
WICHITA, Kas., March 23.—(AP)—Louis Levand, publisher of the Wichita Beacon, said today that the newspaper's telegrams subpoenaed by the senate lobby committee at Washington have been returned.

and when he proclaimed himself successor to the late President Paul Von Hindenburg in 1934, qualified electors were given a chance to vote "Ja" or "Nein" afterward.

This precedent is dispensed with in the present election. The citizens are told that they can do "constructive voting" only by reaffirming their faith in Der Fuehrer.

A further interesting feature of the election is that no one outside of a few Nazi party chieftains knows how many German citizens are entitled to vote.

Judging from the last election, there should be more than 42,000,000 but, since then, the Jews have lost their franchise and the 550,000 men placed under arms must let their electoral privilege rest until they return to civil life.

On the other hand, the voting age has been lowered from 21 to 20 years, so that the number of voters may be about the same as in 1934.

As there is no choice of reelecting candidates and as the ballot provides no possibility of voting "no" on policies, the election is bound to be 100 per cent for the regime.

According to some reports, there will not even be voting booths in some of the rural districts, but, in those areas where voters will sit down at tables and mark their ballot publicly.

Nowhere in the election instructions to voters is there a mention of secret ballots. In previous elections, even in this third reich, the secrecy of the ballot always has been emphasized.

Mass Mobilization.
Tomorrow, therefore, is not an election but a mass mobilization of Germany's citizenry to support Hitler in his dealings with foreign nations.

20 NORMAL CHILDREN ARE KEPT WITH INSANE

Little Rock, Ark., March 23.—

Disclosure that approximately 20 normal children are quartered with mental defectives in two wards at the state hospital for nervous diseases today brought statements from two state officials that corrective action would be sought.

The disclosure was made in a report given Attorney-General Carl E. Bailey by Mrs. Clio Harper, state supervisor for the juvenile courts department.

Assuming that 42,000,000 persons vote tomorrow, the next reichstag may have as many as 700 members. Hitler will select them from the list of 1,035 candidates, none of whom is a woman.

Long Will Be Honored in Three Georgia Cities Tomorrow

LIVESTOCK SHOW IS SET FOR APRIL 1 IN SOUTH GEORGIA

Record Attendance Seen for Field Day at Tifton Experiment Station Next Wednesday.

TIFTON, Ga., March 28.—(AP)—Advance reports indicate a record attendance of farm men and women at the third annual livestock field day to be held at the Coastal Plain Experiment station here April 1.

The program begins at 10 a. m., eastern standard time.

Results of various feeding and pasture tests with beef, cattle and hogs will be announced.

Steers on Feed.
Choice fat steers which have been on feed 140 days will be on exhibition. These six lots of steers are being fattened on different combinations of home-grown feeds. Pigs which have been fattened on various fattening crops will be shown. Pigs grown on crops produced in south Georgia are considered equal to those grown in any part of the United States.

The experiment station is working in co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture in developing an outstanding herd of polled Hereford cattle. This herd will be on display during the field day.

Livestock experts say the station is doing particularly outstanding work with hogs. For three years various tests have been carried on to determine value of the different grazing and fattening crops. These results will be reviewed. Recently a breeding project has been established with Duroc Jersey swine. Record of performance and progeny tests will be made with this breed.

During the afternoon of the field day, students of Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College will present a livestock show. The students are dairy cattle, beef cattle and swine used in the experimental work of the animal husbandry division of the experiment station.

Director S. H. Starr, of the station, says "every effort will be made to make the annual livestock field day an instructive and educational affair as possible. Because of the increased interest in livestock production in the state, a large attendance is expected. Last spring at a similar meeting more than 700 farmers and livestock growers attended."

Dr. Sanford to Speak.
Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the University System of Georgia, will speak on livestock production in the coastal plain area.

An interesting program has been arranged for the farm women. Mrs. Miriam Birdseye, extension nutritionist from Washington, D. C., and Miss Lurline Collier and Miss Susan Mathews, of the University of Georgia, will be on the women's program. The program will be devoted to the place of meat in the diet and ways of preparing meats for home use.

Hall County to Erect Handsome $150,000 Courthouse

Hall county citizens have approved a bond issue of $75,000, to be matched by a grant of $67,500 from the PWA, for the erection of the modern county courthouse, pictured above, to replace the present structure, erected in 1883. The county commissioners state they will rush the validation and sale of the bonds in order to begin work on the building as soon as possible. Photo furnished by Gainesville Eagle.

BIG BUILDING PLAN ON AT GAINESVILLE

Bonds Are Voted To Erect Handsome Courthouse for Hall County.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., March 28.—(AP)—Breaking of ground recently on Gainesville's new $112,000 improvement forms a link in the chain of public and private building operations which will carry construction in the city and Hall county well above the half million dollar mark in 1938, if present plans are carried out.

Voters last week approved a bond issue which will mean erection of a new water tower, new school building, a new city hall, a new city library, a new city auditorium and gymnasium is to be erected at the high school and improvements made in other units of the system.

The waterworks project involves erection of a new water tower, new buildings and clear water basins and installation of mains to serve the city's needs 25 years or more.

The new courthouse will contain a county library, ample space for county officers and court proceedings, and replace the present 53-year-old structure.

Work has been under way several weeks on the new Lyman Hall school building, a brick structure on the Brown's Bridge road near the city limits costing about $30,000, while another $25,000 brick school building is being built at Clermont, 12 miles north of here, to house the Chattahoochee High school. Plans in progress call for enlargement and improvement of several other county schools, all under provisions of federal aid.

In and near the city limits, many handsome homes are being erected, and two vacant homes here and only two business buildings are unoccupied.

ALLEN TRIAL TO OPEN AT JEFFERSON APRIL 1

Prominent Physician To Face Charge of Slaying His Wife.

JEFFERSON, Ga., March 28.—(AP)—Northeast Georgia's most interesting court case in years will open in Jacksonville, Ga., at 10 o'clock tomorrow when Dr. Myron B. Allen, prominent Hoshocan physician, goes on trial charged with the slaying of his wife last October. It therefore, behooves all true supporters of official who are endeavoring to uphold democratic ideals to contribute in a financial way to their support and continuation in office."

President Roosevelt himself will deliver a Jeffersonian Day address at the University of Georgia on April 13 which will be broadcast.

Mr. Shackelford says that a large number of Roosevelt buttons have been placed in the hands of the people here. He will be given to each person contributing to the President's campaign fund in Georgia. The money, above all other things, is a sure way to the state Roosevelt headquarters.

Everyone will be invited to aid in conducting the Roosevelt re-election campaign and contributions, no matter how small, will be welcomed. No contribution in excess of $5.00 will be accepted.

Democratic Move.
In the manner of Mayor Mell points out in his proclamation, "everyone will be given opportunity to share financially in a movement which has a personal relation to every citizen."

It is said, however, that since "it is impossible" for the United States to "sit in calm seclusion, prudence and self-preservation unite in dictating to her a thoroughgoing, ungrudging and energetic effort in the organization and maintenance of peace; for peace and the liberty of action it insures are the things she most needs to work out her destiny. There is no dodging the stern fact that today American security is largely dependent on American neutrality and world security."

Should Georgia adopt a proposed constitutional amendment limiting the tax on real estate to 15 mills, no way of replacing the lost tax revenue was foreseen today by Dr. B. P. Brooks, University of Georgia professor.

Dr. Brooks' ideas upon the state's tax problems were advanced during a discussion here at the forum.

"If Georgia were a state rich in manufacturing or mineral wealth, or had numerous citizens with large incomes, it would be all right to reduce the taxes on property," he said.

He canvassed all the possible sources of revenue and ended by saying that he saw no way to replace the revenue that would be lost if the limitation amendment were adopted.

The forum, which began yesterday, ended today. It was sponsored by civic interests here, and West Georgia College, Professor L. E. Roberts, of the college, presided at the final session. Dr. Green and Dr. George Raffalovich of France, were speakers. Mrs. S. C. Boykin, Carrollton attorney and clubwoman, led the discussion following Dr. Green's address. 'ROOSEVELT DAY' IS SET FOR APRIL 13 BY ATHENS MAYOR

Jefferson's Birthday Next Month To Be Observed as Great Rally for President and Democracy.

By DAN MAGILL.
ATHENS, Ga., March 28.—Mayor T. S. Mell proclaimed Monday, April 13, which is the birthday of Thomas Jefferson, as "Roosevelt Democracy Day" here and urges all citizens to co-operate in making it a success.

Sponsored by the Clarke County Roosevelt club, of which Frank C. Shackelford is president, "Roosevelt Democracy Day" is expected to set afloat a new idea in democratic participation in government.

It has been suggested here that the idea may spread to the state and nation and that similar proclamations will be issued throughout the United States, which would mean that April 13 would become a grand rally day for democrats all over America.

Aside from commemorating the author of the American Declaration of Independence, founder of the democratic party and twice president of the United States, and honoring one of his greatest disciples, Franklin D. Roosevelt, the occasion will be marked by opening an opportunity to everyone to participate in a financial manner in the election of a president of the United States and thus become in reality a participant in the conduct of the government.

Praises Plan.
Mayor Mell, in proclaiming April 13, as "Roosevelt Democracy Day" here, points out that "under our elective system and the vastness of our country it becomes necessary to conduct expensive political campaigns in order that officials who shall have direction of our governmental affairs be placed in office."

He believes all true supporters of officials who are endeavoring to uphold democratic ideals to contribute in a financial way to their support and continuation in office."

POLICY OF ISOLATION DISCUSSED BY GREEN
First Annual Public Forum Closes Conference at Carrollton.

CARROLLTON, Ga., March 28.—(AP)—Doubt that the United States "will ever throw off her fixed aversion to entangling alliances" was expressed today by Dr. Fletcher M. Green, of Emory University, in an address on "Neutrality" at Carrollton's first annual public forum.

He said if this nation did throw off its aversion to such alliances, it would be unfortunate. Dr. B. P. Brooks, University of Georgia professor, traced by historical survey and summary the United States' foreign policies, he said he saw "no necessity" that replacing such policies "with a system of foreign alliances, a concert of powers, or a league of nations."

He said, however, that since "it is impossible" for the United States to "sit in calm seclusion, prudence and self-preservation unite in dictating to her a thoroughgoing, ungrudging and energetic effort in the organization and maintenance of peace; for peace and the liberty of action it insures are the things she most needs to work out her destiny. FLOOD-CONTROL PLAN IS FAVORED FOR ROME
Army Engineers Recommend Building of Levees on Coosa Project.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—(AP)—Army engineers reported to the senate commerce committee today that construction of levees costing $835,000 on the Savannah and Coosa rivers at Augusta and Rome, Ga., respectively, was "economically justified."

The two items, calling for expenditure of $835,000 on the Savannah at Augusta and $170,000 on the Coosa at Rome, were proposed for the flood control bill expected to come before the senate shortly.

Recalling that approximately $1,300,000 damage was done by floods to Augusta in 1929, the army engineers said restoration, enlargement and extension of the levee now existing there was "necessary to protect the protection from great floods which will provide increased social security, eliminate industrial losses and permit orderly development of this important area."

Construction of 11 miles of levees is anticipated at Augusta. Estimated annual damage by floods to Rome, Ga., at $16,000, the engineers said this alone justified the Coosa project. It is planned to construct levees at the confluence of the Oostanula and Etowah rivers.

Contest Between Borah and Landon Hits Republicans' Peace of Mind

With Tactics of Each Candidate Becoming More Aggressive, Convention Scrap and After Results Arouse Speculation.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—(AP)—Prospective collisions in the campaign to nominate Senator Borah, of Idaho, and Governor Landon, of Kansas, for the presidency challenged many Republicans' peace of mind tonight.

With tactics on behalf of each becoming plainer, if not more aggressive, speculation about the effect in the Cleveland convention and afterward on political developments this week.

High in the general considerations was the significant New York speech by Governor Landon, in which he took a position for tariff revision more to the taste of the exporting farming west than the industrial east.

He, or a "dark horse," would stand to benefit from any clashes in convention between irreconcilable alignments.

Landon alone benefited in actual delegate strength during the week, gaining six pledged to him from Missouri to bring his total to 51 out of 1,001. Knox has 11 and Borah none as yet.

Knox Indorsed by Townsman.
An endorsement of his candidacy by Dr. F. E. Townsend, originator of the 200,000-man-old age pension plan, was welcomed by Borah. Townsend emphasized it was a personal preference and did not bind his organization.

He once more threatened a Townsend third party unless one of the major parties tags along with his idea.

Governor Olson, of Minnesota, again proposed a third party movement, at the state farmer-labor convention. The result it would bring remained to be seen.

Borah decided today to enter the May 15 Oregon primary. A new Jersey delegation invited him to go in there also.

If he does so, the New Jersey primaries—May 19—may provide the first and only direct test against sentiment for Landon. The regular republican slate, including Governor Hoffman and former Senator Edge, are counted for the Kansas executive.

Borah Passes Up California.
By declining to enter California, because it would be impossible for him to campaign there before the count on May 5, Borah passed up an opportunity to contest with Landon.

Republicans there face a choice between a Landon and an untried delegate ticket, the latter favored by friends of former President Hoover.

In various other states where Borah is entered, Landon backers look to supporting untried delegates, or "favorite son" delegations.

The practice of such delegations has been condemned by Borah. Although he has no national Landon in his public speeches, the fact that some of his advisers have done so aroused conjecture whether Borah might not when the campaign has progressed further.

Governor Landon has shown no hostility to Borah. His attitude, and that of Knox, was reflected in this week in contrast to the senator's.

Landon: "I have so tried to conduct myself that after the Cleveland convention the party will be in the most harmonious position so that we can present the strongest front."

Knox States Position.
Knox: "If some other man should be nominated I shall work just as hard for his election next November as I would for my own."

Borah: "I have no plan, or purpose, for bolting the party at the Cleveland convention; but I shall reserve the right to look over their candidates and platform very carefully."

Apparently content with the way things are going, within the party for renomination of the Roosevelt-Garner ticket, the democratic organization has come to single out Landon more for special attacks hitherto concentrated on former President Herbert Hoover.

Charles Michelson, publicity director for the national committee, in his regular week-end piece surmised that "somebody less identified with the policies advocated by the Liberty League and Republican Chairman Fletcher" would be nominated.

INSURANCE RATE CUT AGAIN ASKED BY KEY

Mayor Bases Fight on Trophy Winning Record of Atlanta Fire Department.

Mayor Key yesterday renewed his fight for a reduction of $1,000,000 a year in local fire insurance rates and predicated his latest communication to the Southeastern Fire Underwriters Association on the fact that the Atlanta fire department has just been awarded national honors for the second consecutive year in low per capita loss and fire prevention.

The mayor's letter was addressed to William F. Dunbar, manager of the association, and was directed after a conference between Key and Fire Chief O. J. Parker.

Parker announced that the annual convention of the Southeastern Fire Fighters' Association will be held in Atlanta May 4-5, and that it will be followed by the Georgia Fire College, May 6-8.

Council will be asked to allocate $1,000 to aid in defraying the expenses of the college, and the finance committee will consider that request along with others at a meeting slated to be held Tuesday afternoon at the city hall.

Chief W. M. Stephens, of Anniston, Ala., is president of the Southeastern Association; W. Q. Darline, of Jacksonville, is first vice president, and Parker is second vice president.

Councilman Aubrey Milam, chairman of the finance committee, Saturday warned that the city has no funds for any large contributions for any purpose.

The announcement came when he was apprised of the firemen's request. The finance group also is being asked to provide $1,000 for the dogwood festival.

Key's letter to Dunbar recited previous conferences on a proposed 25 per cent reduction in Atlanta's fire insurance rates, which he estimated would save citizens about $1,000,000 a year. He urged early action in the matter and pledged his support in the proposal.

Parker yesterday attributed the fine showing of the fire department to the sobriety, the earnestness and the application of firemen themselves.

"The department is doing a good job," he told the mayor. "Its morale is high. Its members remain sober. We don't allow a man to attempt to fight fires or to come into an engine house with the suspicion of liquor on him, and that accounts in a large measure for our success."

Text of Key's letter to the underwriters follows:

"I know that you have observed, already, that the Atlanta fire department has achieved another year's distinction by winning the prize over all other cities in the United States for a year around record of efficiency, not only in extinguishing fires, but in preventing them."

"This is not only important to you, as representing the insurers, but it is very important to the city of Atlanta, as representing the insured in our midst, and it is an added argument in favor of the 25 per cent reduction in rates which I recently requested of your association, and you kindly agreed that you would assemble all the facts and would come over to this office and discuss the matter on its merits, with the assurance that you would give the people of Atlanta all the reduction in rates which the facts would justify."

"I feel very happy over this situation, because it not only reflects credit upon the city and the city's fire department, but because it is a sign of a decrease in burden which the property owners of this city have to bear; and I know you are happy about it, too, because you do not wish to exact from the property owners more than a fair compensation for the burden which your association has to bear."

"I would suggest that as soon as possible you get all the facts together and Chief Parker and I will go over the matter with you and will assist you in reaching a fair determination on this question, which is very vital to this community."

Twenty-six veniremen were examined today, and 18 of them were suspended. Tampa policemen charged kidnapping E. F. Poulton. Others were challenged by counsel or were excused by the court for other reasons.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO TO CUT TRAVEL RATES

President Willard Approves I. C. C. Order for Reduction in Passenger Fares.

BALTIMORE, March 28.—(AP)—The Baltimore & Ohio railroad announced today that, if necessary, it would stand alone in the east in reducing passenger fares from 3.5 to 2 cents a mile to win back business from buses and automobiles and to gain new patronage.

Daniel Willard, B. & O. president, who waged a five-year fight for the reduced fares as a means of rejuvenating railway passenger business, said, regardless of the position of other lines, his road was moving to put the new rates into effect by June 2.

His statement followed a decision of other eastern railroads in Washington yesterday to ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to suspend the effective date of the fares. These roads would propose new compromise rates to be tried out as an experiment.

Willard said the B. & O. would not join in the request of these lines. A memorandum from his office continued:

"So far as the Baltimore & Ohio is concerned it will not interfere with what the other railroads decide to do in this respect. However, it is now preparing tariffs on the basis of the fare ordered by the commission, and expects to put them into effect not later than June 2, the date specified by the commission."

These fares in general are the same as already are in effect in western and southern states. They were approved by the I. C. C. last month, providing in addition to the passenger rate cut, reduction from an average of 4 to 3 cents a mile in the Pullman rate and elimination of the surcharge.

At hearings before the commission, the B. & O., fighting stubbornly for the reductions argued roads elsewhere had found no real benefit.

Aligned against the fare reductions were such lines as the New York Central, Pennsylvania, and the New York, New Haven & Hartford.

3D PARTY NOW URGED BY FARM-LABOR BODY

Convention Works on Platform for 'Collectively Owned Industry.'

ST. PAUL, March 28.—(AP)—An enthusiastic farmer-labor party convention adopted a resolution today looking toward formation of a national third party for the 1936 political campaign, and welcomed a hint that Governor Floyd B. Olson might be a presidential candidate in 1940.

The resolution, which the convention showed 388 1-2 votes for the step and 250 1-2 against it.

The ballot was taken after several prominent state leaders argued against the resolution but Governor Olson expressed the opinion it could do no harm.

Ed Weiland, railroad and warehouse commissioner, urged that action be postponed another four years and voiced "the hope in 1940, if God gives Floyd B. Olson health and strength, he will be a candidate for president."

The governor said he regarded the resolution as not committing the "liberals" to the plan of putting a third national ticket in the field this year nor authorizing the formation of such a ticket, but urged an early special ratifying action the suggested "exploratory conference" might take.

The resolution said in part:

"It is resolved that the convention of 1936 reaffirm its conviction as to the necessity of building state farmer-labor parties and a national farmer-labor party and a second convention be elected with representation from each congressional district to call conference and to co-operate with other progressive labor, farmer, and political organizations and leaders in calling a national conference to explore the possibilities of a national farmer-labor ticket in 1936 and in promoting state farmer-labor parties, a concerted campaign to elect farmer-labor congressmen in the 1936 campaign, and in building a national farmer-labor party."

A platform advocating a changed economic system, looking to the day when "monopolized industry" will be "collectively owned and operated" was prepared for submission.

While the first draft contained proposals for radical modification of existing tenets of American government, the planks did not attain the sweeping breadth of the co-operative commonwealth program of 1934, their sponsors said.

Complementing the public ownership feature in this year's declaration was another proposal setting forth as the party's policy "to encourage, to promote and to encourage private ownership of homes, farms, and small businesses."

Other planks submitted to the convention for approval called for conception of wealth in wartime; a form of economic sanctions to maintain neutrality; increased rates in many taxes, limited to higher brackets only; a federal constitutional amendment limiting all federal judges and justices to 10-year terms of life as now; opposition to a sales tax; stronger state and national chain store legislation and taxes, and reasonable return plus cost of production for agriculture.

The farmer-labor party condemned what it termed "the fascist labor baiting tactics of William Randolph Hearst and the newspapers he controls. We extend our wholehearted sympathy to the strikers of the Wisconsin News and agree to contribute to the full extent of our ability to a fund for the strikers."

SLAYING OF GIRLS DENIED BY MOTHER
Mrs. Patterson Is Accused Formally of Poisoning 2 Daughters.

GREENVILLE, Texas, March 28.—(AP)—A terse denial was Mrs. Velma Patterson's response tonight to charges of the poison-murder of her two small daughters.

The 34-year-old brunette was accused formally today of poisoning her 12-year-old daughter, Dorothy, who died last month.

A chemist's report said poison found in the child's viscera after the body was exhumed was identical to that present in another daughter, Billie Fae, 13, who died in January.

Patterson was charged with poisoning Billie Fae last week.

She received notice of the second murder charge with the same outward indifference that has characterized her actions since her arrest.

Intestinal influenza was given as the cause of death at the time the little girl died but Hunt county investigators unsatisfied with the death reports, exhumed the two small bodies and sent them to Dr. Landon C. Moore in Dallas for examination.

Billie Fae and Dorothy were Mrs. Patterson's children by her first husband, Dexter McCasland, whom she divorced in 1925. He was in prison serving sentence for a liquor law violation.

She married Bill Patterson, who died at the Commerce (Texas) home last September. Authorities said he did not plan an investigation of his death.

Mrs. Patterson's trial on the murder charge in Billie Fae's death is set for April 13. She is held without bond.

Authorities said they have been unable to determine a motive behind the poisoning of the two children.

Intra-Party Battles Seen in Iowa As Preliminary to National Election

Political Observers Ponder Whether Great "Corn State" Will Return to Republican Fold or Cast Its Lot With New Deal.

(Editor's Note: This is the twelfth of a series of Associated Press dispatches presenting an objective view of the state political situation as they fit into the national political scene.)

By C. V. WARREN.
DES MOINES, Iowa, March 28.—(AP)—Iowa political interest centers now on intra-party battles, preliminary to the national elections, which will determine whether the great "corn state" will return to the republican fold or again cast its lot with the New Deal.

In the lull between the end of the state's bitterest winter in 117 years and the start of spring plowing and other farm work, political activity has received unusual attention. A republican state convention exceeded expectations with its attendance and a democratic meeting, scheduled for next week, is heralded as promising the "largest ever" attendance.

Political observers say the contests within the two major parties, for nominations at the June 2 primaries are an indication of the intensity with which the national battle for the state's votes will be carried on next November.

The democrats have a contest of governor with the republicans having Governor Clyde L. Herring, former auto salesman, now completing his second term, and Congressman Hubert Utterback, of Des Moines, both seek the party's favor as senate aspirants. The enigma confronting politicians of both parties concerns the effect farm relief legislation and related New Deal activities will have on the preponderant farm voters. When the supreme court decreed the AAA was unconstitutional, leaders of both parties professed to see the farm vote swinging their way.

The new soil conservation program has not, as yet, been explained in detail to Iowa farmers who received the major share of the corn-hog benefit payments under the old AAA act. The new plan will be explained soon to some 800 farm-committeemen at the state's agricultural college, in Ames.

The farmer-labor party takes its place on the ballot this year for the first time because of the vote its candidates rolled up at the last election. Even the most optimistic leaders, however, say they doubt that the party will figure heavily in the outcome.

Wallace Short, Sioux City weekly paper editor and former preacher, is the farmer-labor candidate for governor. Lieutenant Governor Nels Křaschel is the democratic candidate for governor with the republicans having Governor Clyde L. Herring, former auto salesman, now completing his second term, and Congressman Hubert

Mrs. George Black, Whitmer Carr, Mrs. Lewis A. Hamilton, and John Brumbaugh. This group will be forced to qualify before playing in the tournament.

Atlanta bridge fans are hoping that the city will soon boast of another national championship, banking their hopes on the two bridge teams sent to New York to compete in the United States Bridge Association grand national tournament.

The two teams left Atlanta Thursday for a leisurely trip by automobile, with a stopover in Virginia yesterday for a sectional tournament in which Team No. 2 is competing.

Composing the first team, winners of the southern national bridge tournament held last month in Birmingham, are Mrs. Humphrey Vagar, Fred Levy, Mrs. Spotswood Grant, and Henry B. Tompkins. Every United States resident over 17 years of age and legally qualified to drive is eligible to compete and test his driving skill over a prescribed route accompanied by an observer to assure full compliance with all rules governing the contest.

First prize is a new Pontiac eight-door touring sedan, and second prize a new Pontiac Master six-door touring sedan. Other prizes range from $200 cash for third place, $200 for fourth, $100 for fifth, $50 for sixth, to 10 equal prizes of $25 each; 50 of $10 each, and 100 of $5 each.

Dealers now are being supplied with necessary entry blanks and performance records for the contest which gets under way April 1 and extends through April 30. The only thing necessary for entrance in the contest is to register with a local dealer and comply with terms of the contest as set forth on the entry blank.

Rules require that all contestants drive a 1936 stock model, six-cylinder Pontiac car, fueled with ordinary gasoline, fed to the motor from a sealed, tamper-proof gasoline reservoir.

In announcing the contest C. P. Simpson, general sales manager of the Pontiac Motor Company, said the object of the national contest was to determine what mileage could be run by average drivers, following the prize winning performance of the car on the officially observed Gilmore-Yosemite economy run, when a new Pontiac six covered the 352-mile course averaging 23.9 miles per gallon.

CIVIC LEADERS TO AID IN CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN

Many Pledge Co-operation in Movement To Improve City's Appearance.

Many prominent Atlanta civic leaders are approving the "clean-up, paint-up, plant-up" campaign to be held here the week beginning April 6, under the auspices of the women's division of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Robert F. Adamson, president of the women's division and chairman of the campaign, responded yesterday to approvals of the campaign, including that of Mayor Key.

"When we made our plans this year, we felt that Atlanta and its civic organizations would recognize the great need for this campaign," she said. "We have made more intensive plans than ever before. We intend making this drive an annual event, but we hope our efforts to improve the city will continue throughout the year. I wish to take this opportunity to thank all those who have so heartily co-operated with us."

Other civic leaders pledging co-operation are quoted as follows:

Mrs. W. F. Melton, president of the Atlanta Woman's Club: "I appreciate the opportunity to endorse so fine a civic enterprise. We have already made plans to put your campaign into practical effect. Atlanta most certainly needs a thorough 'facelift' this year."

Mrs. Thad Morrison, president of the Atlanta Music Club: "I think that it is the ambition of every Atlantan to make Atlanta as beautiful as possible. A beautiful city will impress our forthcoming visitors. This campaign is a fine thing, and I think everybody will co-operate in making it a success."

Mrs. Henry W. Grady Jr., president of the Junior League, is much interested in the Dogwood Festival. Naturally we want the city to put its best foot foremost, and present its most beautiful aspect."

Mrs. George Ripley, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs: "Speaking for the clubs I represent, I am sure we will all be willing to co-operate to the fullest extent."

Decatur Co-operates.

Mrs. Guy Hudson, president of the Decatur Woman's Club: "I am delighted to see the plant up element added to this civic enterprise. Decatur will be delighted to co-operate. You know, we consider ourselves the gateway to Atlanta. I think a clean, beautiful city makes a clean, beautiful people."

Miss Evelyn R. Jackson: "As president of the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs, I am glad to give my endorsement to the clean-up, paint-up, plant-up, build-up campaign. Beauty of all kinds uplifts civilization, and music lovers will be more than willing to take part in this very helpful campaign."

Miss Jane Boyd, president of the Pilot Club: "First let me say that I would like to take this meeting to compliment the city sanitary department for the splendid work during this terrible winter. The Pilot Club will join with you again this year 100 per cent."

Mrs. John L. Harper, president of the Atlanta Quota Club: "Of course, I can heartily endorse clean-up, paint-up, plant-up, build-up campaign. It is one of our finest civic programs."

Mrs. D. R. Longino, president, Atlanta Parent-Teacher Council: "This campaign is entirely in line with the work which the Atlanta children are emphasizing this year: 'Making better communities.' Our Parent-Teacher Associations will welcome this opportunity to work with you and at the same time encourage our children in building 'Better Homes and Better Communities.'"

CADILLAC-LA SALLE SALES SHOW GAIN

Over Hundred Ninety-Two Per Cent Increase Over 1935.

Sales of Cadillac, La Salle and Cadillac-Fleetwood cars during January and February, showing a national increase of 192 per cent of sales in the same period of 1935, indicate that improved demand for fine cars which started late last year, is continuing strongly into 1936, it is pointed out by Don E. Ahrens, general sales manager for the Cadillac Motor Car Company.

"Our increased sales throughout the United States appear particularly significant," he says, "because they were achieved despite two adverse factors, either of which might have been expected to exert a strongly retarding influence. One was the fact that our 1936 series cars were introduced early in October of 1935, and thus, by the first of the year, they had been on the market for nearly three months. Doubtless, a great many fine car buyers who had been waiting for the 1936 models, made their purchases during this three-month period prior to January 1."

"The other factor was the unusually severe weather which until recently made prospective buyers reluctant to accept demonstrations. Were it not for the extremely cold weather which prevailed in January and February, I believe that our retail organization would have exceeded last year's sales figure for that period by an even greater margin."

THE OLD GIVES PLACE TO THE NEW

The Victorian Period, an age of growth... invention, discovery, and breathtaking advancements filling the country with awe! An age when hissing gas flames cast a yellow light over a room, and the odor of "flaming water," or kerosene, was burned in shaded lamps to give "sufficient" light for reading or knitting. Gas chandeliers, hanging stiff and unyielding from the ceiling, were clumsy, heavy affairs, ornately decorated. Sputtering, fish-tail shaped gas flames were shielded by globes of frosted glass.

Four-Week Record Shows Benefit Of Campaigns for Safety Driving

A note of encouragement in the fight against the appalling toll of automobile crashes was found yesterday in a report of the Bureau of Census which showed auto fatalities in Greater Atlanta during a recent four-week period in comparison with deaths recorded here during a similar period last year.

A concerted and determined safety drive by various councils and agencies of the city may be given credit for the fact that only four people were killed here by careless drivers during the four weeks ending March 14, instead of nine useless deaths which were piled up against Atlanta during the same period of time in 1935.

The value in human life of the wholehearted and intelligent work being done by the various agencies in reducing physical traffic hazards and in public education of the necessity of careful driving cannot be estimated, in the opinion of The Constitution Safety Council, one of the first of such organizations to inaugurate a city-wide and state-wide fight against death and injury from careless driving.

Evidence of Success.

The battle against the odds set up by thoughtless recklessness is being waged all over the nation with material evidence of success. A poll taken from 86 larger cities, including Atlanta, shows a death rate of 16.8 persons per 100,000 population for the four-week period this year. This is deplorable, of course, but it is not nearly so bad as the death rate of nearly 24 persons per 100,000 population recorded during the same period of time last year.

Careless drivers of these cities, during the 1935 four-week period, accounted for 678 deaths. The growing regard for human life and an increased practice of safe driving saved 196 lives during the four weeks ending March 14 of this year, with 482 persons killed in traffic accidents in the 86 cities.

Can Outlaw Loss.

This is exactly 482 auto crash deaths more than "were necessary." Careful driving and careful walking by everyone who uses the streets and highways can outlaw this needless loss of human life in a short time.

WHEATON SINGERS TO STAGE CONCERT

Wheaton College Women's Glee Club will present a concert under the direction of Mignon Bollman MacKenzie, at 8 o'clock Wednesday night in the Westminster Presbyterian church.

Composed of 32 students from Wheaton College at Wheaton, Ill., the club is now on a tour of the south. Concerts have been scheduled for many of the principal cities. Last year on its tour through the south, 3,200 miles were covered, and an extremely equally extensive is planned for this season.

The singers were selected from both the college and the conservatory of music, now 17 years old, on the Wheaton campus. Critics have described the singers as an "all-star company of rare talent and unusual equipment." Programs, including a wide repertoire of sacred and secular compositions, are said to have been enthusiastically received throughout the south.

Mignon Bollman MacKenzie, the director, is widely-known among musicians for her renditions of classical music and her artistic leadership. She has been active as a church and oratorio soloist, radio singer and teacher.

DAYLIGHT SAVING TO START APRIL 26

Mayor Key Will Issue Formal Proclamation of Event in Few Days.

Alderman I. Gloer Hailey, recognized as the father of daylight saving time in Atlanta, yesterday called on all employers to observe the new time, which will become effective here a month from today, on April 26.

Mayor Key said yesterday he will issue a proclamation regarding local observance within the next few days.

In pointing to the phenomenal success of daylight time last year, Hailey said, "there were a few firms in the outlying districts of the city who used daylight saving time as an excuse to get an extra hour's work out of employees."

"That should not exist," Hailey said. "There has been a suggestion that employers, who fail to co-operate and give their employees the benefit of the hour of sunshine and recreation, should be boycotted. I think that is a pretty good suggestion."

H. E. Fretwell, of Dallas, former Atlanta resident for many years, died Friday afternoon at the home of a daughter, Mrs. E. Talbot, of Center, Texas. He was 70.

Until he moved to Texas, Mr. Fretwell was associated with the building materials industry in Atlanta. He was a member of Capitol Avenue Baptist church and the Knights of Pythias.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Talbot, are his wife; three other daughters, Mrs. W. C. New of Atlanta, Mrs. W. E. Christy, of Center, and Mrs. Fred Talbot, of Dallas; a son, Howard Langford, of Lyons, N. Y.; a sister, Mrs. Horace Beebe, of Jacksonville, a brother, Turner Fretwell; two nieces, Mrs. George Goss and Mrs. Roscoe Scarboro, and a nephew, W. C. New. Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

HUDSON SHIPPING CONVERTIBLE MODELS

Early Demand Starts Sporty Convertible Shipments.

Due to an unusually early demand, shipments of the new Hudson and Terraplane convertible models have been started already from the Hudson factory in Detroit, according to W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales.

"Particularly strong," said Mr. Tracy, "is the demand for the new Hudson Eight convertible coupe. The strong 'youth appeal' of this car, with its 112 and 124 horsepower motor and flashing acceleration, and smart appearance, is making it one of the most popular cars in the entire Hudson line this spring."

Finished in an entirely new color—antique ivory—this car has attracted wide attention wherever it has been shown. Other spring colors announced by Hudson are: Maroon, sage green and glacier blue.

The new Hudson Eight convertible coupe, with its wide seat that provides plenty of room for three with room for two more in the spacious rumble seat, is admirably adapted for all climates, giving the luxury of an open car for spring and summer, and the comfort of a closed car for the cooler seasons. It requires only a moment to change the car from a closed model to an open one, and only a moment to replace the top when desired.

"The early demand for convertible," said Mr. Tracy, "indicates not only an advance in the spring rush to buy cars, but points to a strong and continued demand for cars of all models throughout the spring and summer. Last year, the demand for convertible models was at its height in April. From all indications, these figures will be eclipsed during March, and will continue high."

Exhibition To Open New Gallery At High Museum Sunday, April 5

The High Museum of Art is preparing to open a new gallery with a special exhibition on Sunday, April 5. The gallery is being provided by combining the old members' room with an enclosed section of porch and the arrangement grew directly out of the renovations made necessary by the recent fire at the museum.

A spirited collection of the works of the museum's two art school instructors, Robert S. Rogers and Benjamin E. Shute, executed during a trip to Europe last year, will comprise the gallery's opening exhibition.

The Rogers-Shute exhibition will parallel that of David Silvette, portrait painter, whose works will be shown starting Wednesday and continuing through April 15. A reception will be given in honor of Mr. Silvette on Sunday, April 5. He will come directly to Atlanta from his home in Richmond for the exhibition and reception.

Mr. Silvette is the son and grandson of portrait painters. His work has been decidedly influenced by Velasquez and Rembrandt, whom he considers the greatest portrait painters of all time. He is a native of Pittsburgh, but has lived for many years in Richmond. Among the outstanding awards that he has taken is the $1,000 prize and accompanying bronze medal of the Corcoran biennial exhibition held by the Corcoran gallery in Washington. His portrait of Thornton Nye, of Wytheville, painted in the mountains of Virginia, was the winning picture.

Mr. Rogers-Shute exhibition, a variety of European scenes will be shown. Mr. Rogers will contribute mainly watercolors, a field in which he excels, while Mr. Shute's interesting pen and ink and pencil sketches and it is hoped the portrait may be obtained from the Corcoran gallery, its present home, for the Atlanta exhibition.

Among the most interesting portraits of the exhibition will be that of James Branch Cabell, the author, and one of his sons, Ballard Cabell. Mr. Silvette's portrait of Dr. Harvey W. Cox, of Emory University, also will be shown. F. Scott Fitzgerald, the writer, and Edward V. Valentine, sculptor of the famous recumbent figure of General Lee, at Lexington, Va., are among the other subjects whose portraits will be hung here, together with a large number of additional paintings of distinguished people and interesting character studies.

In the Rogers-Shute exhibition, a variety of European scenes will be shown. Mr. Rogers will contribute mainly watercolors, a field in which he excels, while Mr. Shute's interesting pen and ink and pencil sketches also will be outstanding features. Irene Weir, artist, lecturer and writer, will speak at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the museum. The public is invited to hear her discuss, "The Spirit of Modern Art." There will be no charge.

EVANGELIST TO SHOW TRUTH OF PROPHECIES

"Rebuilding Palestine According to Prophecy," an illustrated lecture, will be presented at the North Avenue church at 7:30 o'clock Friday night by the Rev. George T. E. Davis, widely-known evangelist, lecturer and traveler.

Mr. Davis, who recently returned from Palestine, has written an account of his personal observations of the sensational events now transpiring there. In his lecture he will attempt to prove the changes taking place follow closely predictions of Bible prophets.

One of the most startling forecasts ever made was that of Jeremiah who more than 2,500 years ago predicted the boundaries of Jerusalem would be as they are today, Mr. Davis said.

Sales Representative Wanted

A large, nationally-known manufacturer of heating and air-conditioning equipment, for all fuels, is seeking an aggressive sales representative to take care of established accounts, and to build volume through new accounts, in the Southeastern States.

Robbed!

Just as surely as a thief takes your money can poor lighting rob you of an irreplaceable possession—your eyesight!

Insufficient light or harsh, glaring light are subtle bandits. They respect no persons, no ages. Your youngster, studying his lessons, is not immune. Gradually poor lighting wears out the countless nerves in your eyes, tears down the strength of the muscles. At first you may merely feel an uncomfortable and smarting sensation in your eyes, but poor lighting finally weakens the entire ocular system—even to the point where sight may fail.

Insure the safety, the clearness, the well-being of your sight. When you sew, or read, or play cards, or use your eyes for any indoor task, you need lights that are softly diffused and glareless, yet of sufficient intensity. Make sure there is enough evenly-distributed, general illumination in a room so your eyes won't have to adjust themselves continually to dark shadows every time you look up from your work.

Proper, adequate lighting costs little, if any, more than poor lighting. Our Home Lighting Advisors are equipped with delicate instruments that show at a glance whether or not your lighting is up to standard. We can tell you, too, of the simple, inexpensive ways of improving your lighting, if it needs it. A telephone call will bring a Lighting Advisor to your home—without cost or obligation of any sort on your part.

FAMOUS SPORT FILM TO BE SHOWN HERE

Fisher Body Employees and Families Invited to Evenings Show at Erlanger.

A full evening's entertainment is in store for employees of the Atlanta Fisher Body plant, Wednesday night, at the Erlanger theater here. Under the direction of officials of the company, arrangements have been made to bring to Atlanta, one of the most famous sport reels ever filmed, the title of which is, "Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

This picture was made and is being distributed throughout the country by the Fisher Body division of General Motors. It is released through the courtesy and co-operation of the league officials, club owners and players.

Stars of the American league speak for the first time, telling in their own words how they play their positions and giving advice to young athletes who would like to follow in their footsteps.

The picture includes such notables as Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, "car of baseball," Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia team; Hank Greenberg, of the Tigers; Tom Carey, of St. Louis, and many other famous baseball players.

Other features planned for the evening include a full reel devoted to the thrilling battle between the Detroit Tigers and the Cubs during the last World's Series. The recording being handled by the famous Ted Husing, ace sports announcer of the air.

This program has been hailed by sports writers all over the country as being one of the finest such productions ever shown, and should go a long way in teaching many young ball players the fine points of the game.

While the performance Wednesday night is not open to the public, officials of the company state that they are endeavoring to bring it back to Atlanta at an early date to run for their benefit.

PLYMOUTH TO HOLD FREE CLASSES HERE

Local Men Given Opportunity To Gain Positions on Sales Staffs.

As part of a nation-wide program by the Plymouth division of Chrysler Corporation, one of the three largest automobile companies in the world, a new kind of instruction will soon be offered here in Atlanta according to E. H. Osborne, special Plymouth representative.

The Plymouth program is one of selecting applicants for retail sales work and giving them what is said to be the most comprehensive course in training ever developed. For the convenience of people now otherwise employed, the classes are being held in the evening.

The first test of this plan was recently conducted in Detroit and resulted in the training and employment of over 300 men who had no previous experience in this field, Mr. Osborne said.

The course of training is called the Visual Sales Clinic as instruction is by means of slide film with sound. The 20 films in the course represent over six months of preparation and many thousands of dollars' investment by the Plymouth factory.

Headquarters for administration of the training and interviewing of applicants have been established by E. H. Osborne at 512 Spring street. George C. Currey, regional manager for Dodge division; George P. Dean, regional manager for the De Soto division; J. F. Armstrong, regional manager for the Chrysler Sales Division of Chrysler Corporation are also taking part in this huge program.

Leading Officials of Fisher Body Visit Atlanta

High officials of the Fisher Body Corporation were here this past week as the guests of J. W. Roach, general manager of the Atlanta plant operations, who honored their visit with an elaborate dinner and entertainment at the Athletic Club. E. F. Fisher, general manager for the company, gave an interesting talk on the corporation, its aims and purposes, the evening being brought to a successful conclusion with short talks by other visiting officials. The distinguished visitors and their hosts are shown above. They are, left to right, standing, E. L. Klett, assistant plant manager, Atlanta division; Dr. A. F. Lecklider, personnel director of Fisher Body; V. Koch, Fisher Body executive staff. Seated, E. W. Fox, general factory manager; E. F. Fisher, general manager; J. W. PLYMOUTH ANNOUNCES SEVEN-PASSENGER CAR

New Seven-Passenger Sedan Available on 125-Inch Wheelbase.

DETROIT, March 28.—(Special.) A seven-passenger car in the low-price field is announced by the Plymouth division of the Chrysler Corporation, to meet the demand of large families for a car that is at once large and economical. The new model is already in production and shipments are being made to dealers.

A wheelbase of 125 inches and an overall length of 203 3/8 inches make possible the increased passenger capacity. The two folding seats are 19 1/2 inches wide and 14 inches deep. The backs of these seats are 19 inches high, giving firm support and eliminating the need for sitting up "as straight as a stick." When not in use, the folding seats fit snugly behind the front seat. Individual foot rests add to the comfort of the rear passengers.

Both front and rear doors are six inches wider than other models. Correspondingly larger windows provide maximum visibility for the rear seat passengers. A built-in trunk accommodates luggage and enhances the smart appearance of the car.

The same economical, simple L-head engine found in other de luxe Plymouths powers the new seven-passenger model. Equal pressure hydraulic brakes, safety steel body and non-glare headlights are among its safety features.

Plymouth sales officials report a brisk demand for the seven-passenger de luxe sedan among large families and as a chauffeur-driven car. The new Plymouth is available in six standard colors: Black, middie blue, Palm Beach gray, Plymouth blue, aquamarine and gunmetal. It is priced at $885 (f. o. b. factory, Detroit).

CHEVROLET PRODUCTION PASSES HALF MILLION

Tremendous Demand Keeps Plants Running Full Force.

DETROIT, March 28.—Chevrolet has already built more than 530,000 1936 model cars and trucks, it was revealed here today by M. E. Coyle, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

Mr. Coyle's statement was made in answer to a question as to whether the earlier announcement of 1936 models had succeeded in leveling out employment to a greater degree than in previous years.

"Using the case of Chevrolet as an example," said Mr. Coyle, "we have already produced over 530,000 1936 cars and trucks. These were built during the winter months when employment would normally have been low."

"We have delivered cars to those financially able to make their purchases during the winter months. We have supplied our dealers with adequate stocks of new cars in various models and colors, so they are prepared to make immediate delivery. During the spring months we shall build sufficient cars to maintain dealers' stocks at proper levels."

"Therefore, as originally planned, this production and its consequent employment—formerly concentrated in the spring months—has been spread over late fall and winter, with results highly beneficial to all labor connected with the automotive industry."

A major factor in Chevrolet's achievement of high volume, Mr. Coyle said, has been the company's vigorous approach to the used car end of its business. Through the widespread and aggressive use of newspaper advertising, and with the hearty dealer co-operation secured by these factory aids, Chevrolet has effectively prevented any "used car problem" from arising to hamper the free movement of new merchandise, Mr. Coyle declared.

Ford V-8s Clean Up at Daytona Beach Road Race

Mechanical endurance and driver skill were tested to the full in the inaugural of the Daytona Beach road race. Twenty-seven cars started in a 250-mile race which involved two turns on each lap in getting from the road to the beach and back again. The turn soon were badly cut up, the loose sand becoming so deep that some cars had to be pulled out by wreckers. The race was stopped at 241 miles because the tide had risen so high that it was no longer safe to run on the beach. Of the 27 starters only 10 were left. The first seven and the tenth were Ford V-8s. Photo shows half a dozen cars coming into the turn from the beach. The winner, Milt Marion, of St. Albans, Vt., is at the extreme left, piloting a standard Ford V-8 roadster. He averaged 47.8 miles an hour. He collected $1,700 for his victory. Tommy Elmore, of Jacksonville, Fla., second, won $1,000. Ben Shaw, of Westfield, N. J., third, won $700.

BUICK TO BROADCAST SCHMELING-LOUIS GO

Company To Bring Blow by Blow Detail in Nationwide Hook-Up.

FLINT, Mich., March 28.—Harlow H. Curtice, president of the Buick Motor Company and an ardent fight fan, today announced that Buick will sponsor the broadcast of the Schmeling-Louis fight, scheduled for New York this summer.

Contracts have been signed with the promoters and arrangements have been made for a nationwide broadcast of the heavyweight match over a coast-to-coast NBC network, he said. He said he regards the bout as the outstanding pugilistic event of 1936.

Buick stepped into the spotlight as sponsors of major sports broadcasts when it put the Baer-Louis fight on the air last fall. The event was credited with establishing a peak in radio interest, and was the highlight of the sport last year. Announcers for the Schmeling-Louis fight have not yet been named.

gives economy without equal!

FOR ECONOMICAL
TRANSPORTATION

The Chevrolet engine is the most economical automobile engine produced today, because (1) it is a six-cylinder engine, and (2) it is a valve-in-head six-cylinder engine.

Its six cylinders use less gas and oil—in fact, use the least gas and oil—because six cylinders are the most economical combination used in modern automobiles.

Every test proves it's more economical . . . Every Chevrolet owner knows it's more economical . . . And every person will readily understand these simple A-B-C reasons why it is more economical

Its valve-in-head design cuts gasoline consumption still lower because there is less loss of heat through the walls of the combustion chamber in valve-in-head engines, and the advanced construction of the Chevrolet engine gives maximum heat (or power) saving.

Most important of all, Chevrolet's more efficient cooling system, pressurestreamlining and the greater accessibility of all working parts result in more dependable operation, over a longer period of time, with the lowest maintenance costs. Thus, Chevrolet's valve-in-head engine—only one of its kind in Chevrolet's price range—gives economy without equal.

BREAK O'DAY!

By Ralph McGill

We telephoned to say we'd like to come up.
"Gracious, yes," said Connie Mack.
And so, we went up and he met us in the hall.

The man is starting his 53d year in baseball and is to be 74 years old his next birthday. No one else in baseball has been around the terrestrial scene that long.

Since he caught his first game for Washington 50 years ago he has seen them come and go and quite a few of the great ones have played for him. Jack Combs, Chief Bender, Rube Waddell and Eddie Plank were a few of his pitchers. Eddie Collins, Danny Murphy, Harry Davis, Frank (Home Run) Baker, Stuffy McInnis—there were some of his old stars. He recently sold most of his new ones.

"What do I think the Red Sox will do with so many of my players? Why, I hope they do well. I think they will be up in there. They are laughing at them now because they have lost so many games in what they call the Grapefruit league. But that doesn't matter. I remember in 1930 I got so disgusted with my boys I packed up and left. So they got together and said they'd show the old man when the bell rang. And they did."

"The reason they couldn't win for me? Well, goodness gracious, that's easy. They didn't have enough pitching help. You've got to have pitching in baseball. And that's a fact. I've always said pitching was about 80 per cent of baseball success, but goodness, I guess you could say 90 per cent and not be wrong. So, I think the boys will do better. The Red Sox should be up in there all season. hope they will."

MATTY—THE GREATEST.

"You've looked at a lot of great pitchers, Mr. Mack," I said. "Would you name the greatest?"

"My goodness, that's difficult, you know. So many people have ideas. I always say Mathewson. Some of my boys didn't think so. Eddie Collins always used to say it was Walter Johnson, and Walter was a great pitcher. Gracious, yes."

"In 1905 in the World Series of that year, it was Mathewson who shut out in three games. We didn't get but 14 hits in the three games. He beat Eddie Plank in the first game and let us have just three hits. He beat us 9 to 0 in his second try, and struck out eight batters. And in his third game he beat Bender, allowing us just six hits. No one else ever did that."

"And then, in the 1911 series, he beat us another game. He beat us again in 1913. So, with all that in my mind and knowing what his record was in his own league, I've always said Matty was the greatest pitcher. But, my goodness, don't you know there were a lot of great ones."

"We never could get many runs for Eddie Plank. He was a great one. And there were others. But I stick to my pick of Mathewson."

IN TALKING OF GREAT PLAYERS.

"In talking of great players," said Connie Mack, crossing his long legs, "you eliminate Ty Cobb. He was far out in front as the greatest ball player of all time. So you say that and begin to talk about the others. Goodness, yes, Cobb was the greatest."

"My infield would be George Sisler, at first; Eddie Collins, at second; Honus Wagner, at short; and Jimmy Collins, at third. And in my outfield I'd put Cobb, Speaker and Ruth."

"I guess Frank Chance was perhaps the best first baseman. But, gracious, when you think of the man's character you don't consider him. I know some say you should but I don't. Sisler was a magnificent player. But those are just my choices."

THE YOUNG BALL PLAYER'S PROBLEM.

"Mr. Mack," I said, "after 52 years of baseball you probably have some idea of what a young ball player should consider when he debates taking up baseball or business."

"Well," he said, "I'll tell you. I always tell them this. If he is a young fellow with an education and an opportunity I always tell them to forget baseball unless they can make the major leagues. That's what I tell them."

"But if it's a boy who hasn't much chance I advise baseball. I remember a boy from Georgia. I let him out and he came to me and asked me what to do. We'll call him Jack. Well, I said to him, 'Jack, can you get a job making $50 a week?' And he said he couldn't. He said about the best he could do was a mill job making $15 a week. So I told him to stay with baseball and that the best he could do was about Class A. And for him to live on $15 and save the rest. He did pretty well. I don't know if he saved his money."

"And then, there was another fellow. His parents were well fixed and the boy had an education. He was a great college player. I looked at him a week and then I told him to go on home and forget baseball. He'd

JONES DISPLAYS GREATEST FORM SINCE RETIRING

Atlantan Would Like To Have Saved This Round for Tournery.

By Alan Gould.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 28.—(AP)—Using the original of his famous putter, "Calamity Jane," with a scoring touch such as he has rarely experienced, even at the height of his career, Bobby Jones cracked the Augusta National course record today with a 64, eight under par.

Needing a birdie three on the last hole to better the mark which he shared with the club pro, Ed Dudley, Jones fired a magnificent iron shot to the green, hole high and a yard from the cup, then sank the putt for his ninth birdie and a new practice record. Bob set a course mark of 65 two years ago. He and Dudley have duplicated it.

Only a handful of spectators saw the retired world champion of golf go on a scoring spree in a friendly foursome, the other members of which were Dudley, Albert (Scotty) Campbell, the Seattle amateur, and Johnny Dawson, of Chicago. They were rewarded by fireworks such as Jones seldom has produced since his retirement in 1930, after registering his celebrated "grand slam."

As a forerunner to his third annual return to the competitive scene, in the Augusta National tournament, which starts here next Thursday, the great Georgian's performance verified reports that he is now playing better golf than at any time in the past six years. He looks now as a distinct threat to the professional brigade already foregathering at the course which Jones himself designed, but Bob voiced a somewhat general sentiment when he remarked, "It was fun to see 'em drop the way they did today but I'd like to have saved that round for the tournament next week."

The Jones who took the course apart today, under favorable conditions and with everything "clicking," looked more like the world champion of 1930 than the Atlanta lawyer who has been a genial host at Augusta in each of the past two years, but a decidedly erratic golfer. He has recovered confidence, apparently, along with his putting touch.

"He's playing his best golf since he retired, without any question," said Dudley. "He has been consistently under 70 here this spring, playing just as well as he did today except that he has not so many putts dropped. Bob is ripe for a comeback. He will be very much in the running in this tournament."

Playing the course in "reverse"—starting, that is, on the last nine, Jones found "Calamity Jane" so useful that he had to resort to a 25-foot putter on the 10th and 11th, and a 25-footer on the 5th to save a par four, after mislaying three consecutive holes. When he failed to drop a 10-footer on the 8th, for a birdie, his chances for a new course record appeared slim, but he came through with a spectacular birdie three on the 9th and last hole.

There were no conceded putts, aside from the few with which the club pro, Ed Dudley, conceded the cup. It wasn't necessary to concede Jones anything inasmuch as his first putt dropped on all but seven holes. The former world champion has regained his putting touch with the club that originally figured in his rise to golfing fame. It was a gift when he was a youngster of 16. The last time he used it on competition was in winning the 1926 open championship at Scioto, Columbus.

He had a replica forged, which he used until retirement. He dug the original out of the attic this winter, while rummaging around; had it polished up, and is acting now like the Jones of old on the green.

"It's just like an old friend now," said Bob. "I was just lucky today, of course. The ball kept going up to the cup and acting as though it had eyes, but don't put too much stress on these practice rounds. I hope to do better this year but member it's a different proposition when every shot counts."

Dudley had a 68, Campbell a 73 for his first four of the course, and Dawson a 75. Par and Jones' card for the round:

Par out	454	443	454	36
Jones out	343	345	344	32
Par in	443	445	444	36

The Syracuse winners were Ord Pink, 155-pounder, and Ray Jeffries, 165, while Duke's two winners were Danny Farrar, 145, and Ray Matulewicz, 175. Advance sale has been very brisk and prospects are good for a crowd of better than 21,000. The goal set by President Earl Mann is $5,000. There will be seating capacity for 20,000. And an additional 5,000 fans can easily be accommodated.

Grand Old Man of Diamond Builds for the Future at 73

Baseball's grandest figure is Connie Mack, 73-year-old leader of the Athletics, who are in Atlanta for two games with the Crackers. After 52 years in baseball and at an age when most men would be confined to their rocking chairs, this amazing leader is building for two or three seasons ahead as he cheerfully goes about the business of reconstructing his team, almost wrecked last year by the sale of leading stars. Baseball's greatest trader and peddler appeared as youthful and energetic yesterday as he did 10 years ago. See Ralph McGill's Break o' Day. Staff photo.

Kelley Best Prospect On Staff, Says Mack

Connie Figures Former Cracker To Shine With A's This Year as a Starter.

By Jack Troy.

Connie Mack, hale and hearty and very keen at the age of 73, said yesterday that he expected Harry Kelley to win as many ball games as the next one on his Athletic pitching staff this summer. Kelley not only will be retained, but the veteran A's chief thinks he will star.

"Kelley knows how to pitch," said Mr. Mack, "and I regard him as the best prospective winner on my staff. Pitching and catching are our weak spots. And I think Kelley will help us immeasurably."

"Kel pitched the full game against Cincinnati the other day and, although beaten, 5 to 4, he gave up only five hits. I thought he looked very good. He is in excellent condition and his arm is in fine shape."

"Yes, I will pitch Kelley against your Crackers Sunday. I thought the fans would like to look at him again."

Mr. Mack, who had never seen Kelley, was amazed at his chunkiness when King Kel reported at the A's training camp.

"I asked Kel," continued Mr. Mack, "if he were not a bit heavy. Of course, never having seen him, I didn't know he was that big. He reported weighing 212 and told me, he was only about four pounds overweight."

"He has waited a long time for his chance in major league baseball, and I am sure, barring break, he will win as many games as any Athletic pitcher."

Mr. Mack is delighted at the way Wally Moses, Vidalia boy, has come back from his injury. Moses is the regular right fielder.

"Wally is looking fine and should have a good year," he declared. Moses batted .325 in 85 games and was hailed as the rookie sensation of the league. He ran into a wall going after a hard hit ball and was forced out of the remaining games.

The apple of Mr. Mack's eye among the Georgia boys on his squad is Lamar Newsome, of Columbus.

"Newsome is as fine a fielding shortstop as there is in the American league," Mr. Mack declared flatly. He can field with any of them and is developing as a hitter.

Newsome hit .207 in 49 games last season. Mr. Mack declared that Newsome is a shortstop other clubs will be wanting badly in the future.

Bubba Yarter, the Atlanta boy who played for the Inman Park Cardinals in 1929, will not play regularly but is considered a fine prospect. Yarter has been appearing in all the exhibition games. He played second one game and short the rest of the time. He hit a triple with the bases full against Cincinnati this past week. Yarter probably will be farmed for more seasoning.

Mr. Mack has no other Georgia boys on his squad. He feels very fortunate in having the three and Kelley.

The chief worries Mr. Mack has about his current Athletic team is, as mentioned, over the pitching and catching. And King Kelley is expected to be a sort of Moses in this respect. He can't do it alone, but he can help a lot.

And the fans may make their plans in advance to attend today's game at

PICARD EASILY WINS PLAYOFF

Henry Beats Mangrum by Five Strokes To Gain $1,000 Purse.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 28.—(AP)—Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., won the north and south open golf championship today by defeating Ray Mangrum, of Pittsburgh, by 5 strokes, in an 18-hole playoff for the title.

Picard shot a 72 for the round and Mangrum 77.

The Hershey pro gained a 6-stroke lead on the outward nine, shooting it in 33 with brilliant putting, against a 38 for Mangrum. After 12 holes he was 8 strokes in front and with the title tucked away played out the round raggedly.

They were not in dire need of all six of the runs they made in the eighth yesterday, but it pleased the fans to see the display of the old punch.

The big eighth was a riot of base hits, featuring Bus Chatham's tremendous home run in the republicans stands with a couple of runners waiting.

Peyton Burkhalter

GAINEVILLE, Fla., March 28.—(AP)—Peyton B. Burkhalter, Jacksonville, was today named president of the Florida Sport Writers' Association.

Twenty-two members of the association, guests of the University of Florida athletic department at a luncheon here today, also elected the following officers for the coming year: Dinty Dennis, Miami; Byron Hollingsworth, Tampa; and Walter Lynch, Jacksonville, vice president; and Earl Blue, Gainesville, secretary.

Josh Cody and Lewie Hardage, Florida's new grid mentors, in a talk during the luncheon pledged the cooperation of the coaching staff to the state press and outlined plans for the coming grid season.

FAVORITE WINS.

NASSAU, Bahamas, March 28.—(AP)—Adrian Iselin's Long Island Sound, N. Y., yacht Ace finally fulfilled her threat as a favorite in the international star class races here today, winning the third heat for the Johnnie Walker trophy and tying for second place in total points.

Elrod To Continue

As Park Announcer

W. H. (Fat) Elrod will do the announcing at Ponce de Leon park with his faithful megaphone until such time as engineers are able to perfect the loudspeaker system, it was announced yesterday.

For some reason the loudspeaker system has not been a howling success at the park and Cracker officials feel Elrod will give more satisfaction.

It is possible that the trouble will be located during the season. Until then, Elrod will keep the fans informed.

HOOKS, CHATHAM HT HOME RUNS FOR CHAMPIONS

Schmidt in Fine Form for 7 Frames; Durham Faces Kelly Today.

By Jack Troy.

Those Atlanta Crackers, champions of the Southern league and determined to repeat, warned Harry Kelley in advance yesterday when they belted two Philadelphia Athletics pitchers out of the box to win their opening home exhibition of the season, 11 to 4.

Kelley, who led the Atlanta pitchers last year and who was later drafted by the A's and crafty Connie Mack, is due to face the murderous budgeons of his former teammates this afternoon at 2 o'clock. And the best idea for King Kel seems to be to throw his best pitch, duck and back up third base.

This idea may be all wrong, but the Crackers yesterday looked like major league material and the A's, consequently, were made to look a trifle bad. Alex Hooks, former Athletic first baseman, made Mr. Mack sit up and take notice as he hit a home run and fielded exceptionally. Buster Chatham, another two-gun Texan, put the game beyond recall with an other circuit wallop.

The opening day turnout was rather slim, there being no more than 2,500 customers in the stand and bleachers. But those who came did not regret it for a minute. There was never a dull moment.

The Crackers, tuned to pennant pitch, assailed Bephtacted Bill Dietrich and assaulted Matuszak, who followed Dietrich at the start of the seventh.

Matuszak failed to get a single Cracker out. But the Crackers got him out with a walk and four consecutive hits, the climactic blow being Chatham's homer with two on. All this accounted for five runs and Matuszak's departure. Summons followed and managed to get the side out with only two more hits and one more run.

At Puccinelli made the situation rather tense in the eighth when he entered the game as a pinch hitter for Lamar (Skeet) Newsome. Columbus started bang and the republicans stands with Ogleby, who had walked, on base ahead of him. The blow came off Bud Thomas, who had just replaced Bill Schmidt. It made the score 5 to 4 in favor of the Crackers and put the A's back in the running briefly.

They were not in dire need of all six of the runs they made in the eighth yesterday, but it pleased the fans to see the display of the old punch.

The big eighth was a riot of base hits, featuring Bus Chatham's tremendous home run in the republicans stands with a couple of runners waiting.

Southern Managers Express Doubts Crackers Will Win Again

TOO EARLY YET TO PICK CHAMP, PILOTS ASSERT

'Letdown Effect Typical of Flag Winner Facing Atlanta'—Doc.

By Kenneth Gregory.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

While in agreement that Atlanta's Crackers are the logical choice for the 1936 Southern association pennant, some of the managers of other clubs have doubts the local entry will repeat its championship act.

The current attitude is that the training season still is too young to make predictions of the finish with any degree of accuracy, yet the pre-campaign ballparks are well under way. Atlanta finished first last season, leading New Orleans under the tape by six games, and won the pennant in the round-robin Shaughnessy play-off by surviving series with Nashville and New Orleans.

As far as the pennant is concerned, the Shaughnessy play-off is out for 1936. The club on top after 154 games gets the flag. The winner of the post-season series will be rewarded with the privilege of playing in the Dixie series against the Texas league champion. The pennant-winning team divides $2,000 from receipts of the Dixie series.

SAME OLD STORY.

"Picking the pennant winner," says Manager Doc Prothro, of the Little Rock Travelers, "is about the same every spring. First you take the clubs with the most money—Atlanta, New Orleans, Memphis and Birmingham. You're usually safe in picking Nashville for fifth and Chattanooga, Little Rock and Knoxville follow in that order."

Atlanta, he says, looks like the strongest club in the circuit at present, but the "letdown effect typical of a pennant winner might cost them the flag this year."

The Traveler pilot says Birmingham seems to have strengthened as much as any club and probably will finish notches higher.

Jane Richbourg, manager of the Nashville Vols, is one who believes Atlanta will have tough sledding. "I'll tell you the main reason," he said, "Atlanta is going to find it tough to stay in first place because they have lost Harry Kelley. Say what you want to, he was the most valuable ball player they had."

"Kelley won about 23 games in the records and I'll bet he stepped in there as a reliever and saved at least a dozen others."

"If Atlanta had not had Kelley the club would have been lucky to finish in the first division."

CLOSE, SAYS LARRY.

The veteran Larry Gilbert, New Orleans manager who is starting his 20th season in the association, the 13th as pilot of the Pelicans, predicts a much closer race than last year, basing his belief on a better-balanced league.

New Orleans, I believe, is certain to be in the Shaughnessy play-off, since we are much stronger in the hurling department than last year," he says.

"Atlanta is certain to be right up there, as Eddie Moore has most of his championship club back."

"I think Memphis and Nashville will probably land in the first division along with Atlanta and New Orleans."

"Birmingham might prove the surprising club, since it surely will show improvement by virtue of its working agreement with the Chicago Cubs. Red Sox assistance should help Knoxville and Doc Prothro will improve his Little Rock club. Chattanooga has the most May be very good or pretty bad."

EXTRA MAN HELPS.

"The addition of another Class A man to each club ought to help everyone, as all will be allowed to carry 11 class players this year."

Knoxville's Snooks, last-place club in 1935, are selected for the first division by the team's newly-installed manager, the veteran Jess Petty. He picks Atlanta, New Orleans, Memphis and Knoxville to finish in the order named, leaving Birmingham, Chattanooga, Nashville and Little Rock to "fight it out for places in the lower division."

"Atlanta," he says, "will be very tough and is the favorite to win the pennant."

"New Orleans will be tough. Chattanooga has an improved club. Rizzo Stephenson has a pretty good club at Birmingham. Knoxville has the most improved club in the league and has added strength coming."

"Birmingham, Chattanooga, Nashville, Memphis and Knoxville appear to be of equal strength at this time."

Some of the Actors--Ready for the Dog Show--in Atlanta This Week

The annual Atlanta Kennel Club show will be held in Atlanta this week with many fine entries. At the left is a Welch terrier, a rare breed, owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Laughridge. It is Ginger Von Sonnebach. In the center are two fox hounds, owned by Stone Crane, of Georgia and Alabama. They are Walker hounds. Top is "Ralph McGill," named for The Constitution's sports editor. Below is "Jack Dempsey," in honor of the former champion. At the right is Dr. Julian Riley's cocker spaniel, "Smoky Joe."

Atlanta Dog Show Draws 350 Entries

Local Champions To Compete in Largest Show in History of Kennel Club.

After an exciting rush of last-minute entries the lists for the Atlanta Dog Show to be held on April 3 and 4 stand complete.

A record-breaking entry of about 350 dogs is listed in the event sponsored by the Atlanta Kennel Club.

Not only is there to be quantity—quality as well. No less than 13 champions, veterans of many a hotly contested show ring battle, will grace the benches of the Atlanta show.

These are not entered in regular classes and therefore will not interfere with the climb of aspiring candidates for the supreme honor, but after all regular classes in their breeds are closed these champions will enter the ring to compete for the honor of best of breed, the coveted award which permits the winner to enter the keen competition of the variety classes on the final night.

Rebel Stardust, a beautiful wire owned by Jack Savage, Atlanta, will be a strong competitor. The Little Rebel won the Knoxville show last week, beating a field of more than 250 dogs to go best-in-show.

It was the first show in which she had competed but she won by a wide margin. It was a real Atlanta victory in the dog world. Most Atlanta victories have been won with dogs purchased or bred here and then sold to other owners in other cities.

Champion Eastern Starlight, the dam, is the only wire-haired A. K. C. champion in Georgia. The sire was Champion Lone Eagle.

Rebel Stardust seems to be on her way to a championship. The victory at Knoxville was won over some very real competitors.

There is always a race to see which breed has the most entries. Last year the peppy little wire-haired fox terriers led the rest, followed by Scottish terriers, chows and Boston terriers. This year the merry little Cocker spaniel will be represented by more than 32, Boston 32, with wires and American fox hounds hard on their heels.

Lovers of hunting dogs, and their number is great, have a treat in store for them, with a splendid entry of over 125 fine dogs, pointers, setters (English and Irish), spaniels (Cocker, English springer and Irish water). There will be beagles, dachshunds (both smooth and long-haired), and fine entry of 25 magnificent fox hounds.

Four of the English setters are champions, and what a sight it will be to see them stand like statues cut from marble while Vinton Breeze, the judge, takes the measure of their perfections. There are two champion pointers and a smooth and long-haired dachshund champion.

The working breeds include collies, German shepherds, Great Danes, Doberman (another champion here), a Samoyede and 11 Shetland sheepdogs (miniature collies).

Terriers always command an enthusiastic following. They are second only in numerical strength to the hunting dogs. They will be airedales, Cairns, terriers (smooth and wire), Schnauzers (miniature and wire).

No show would be complete without the familiar faces of the handlers. Genial freckled Charlie Davis will be usual set a perfect example of how to show a setter. R. L. Davis (not his brother) is bringing a champion pointer and Doberman. Strings of other canine stars will be in the hands of Charles Palmer, Everett Fread, Philip Prentice, A. H. McWethy and Alf Lovridge. The popular local handlers, L. F. Schever and Benno Stein, will have as usual many fine dogs in their care.

These Boston champions will also compete for best brace in the show, where the dogs are shown as matched pairs, a very beautiful sight and new to Atlanta dog lovers. There will also be braces of Dalmatians, Sealyhams and dachshunds.

CAMILLA MEET SLATED APRIL 9

CAMILLA, Ga., March 28.—Amateur golfers from all over southwest Georgia will meet at the Camilla Country Club Thursday, April 9, to compete in a one-day tournament and to assist in the dedication of the new $4,000 clubhouse which was recently completed.

Committees in charge are working feverishly this week to complete preparations for a gala day of sport to be combined with one of those famous southern barbecues.

The tournament is open to any amateur who wishes to enter and offers a very attractive and unusual system of prizes. Players will be grouped in flights of eight, and three prizes will be given for each flight—a winner, a runner-up and a consolation.

Qualifying rounds are optional—they can be played on either the Camilla course or the player's own course so long as the score card is turned in to the committee before 10 a. m. C. S. T. of the day of the tournament. This is to aid players coming from a distance who would prefer to qualify the day before on their own courses. All prizes will be serviceable awards—gold bars, balls, etc. Entrance fee is $1.50.

A beautiful new clubhouse has recently been completed, with the aid of WPA funds, on the Camilla golf course and this tournament is to be an official dedication. The building embodies every convenience for the golfer—locker rooms, lounge, showers and an assembly room. A deep, shady porch running across one whole side of the house affords a splendid view of nearly half the course for weary spectators who don't care to follow each player. The building is constructed along rustic lines and is attractively finished in brown and white.

Invitations have been issued to every club in southwest Georgia and a large list of entries is expected. Ample facilities will be provided to handle the crowd. There is no general admission charge, only the entrance fee for players, and spectators are urged to come not only to inspect the new building and grounds but to enjoy a day of sport as guests of the Camilla Country Club. Festivities will be climaxed with a dance.

Atlanta's golf courses have shown a tremendous increase in play in the past month over previous springs and in some instances extra calls have been sent out for caddies.

The municipal courses have shown a greater increase than the private layouts, the records show.

Newbold Topper, undoubtedly one of the best ever bred in America, owned by Paul Hamer, of Atlanta. Another Atlanta-owned one will be the nationally known Scottish terrier, Ch. Ramon Certainity, belonging to I. J. Osburn. Another Scotchman, Ch. Barbary, known as Brandy, and the famous wire, Ch. Crackley Startler, of Wildonks.

In the toy class will be found these orientals of proud lineage, the Pekingeses, the saucy little Pomeranians, and the pugs, which have staged a comeback to popular favor. Toy breeds rarely seen, the papillon or butterfly dog, and the Mexican hairless have been entered.

Non-sporting breeds, led by the heavy Boston terrier entry, include chows, English bulldogs, with the local champion, Mrs. H. F. Cogill's Ch. Westford's Lord Lochaber, Dalmatians, and French bulldogs. There are two Boston champions, entered by Mrs. V. C. Kalar, of New Orleans. Ch. Kid Boots Step Up and Ch. Kid Boots Mary Ann.

'Moving Finger Writes--Having Writ Moves On'

One Year Ago Today Present Sport Champs Were in Obscurity.

By Jack Diamond.
NEW YORK, March 28.—(UP)—The moving finger writes, and having writ moves on.

A year ago today the heavyweight boxing championship of the world, often termed the most precious bauble in all fistfights, nestled in a champagne bucket at the dancing feet of rollicking Maxie Baer, whose next title defense was believed to be against the Black Uhlan, Max Schmeling, of Germany.

A year ago today Mr. George Herman Ruth was the magnetic box office attraction of the Boston Braves' training camp at St. Petersburg, luring thousands of average citizens through the turnstiles for the sole privilege of seeing the Bam in the flesh. At this early stage the Braves had garnered more coin than they had during the entire 1934 training trip.

And Mr. Ruth—as second vice president and assistant manager; how he loved a title—derived a personal sense of those earnings.

A year ago today a Jersey dock-walker named James J. Braddock, weighing 182 1/4, won a 16-round decision before 11,000 customers in Madison Square Garden over flashy Art Lasky, of Minneapolis, weight 197.

Braddock was credited with winning nine rounds, losing one for a low blow.

A year ago today Mr. Jerome Herman Dean was dominating the grapefruit circuit as the St. Louis Cardinals' $18,500 pitcher—stamped and sealed without the benefit of money pre-season ballyhoo—drawing derisive hoots from the exhibition game crowd for his boastful antics but winning games in a decisive manner.

A year ago today a former National A. A. U. light-heavyweight champion, Joe Louis, of Detroit, 20, in his eighth month as a professional, was signed by Promoter Michael Straus Jacobs, of the Twentieth Century Club, for a June fight in New York with the penultimate world champion, Primo Carnera, of Italy.

A year ago today Head Play, Mrs. Silas B. Mason's 5-year-old chestnut retired to stud this week at her Lexington, Kentucky, farm—zipped through the mud to victory in the $25,000 Bay Meadows handicap, piloted by Jockey Charley Kurtzinger, who established the Kentucky Derby record on Twenty Grand in 1931.

"The moving finger writes; and having writ moves on; nor all your piety and shallow love can keep it from a word of it."

Shall I tell you of a check half a line Nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

Former champion of both the welterweight and middleweight battalions, the pug-nosed Irish crowd-pleaser carried a bushel of money with his two fists and dashed it out with the same abandon. He was a "soft touch"—no one could grab a check quicker.

"A couple of years ago we were talking about the dough I'd made," continued the brown-haired innkeeper, "and just for the hell of it, I went upstairs through my old trunks for the canceled checks."

"We counted up to $1,300,000 and we were still counting. I got burned up—I didn't have anything. I mean—I and I threw the whole works into the fireplace. I must have made close to $1,000,000 altogether. I did put aside about $350,000 for my family and figured it'd be there when I got through fighting; but in the meantime I had a split-up with my wife and she got all of that, too."

GOOD FIGHTER. Cheerfully, genially, Mickey now dispenses a cordial handshake and a nod in the pug-nosed Irish crowd-pleaser's clients with the ring possibilities of "his boy," 21-year-old Lou Berg, of Pittsburgh, a 210-pounder under the Walker wing.

"A hell of a fighter, he is, really," he confides. "In 18 amateur fights he had 16 or 17 knockouts. In his last fight he turned professional and he stole the show."

Berg is doing all of Mickey's fighting nowadays, although the stout-hearted champion assayed a hapless comeback a few months ago.

"I'm through, myself," he concedes. "Against these kids I find I'm losing the old speed—old cuts open up on me—it's no good."

DIAMOND HOPES LOW AT FLORIDA; NO EXPERIENCE

Schedule Opens With Auburn April 15; Then Oglethorpe.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., March 28.—(AP)—Coach Ben Clements and his University of Florida baseball team need some experienced ball players more than anything else to get a good start on a 15-game schedule.

Captain Johnny Seay, of Ocala, is a seasoned catcher and a good hitter. Jess Parker and Paul Shelly, both of Tallahassee, form the backstop reserve and four others are expected in the camp when spring football training ends.

There is only one veteran pitcher—Newt Jackson, of Largo. Eddie Joe Long has been moved in from the outfield and will try his hand on the mound but he has had no hurling experience since his high school days. There are seven other candidates but Clements so far is not enthusiastic about them.

THE SCHEDULE. April 15-16—Auburn at Auburn. April 17-18—Oglethorpe at Atlanta. April 20-21—Georgia at Athens. April 22-23—Oglethorpe at Gainesville. May 2-3—Rollins at Winter Park. May 11-12—Georgia at Gainesville. May 13-14—Rollins at Gainesville. A game also will be arranged with the Gainesville entry in the state league.

Infielders Needed At Vanderbilt. NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 28.—(AP)—Give Coach Bill Schwartz a pair of good infielders and he'll be ready for one of the best baseball seasons in recent years at Vanderbilt University.

Pitching Trouble Threatens Mississippi. UNIVERSITY, Miss., March 28.—(AP)—Pitching difficulties can be surmounted, the University of Mississippi will place a strong baseball team in Southeastern conference this year.

Only one regular hurler returns to work with four infielders and two outfielders, starters last season, for the current campaign.

Herb Baumgartner, who lined up with Marcus Beddenfield and Bert Hodge to form a capable mound corps in 1935, is the man on whom Coaches Webb Duke and Tad Smith must depend.

Howard McWilliams, reserve; Tom Savage, a promising sophomore, and Clark Holman, the flashy sprinter, are other players who are the other aspirants to pitching duty.

NEW ORLEANS, March 28.—(AP) Coach Fritz Oakes is developing a new track team at Tulane University.

With only two lettermen returning and a few freshmen, Oakes is looking for a strong team to compete in the South-eastern conference, including Louisiana State, defending champion, and Alabama, runner-up in last year's title met.

Braddock Returns To Benning April 13. COLUMBUS, Ga., March 28.—(AP) James J. Braddock, world's heavyweight boxing champion, is to appear in a three-round exhibition match at the Fort Benning gymnasium April 13. Captain Lewis C. Barnes announced today.

Braddock was here in an exhibition several weeks ago.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 28.—(AP)—Mickey Makar, former golden gloves champion from Bayonne, N. J., today signed articles for a 10-round bout with Jimmy Leto, welterweight contender from Tampa, here next Tuesday night.

Former champion of both the welterweight and middleweight battalions, the pug-nosed Irish crowd-pleaser carried a bushel of money with his two fists and dashed it out with the same abandon. He was a "soft touch"—no one could grab a check quicker.

"A couple of years ago we were talking about the dough I'd made," continued the brown-haired innkeeper, "and just for the hell of it, I went upstairs through my old trunks for the canceled checks."

Stars of Tennis and Golf Play Exhibition Matches Here Today

BELL, STOEFFEN, VINES AND LOTT MEET ON COURT

Biltmore Club at Fourth and Juniper Is Scene of Games.

By Betty Mathis.

When Ellsworth Vines, Berkeley Bell, George Lott and Lester Stoeffen take the courts this afternoon at the Biltmore Tennis Club, Atlanta fans will witness one of the greatest arrays of tennis talent, professional or amateur, ever assembled here. The courts are at Fourth and Juniper.

The match, which begins at 2:30, will see Vines, considered the greatest player of the day, meeting Bell. Lott and Stoeffen, the world's greatest doubles team, will temporarily break up this combination when they play in the other singles tilt.

Afterwards Vines and Bell will take on Lott and Stoeffen in doubles.

Vines hits the ball even harder than Tilden did in his heyday. According to the scientific measurements of Dr. J. F. Strawn, of the University of Pennsylvania, his ball is traveling at his opponent at a rate of more than two miles a minute.

VERY SERIOUS.

Vines is very serious about his tennis and looks tired and care-worn on the court. His play is exactly contrary to his appearance, however.

Stoeffen, next to Vines, is the most technically perfect of the four who play here today. All he lacks is experience and he is gaining that fast in the professional ranks.

George Lott, Stoeffen's doubles partner, has the international reputation of being the greatest doubles player who ever walked onto a court. He is a master of strategy. His clowning on or off the court is famous in tennis playing circles.

BELL, UNORTHODOX.

Berkeley Bell, the other member of the foursome, is from Austin, Texas. He is the newest recruit to the professional ranks. His play is spectacular, but unorthodox. His daring volleys at the net and the resulting falls make his play exciting for both spectator and opponent. His never-say-die spirit, much like that of our own Bitzy Grant, makes him a universal favorite of the grandstands.

Another group of professionals, including Big Bill Tilden, Bruce Barnes, Jane Sharp and Mrs. Ethel Burkhardt Arnold, will play at the Biltmore club in April.

EMORY BEGINS DIAMOND PLAY

Six teams will be included in the league. Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors, Seniors, Lawyers and Meds. Theology students will play with the Lawyers, while the graduate candidates will band with the Seniors.

The schedule for the first half follows:

W. P. A. Meeting Set for Tuesday

The recreation department of the WPA, co-operating with the Greater Atlanta Softball Association, will hold their second meeting Tuesday, March 27, at 8 p. m. in the assembly hall of the Chamber of Commerce. The response of the teams and the interest in general concerning the program is more than gratifying. The outlook is very good for a most successful season. The managers of the above 79 teams and any other teams desiring to enter these leagues are requested to be present, as the various leagues will be organized. Matters concerning each individual league will be discussed. Any further information may be obtained by calling Walnut 5180 or at 72 Love street, S. W.

Principals in Exhibition Matches Here Today

Babe Didrikson, long-hitting Texas golfer, is pictured with Howard Beckett, professional of the Capital City Country Club, and Dorothy Kirby, 16-year-old Georgia champion. Miss Didrikson and Johnny Owens, city open champion, will play against Dorothy and Charlie Black Jr. The match will start at 2 o'clock at the Capital

City course. In the lower panel are George Lott, considered the greatest doubles player in tennis today, and Ellsworth Vines, who is first on every list of tennis players in the world today. Along with Berkeley Bell and Lester Stoeffen, they will play an exhibition match at the Biltmore Tennis Club this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GOLF RIVALRY TO BE RENEWED AT EAST LAKE

Atlanta, Birmingham Link Stars Compete Here This Morning.

Atlanta and Birmingham will renew their golf rivalry in a 36-hole match today on the East Lake course. The Atlanta team, paced by Charlie Yates and Dr. Julius Hughes, defeated the Birmingham Athletic Club team last Sunday, 16 to 11, on the two Birmingham courses.

The first 18 of today's 36 holes will be played at 9 o'clock on the No. 1 course, with the finals scheduled for 2 o'clock on the No. 2 course.

East Lake's team will be the same as that which beat Birmingham, with Charlie Yates and Julius Hughes making up the first pair. Scott Hudson Jr. and L. R. Hunter will form the second pair, and Dick Garlington and Frank Riley will play the third team.

Sam Perry, former southern amateur champion, will head Birmingham's team and will play with John Thames in the foursome with Yates and Hughes.

Hugh Morrow and Frank Blackford will oppose Hudson and Hunter, while Garlington and Riley's opponents will come from Atwell Brown, Gene Munger or Bill McWane.

Immediately following today's match with Birmingham, Yates will leave the city for Augusta, where he will participate in the Masters' invitation tournament, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

MERRYMAN, DODD LEAD AT ANSLEY

C. A. Merryman and Johnny Dodd went into the lead with a 67 Saturday afternoon in the qualifying round for the annual best ball tournament on the Ansley Park course.

Gene Galliard and D. Lee Wicker with a 71, turned in last Sunday, hold second place.

The qualifying rounds will close this afternoon with match play scheduled to open Monday. One week will be given over to each round of play.

Joe Golder, W. O. Cherry, C. A. Merryman, E. L. Robinson, J. H. Scott and J. L. Parker divided first prize Saturday afternoon in a blind bogey on the Ansley Park course. The winning score was 72.

Finishing one stroke away from the leaders in second place were Riley Elder, L. P. Kent, Ed Merritt, E. N. Byrd, S. H. Gray, C. T. Ansley, Dr. Frank Layman and W. J. Stoddard.

W. F. Goddard won the booby prize.

Hughes Cards 67 At East Lake.

Julius Hughes won individual scoring honors Saturday on the No. 2 East Lake course with a 67, as more than 200 players trekked over the two courses.

Hughes played in a foursome with Scott Hudson Jr., L. R. Hunter and Bill Terrell and was practicing for a 36-hole match today with Birmingham's golfers, on both East Lake courses.

Five golfers tied for the top prize in the regular Saturday afternoon blind bogey on the two courses. The winning score was 75 and those sharing the prizes were Travis Johnson, C. O. Long, E. D. Key, W. L. Markert and E. Normandine.

Second place also was well divided when L. C. Barton, F. S. Adkins, Mike Benton, H. P. Bond and A. M. Perkinson finished one stroke away from the leaders.

Others near the top were Keith Conway, J. A. Vaughn, J. P. Wilhoit, Dr. R. L. Dement, Wimberly Peters, H. T. Dobbs, J. C. Malone, W. P. Hammond, L. D. Thompson, M. M. Smith and P. D. McCriley.

Dr. C. W. Strickler won the booby prize of one golf ball.

Irby Sets Pace At Capital City.

Alton Irby Jr., with a 69, two strokes under par, set the pace Saturday afternoon as more than 200 golfers played over the Capital City Country Club course.

Irby was one of the better players in the blind bogey, but was nowhere near the winning score.

Six players, P. C. McDuffie Jr., H. H. Sampson, Roby Robinson, Joe Cooper, C. M. Watts and H. W. Barber shared first prize in the bogey with 77's.

One stroke away from the leaders in second place were G. C. Conn, P. C. McDuffie Jr., Johnny Owens, C. M. Leroux, J. M. Callaway and Frank Carter. R. P. McLeary, H. F. Cogill and Allen Gottschaldt were other winners in the bogey.

Following close behind Irby in the individual scoring were Hugh Carter Jr., Dr. Cy Strickler Jr., Henry Morgan, Harvey Hill and Charlie Black Jr., practicing for today's exhibition with Johnny Owens, Dorothy Kirby and Babe Didrikson.

Five Golfers Tie At Druid Hills.

Druid Hills golfers jammed the course Saturday as R. P. Black, Frank Boyce, W. A. Rhodes, J. M. Goldard and Tom Bradford divided top prize in the blind bogey with 73's.

Second in the bogey were C. E. Conkin, Arthur Burdett, E. A. Banker, J. O. Knight, R. E. Brookshire, Dr. J. J. Clarke, S. P. Peacock and Dr. D. McCormack.

Capitol Sponsors Flood Relief Shoot

A special benefit shoot will be held at the Capitol Club today, with all the proceeds going to the American Red Cross for its flood relief fund.

Six trophies for the various events have been donated and a small admission will be charged for the shoot. Every trap and skeet shooter in the city is eligible and invited to participate in today's events.

'Ole Koon' Overpowers 'Em

Tharpe-Dodd Eleven Reaps 40-0 Revenge

Varsity Runs Wild in Last Quarter to End Grid Drills at Grant Field.

By Ralph McGill.

The dam busted along in the last quarter yesterday afternoon at Grant field.

"The Golds" began to score touchdowns against "The Greens," running up a 13-to-0 score to an even 40-to-0 before the quarter ended.

Thus did Georgia Tech close out its spring football practice session and put away the canvas and cleats until the first day of next September.

The game was the second annual spring game and saw the Messrs. Max Tharpe and Bobby Dodd, coaching "The Golds," obtain revenge for a defeat last spring. Last spring Mr. William Alexander, coaching the Green team, or scrubs, beat them, 7 to 6.

GREENS HOLD.
This spring Mr. Alexander's Green team held rather firmly for three quarters, being behind only two touchdowns. But then Mr. Dodd sent in Dutch Konemann.

He seems larger and faster, even than last fall. He caught passes and threw them, and with the aid of Fletcher Sims and Harry Appleby, managed to run up the score in the final quarter.

At the time, however, Mr. Alexander had a rather green Green team in there. At one of the guards was the real hero.

Last year Bob Shildgen was a manager. He juggled headgear and bandages and blankets here and there for the players.

MANAGER-GUARD.
This spring he came out for the team. He played at guard, mightily and well. The Gold team tried to kick him the ball on two kickoffs but good luck was with him and the ball went in other directions.

The Golds scored first in the second quarter. The touchdown followed a 20-yard pass, Sims to Appleby. Sims finally took the ball over and kicked the point. The second tally came in the second quarter after a pass from Konemann to Appleby clicked. The point was missed.

The third quarter saw two excellent passes but not until the fourth quarter, when the Green reserves in did the Alexander team become routed.

The Jackets looked generally good with Konemann, Appleby and Edwards doing the major chores for the Golds.

ANDERSON STARS.
The sensation of the Green team was a big fellow named Red Anderson. He looked like the best of the sophomores and should be cheered very often indeed next fall. He may be a real star by the time the 1937 season comes around.

Charlie Preston sustained a shoulder injury but it was not serious. After all it was just a spring game. But it did show the Jackets to be adept with forwards and laterals. And that there is plenty of weight on the squad. And more reserve strength than has been present in some seasons.

After the game a buffet dinner was served at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

BABE DIDRIKSON IN MATCH HERE AT BROOKHAVEN

Mildred Is Paired With Owens Against Kirby and Black.

By Roy White.

Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, one of the greatest women athletes of all time, who in the past 16 months has turned her attention to golf, will be featured in a charity match at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the Capital City Country Club course.

The sensation of the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles, in winning 16 events for United States, will be paired with Johnny Owens, Atlanta open champion, against Dorothy Kirby, Georgia's woman champion, and Charlie Black junior.

Today's match will be followed by another on Tuesday on the Coosa Country Club course in Rome, where the Babe will be paired with Dr. Julius Hughes against Miss Martha Daniel and Alvin Everett, two of Rome's outstanding players. The Rome Service League is sponsoring the Tuesday match for its charity fund.

Miss Didrikson arrived in the city Thursday night and played a brief round Friday morning on the East Lake course with Scott Campbell, of Seattle, Wash. and Bobby Jones. She hit a few again Saturday just to keep in practice.

WON 16 EVENTS.

The Texas girl started on her road to fame in preparing for the American Olympics and her winning 16 events was one of the outstanding features of the Los Angeles meet.

Didrikson took up golf two years ago but not until the past 16 months has her play attracted any attention. And when she turned professional, she really went to work in a big way on the golf course.

Her play has improved wonderfully and has come along so fast that many expert professionals have been astounded—and some have been beaten in exhibition matches. She needs only some experience and development of her short game to become a serious competitor against masculine players.

Didrikson's drives are said to average well over 250 yards and her putting is far above the average for women players. Her only fault at present seems to be lack of control in her short iron game.

There need be but little comment on other members of the foursome for their records are well worth the while and stand out in the city's amateur ranks.

OWENS CONSISTENT.

Johnny Owens, a former captain of the University of Pennsylvania's golf team, after playing in the shadow of championships for several years, crashed through to his reward last spring and won the Atlanta open on a rain-soaked East Lake course. His play has always been consistent and his game is sound.

Dorothy Kirby first won the Georgia state at the age of 13 and last year came back with three successive record-breaking rounds on the No. 2 East Lake course to win it again. She was a semi-finalist in the southern women's tourney last year in her first year of big time golf, and she went to the quarter-finals in the Augusta women's tourney after a winter of very little play.

Charlie Black Jr. is a veteran tournament campaigner. He has played in both the national open and amateur tournaments and has won both the city and state championships. And recently he has played consistently in the low 70's after very little winter competition.

Every player in today's foursome has a noteworthy record and it will be well worth anyone's time and trouble to see the match. A major portion of the proceeds will go to charity. The tickets will be $1.

The Babe, Dorothy Kirby, George Sherrill and Howard Beckett, the Capital City professional, played an 18-hole round Saturday morning at Capital City.

Didrikson carded an 81 on her first trek over the course. Dorothy had an 83, only two strokes back.

Dot and Beckett played Sherrill and Didrikson on the first nine and the men beat the women one up on the back nine.

Darlington Beats G.M.A. Netmen, 5-1

ROME, Ga., March 28.—Darlington School for Boys, traditional home of tennis champions, opened its tennis here today by trouncing the racquet-ers of Georgia Military Academy, 5-1.

Billy Turner, Darlington ace from Chevy Chase, Md., downed Lindsey, the Cadet star, in a thrilling fray, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4. Wilford Gragg, Memphis boy, defeated Batchelor, of the Cadets; Swartz, of Greenville, N. C., won the match with the Cadet No. 4 man, while Cooke, Hollywood, Cal., G. M. A. soph star, won his team's lone point in conquering McDonald.

Capit and Gragg, Tiger No. 1 doubles team, and Swartz and McDonald, second Tiger doubles, won their matches in straight sets.

The tourney is being arranged in connection with the annual sportsmen's banquet, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and will follow the finals of the Augusta golf tournament.

All sports writers in this section of the country, together with those visiting here will be invited to participate in the tourney and to be present at the banquet.

The tourney will be an 18-hole medal play affair with handicaps applying. The sports writers will be credited with the handicaps applying to their home clubs.

A correspondent wants to know which game is the toughest when it comes to the matter of reaching the top or thereabouts. It is always pleasant when queries blow in with such simple answers attached.

There are any number of fine golfers. They come by the hundreds.

Good tennis players and good polo players—good jockeys—good basketball players—star hockey players are abundant.

BOXERS, MATWEN MEET CAROLINA, FLORIDA TEAMS

Southern Golden Gloves Champions Appear Here Against Triangles.

Boxing and wrestling will hold the center of the stage at the Y. M. C. A. this week. The boxing team will meet the strong Carolina, Fla., Y. M. C. A. team, winners in the Southern Golden Glove tournament held recently in Nashville. The Carolina team has not sent their lineup in as yet, but it is expected that all five Golden Glove Southern champions will be here. These matches will be held jointly Saturday night.

The Pensacola team is rated one of the strongest amateur teams in the country. The wrestling team of the "Y" did not want to be outdone by the boxers, so they will take on the championship outfit also, in the Barium Springs, N. C., high school. Barium Springs won the state high school wrestling trophy this season for the third consecutive time and thereby won permanent possession of it.

Not content with the high school championship of the state, Coach R. E. Jenkins entered his boys in the state A. A. U. wrestling tournament and three won first places and a chance at the semi-final Olympic trials. This tournament included colleges and Y. M. C. A.'s. Ralph Spencer in the 145-pound class, Milton Gaskill in the 125-pound class and Ed Flowers in the 155-pound class and captain of the team, were the victors.

Coach Joe White will send his second wrestling team to Carrollton, Friday night to meet the west Georgia outfit. He will probably use the following lineup against the Barium outfit: Tommy Phillips, 115-pound; Bill Young in the 118-pound class; Bowen David or Bert Sampler, 126-pound; Clyde Holland or Ivan Jones, 135-pound; and the Deacon, 145-pound; Mike Warr, 155-pound; Douglas Shields or Guy Lichter in the 165-pound class; Jim Pantella, 175-pound; and John Smith, 185-pound, in the heavyweight division.

The Atlanta "Y" boxers to meet the Golden Glove champs from Florida will be flyweight, Tony Rocco; Joe Acchi, who may be borrowed from G. M. GRANT IS SEED SECOND IN MEET

HOUSTON, Texas, March 28.—(AP) United States and Mexican Davis cup teams will resume their Davis cup play here in the sixth annual River Oaks tournament which opens here tomorrow.

The five members of each team, who will meet in the opening round of play here April 10-11, are entered at River Oaks.

Three of the American cup nesters will compete in the singles. The two will arrive in time for doubles play.

Wilmer Allison, Texas veteran, was top-seeded with Bryan Grant, Wimbledon champion, and Gene Mack, California, who complete the United States contingent, will appear in the doubles.

Kalle Schroder, of Sweden, who with Hall holds the national indoor doubles title, was top-seeded among the foreign entrants.

Four pro players, a pair of lads from Florida, Charles Harris and Arthur Hendrix, might upset some of the seeded players before the tournament is over.

Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, wife of the veteran Davis cup doubles player, and Mrs. Mary Greif Harris, of Kansas City, were favorites in the women's division.

GARDEN SCENE OF CAGE SHOW

NEW YORK, March 28.—(UP)—The greatest basketball show in history will be staged at Madison Square Garden next week-end when eight survivors of national elimination play before the American Olympic basketball committee which will select the players to represent the United States.

Four games will be played on Friday, two semi-finals on Saturday, and the finals either on Sunday or Monday.

The final round will be composed of the champion and runner-up of the National A. A. U. tournament, the national titleholder of the Y. M. C. A. and five college teams.

The committee will select a squad of 15 from these eight teams to represent America in the Berlin games.

The committee may select no more than seven players from the winning team, and no more than five from the runner-up team and three from the other teams.

It is believed that the committee probably will pick the maximum from the winning squad, two from the second team and one each from the other six finalists.

The coach of the winning team will head the Olympic squad.

Five teams already have gained the final round. DePaul, University of Washington and Arkansas have won their sectional eliminations in the college rounds. The McPherson Oilers of Kansas, automatically qualified when they won the A. A. U. tournament in Denver while the University of Holy Cross, likewise entered the final round by finishing second to the Oilers.

Oglethorpe's freshman baseball team defeated the Brookhaven Athletic Club here, 10 to 8, Saturday afternoon on Hermance field.

Both teams hit well, particularly in the pinches. . . 015 010 100—8 8 5 Oglethorpe. . . 214 002 012—10 15 11 Daniel, Robertson and Casey; Hal Faulk and Zelenko.

This Team Wins 26---Loses Only 10 Games

Grayson High's basketball team won 26 and lost 10 games for one of the best records in the state this year. The team won the tournaments at Winterville and Roberts and finished second to Dacula in the district tourney. Seated, left to right, are Bill Johnson, Spud Simonton, captain; Hugh Garrett and Tom Moore. Standing, left to right, H. L. Atrial, assistant coach; Buck Johnson, Bennie Tribble, Harthorne Clower, manager; Carl Bankston, Clyde Bankston and Coach A. A. Graves.

GRAYSON FIVE ENDS FINE YEAR

Wins 26 of 36 Games and Two Tourna- ments.

Winning two tournaments and finishing second in the annual district tourney, Grayson High school's basketball team had one of the best records in the state this year.

The youngsters won 26 and lost 10 games and scored 1,160 points against 860 for their opponents.

Grayson won tournaments at Winterville and Roberts and lost only to Dacula in the district tourney when two of the players were out of the lineup with influenza. Roberts finished second in the annual state tournament.

Moore, Johnson and Simonton were named on the all-tourney team at Roberts, with Bill Johnson, one of the outstanding players on the club. He held Pearson, an all-state forward, scoreless in the Roberts tourney.

Among the teams Grayson played were, Roberts, Eastonville, Clermont, Dacula, Abraham-Baldwin, Scottville, Lawrenceville, Commerce and Winder.

Members of the team include: Bill and Buck Johnson, Spud Simonton, Harthorne Clower, manager, and H. L. Atrial is assistant coach and A. A. Graves is the coach.

Only Tribble and Garrett will return for another year's play.

Hank Wagnon To Captain Bulldogs

ATHENS, Ga., March 28.—Henry Wagnon, letterman on both the diamond and gridiron, was named captain of the University of Georgia baseball team for the 1936 season.

Catfish Smith's squad ended the first week of organized practice.

With the opening engagements at Clemson Saturday, the "Bulldogs" appear to have clinched positions on the team. Richards has been the first-strater catcher every day this week. Rucker, on the basis of past and present performance, seems to have landed either the first base task or an outfield position.

Coach Smith brought Hartman in from rightfield for a try at first base this afternoon. Rucker was relegated to the second string. It is evident, however, that Coach Smith intends to shift the lanky boy to the outfield if Hartman shows up best at first.

Rucker is a consistent hitter, averaging well over 350 in the Kennesaw league last summer.

Seven men are available for the pitcher's post, the most questionable position on the team. Frank Johnson and Julius Bishop, Athens, are the only lettermen on hand. Jim Davis, Albany; Clayton Wilhite, Milledgeville; Tom Bailey, Marietta; Duke Owens, McDonough, and Lee Bruno, in the outfield.

Clayton Wilhite is up from the fresh nine. None are left handed.

Captain Wagnon, who ranged around the top in hitting, will play centerfield, and either Bill Hartman or Rucker, rightfield. The leftfield will be sought by H. C. Smith, Lawrenceville; Ward Holland and Marvin Gillespie.

Hendrix is upset by Frank Guernsey

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 28.—(AP) Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., sprang an upset in the semi-finals of the South Atlantic States tennis tournament today by defeating the No. 1 seeded Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., 7-5, 6-2, 6-2.

As a result, he will meet Clayton Burwell, of the University of North Carolina, in the finals tomorrow.

Burwell, finalist with Gottfried von Cramm in the German championships two years ago, defeated Vernon Marshall, of Lakeland, Fla., 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 in the quarter finals and then dropped Mel Tarpley, of Miami, 7-5, 6-2, 7-5 to enter the finals.

Dental Degree Sent Lafitte From Majors

Old Atlantan Finished Career With Cracker Club in 1916; Successful Dentist.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 28.—"Big Ed" Lafitte went from the Atlanta sandlots to the big leagues a quarter century ago.

He landed with the Detroit Tigers in the first hey-day of their baseball successes and might have become one of their pitching immortals if Hughey Jennings, Bengal manager, and the Georgian had been able to get along. But they did not, and as a result Jennings shunted Lafitte to the minor leagues when he should have been hurling big-time baseball.

The controversy between Jennings and Lafitte started over the latter finishing up a dental course at Atlanta Southern Dental College while with Detroit. Lafitte would usually be late in reporting to the Tigers each spring and when it came time to graduate he left Detroit in the midst of a pennant struggle to return home for his degree. That was the last straw as far as Jennings was concerned. He shipped the big right-hander to Providence, in the International league, from where he jumped to Brooklyn, in the Federal league, in 1914.

Today Dr. Edward E. Lafitte is one of Philadelphia's prominent dentists. He has been in practice here ever since concluding his baseball career with the late Charles Frank's Atlanta Crackers of the Southern association in 1916.

Lafitte learned his first baseball at Marietta College in 1904 and 1905 where he was a member of the varsity. Joe Bean, one-time New York Giant infielder, was coach. Later "Big Ed," a lanky, raw-boned youngster, attended Georgia Institute of Technology in 1906, 1907 and 1908. He pitched and played second base on the varsity. His father, James A. Lafitte, intended to groom his son for West Point and army career but with his death in 1907, young Ed decided he would have to find a job. So he left Tech, accepted an offer to hurl for Jersey City in the Eastern league and at the same time made arrangements to enter Atlanta Southern Dental College.

DETROIT'S FANCY.

The Atlanta won 12 and lost 19 games with a seventh-place finish but his work attracted the attention of Detroit scouts who signed him for 1909. The Tigers won the American league championship that year but Lafitte was shipped to Providence, R. I., on option in July. The rookie was unable to break into the lineup because of the Bengal's great staff comprising George Mullin, Bill Donovan, Ralph Works, Edgar Willert, Ralph Kilham and Ed Simons.

Lafitte returned to Detroit in Rochester, N. Y., in the Eastern league after the 1910 season opened and he returned for 1911 when he won 11 and lost 19 games. He pitched and played in 1912 Lafitte was due to graduate from dental college and asked Jennings in the spring if he would allow him to return to Atlanta to get his degree in June.

"If you go home—you can continue on to Providence," Jennings told the embryo dentist. "For your throw-up, as far as the Tigers are concerned."

"I went home and finished the season with Providence," Lafitte recalled. Lafitte remained with Providence in 1913 and in the winter jumped to the Brooklyn Federal league club who offered a $4,000 contract, a $1,000 bonus and a $500 salary.

On September 19, 1914, Lafitte pitched a 6-0-2 win over Kansas City at Brooklyn, not allowing the sennable of a hit. Both runs were made on errors. Late in 1915, Brooklyn released Lafitte to Buffalo in the Federal league.

NEAR QUITTING.

"I was about ready to call it quits as far as baseball was concerned," said Lafitte, "when Charles Frank wired me for my best terms. I knew the league's salary limit which I asked for and also an additional $500 for signing. I didn't expect to get taken up on it but the first thing I knew Frank wired me that he would sign me. I reported March 1.

"I won the first 11 of 12 games pitched for the Cracker. I pitched three or four times a week until my arm could stand it no longer. I told Frank I didn't mind working my head off but that it wouldn't last forever. He told me to keep on trying because I was the only pitcher winning on the club and responsible for what the sennable were drawing. One day I woke up with a sore arm. I felt it coming.

"Frank kept me on the bench to rest up. I told him the expense of paying me and not getting any results was too much on a club that was not drawing at the gate and I suggested he release me. He did not until after I threatened to quit."

Lafitte's teammates on the 1916 Atlanta club included Scott Perry, Ad Brennan, "Red" Miller, Day, and Wilson, pitchers; Jack Munch, first base; Steve Yerkes, second base; Ed Lennox on third, and Al Bridwell in short. Outfielders were Wilson, Thrasher, Murrer and Moran.

Dr. Lafitte makes his home here with his 22-year-old daughter, Dorothy. He has a brother, James, a catcher with the New Orleans Southern league club in 1910, who is in the warehousing business in Atlanta.

The handling of the material has been done in such a manner as to make the book partially readable and certainly valuable to the layman. To the person who looked forward to an Interesting Subject.

NEUTRALITY—Its History, Economics and Law. By Philip C. Jessup, Frances Deak, Phillips, Reade & Tullington. 4 Volumes. Columbia University Press, New York, $15.

With the world in its present chaotic condition and almost every country a seething cauldron of discontent, it will be a comparatively rare book indeed before some country will be proclaiming their neutrality and insisting that the belligerent nations respect their neutral rights.

In reviewing these four volumes of the entire legal, historic and economic background for neutrality, it will be wise to discuss the volumes in numerical sequence.

In Volume I the authors trace the growth of neutrality from its genesis to its maturity, covering the period from the 18th century to the revolutionary wars. The purpose is to show the historic factors that created the problem of neutrality and to show why it was a logical growth of the times.

Napoleon's period and the wars of the French Revolution serve as the subject matter for Volume II and are in this book that an analysis of the forces issued by Napoleon and the British are treated in detail.

When France had its revolution the economic forces that were at play are apt to be confusing and it is essential that those factors be understood and known and need no repetition. The appreciation of the rise of a Napoleon and his ultimate failure.

France in the late 18th century was just emerging from its feudal society. The bourgeoisie were becoming the dominant political power and it was necessary for its growth to throw off the obsolete political machine of feudalism. This task was accomplished by the early revolutionaries.

However, the bourgeoisie in their struggle against the monarchy had allied themselves with the working classes and after having gone part of the way, the "canaille" refused to call a halt and had every intention of continuing it.

The French Revolution found it necessary to end the revolution, which had already exceeded its bounds and which threatened the prevailing commercial interests.

For the entrance of a "Napoleon" and a Napoleon seized the opportunity. Napoleon's continental victories are well known and need no repetition but it was due to these successes that he came to an unavoidable conflict with England, which at that time was in its own right a great power.

England, which never was defeated by Julius Caesar had no intention of being subjugated by a Corsican upstart. The conflict between these two great powers was inevitable and long as the expansion of one was to be accomplished at the expense of the other. Bonaparte with his continental system, Bonaparte with his blockade of the English coast, the "nation of shopkeepers," England, on the other hand, with her reprisals and orders in council was in a position to make a strong stand.

In the midst of these measures and counter measures that the United States as a neutral was trapped. The French Revolution found it necessary to end the revolution, which had already exceeded its bounds and which threatened the prevailing commercial interests.

Fascinating Book.

THE WAY OF A TRANSGRESSOR. By Negley Farson. 602 pages. $3. Harcourt, Brace & Company, New York.

This is the autobiography of Negley Farson, for the past 11 years foreign correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, a grand, exciting story of a man whose quest for living has never diminished. Even if "The Way of a Transgressor" is not strictly autobiographical, even if, by way of making it more interesting, Negley Farson has added some extra adventures, it remains, nevertheless, a vivid, fascinating book.

The freshness and vigor of his style, combined with the amusing story he has to tell, produce a highly entertaining volume. Somewhere along the way, though, Negley Farson forgot to grow up. This is all to the good, in a way, for his story never lacks vitality or interest.

His strong likes and dislikes for the people he meets keeps the recital of his adventures from becoming dull. Living in the new and then, he sounds just like a college boy on a holiday.

Life has, in fact, if one is to believe his story, been one grand holiday for Negley Farson. Resolving at the age of 19 that he would never allow himself to be tied down by a routine job, from then on he has been living in the new and then, he sounds just like a college boy on a holiday.

Back in London, he joined the British Royal Flying Corps, was sent to Egypt, cracked up there and, even though he was in the hospital, he was sent to the front.

Then came his marriage to Eve Stoker, whose uncle wrote "Dracula." With a wife to look after, Farson actually settled down in London. He got into the trucking business in 1921 and in 1922 he got out of one truck. And founding the pavements of Chicago caused him to get into a fight.

He loved it there, and he did. He took a houseboat, anchored it in a lake, and lived off of rainbow trout, ducks, geese and deer. He was bought with the money and was now beginning to come in from Farson's writing. With $1,800 saved from two years' work in Brazil, he came to Chicago.

Chicago and Negley had an astonishingly successful year there as sales manager of the truck company. But, they decided, this wasn't the life. They wanted, so they went to England, bought a 26-foot sailboat, and in it they made a trip across the Atlantic to the North Sea to the Black Sea, up the Rhine, through a canal started by Napoleon, and on down the Danube.

It was on this trip that Farson did his first foreign correspondent work, reporting it for the Chicago Daily News. He was in London for a year for Lawson, the News publisher, kept him on as a member of the foreign staff.

Of the next ten years Farson "watched the world come to bits." He never spent over six months in any country, but he still picked the places where the world was coming apart. He had to tell the rest of the world about it. He talked to the English coal miners during the general strike, he interviewed De Valera before he came head of Ireland, was in Russia when the five-year plan was announced, went to India to interview Gandhi.

"The Way of a Transgressor" is good reading throughout. Some of the descriptions are extraordinarily beautiful, and Farson's observation of the economic forces at work in the world since 1914 are real and convincing.

Valuable History.

JAMES EDWARD OGLETHORPE. Imperial Idealist, by Amos Ashback Kittinger, Oxford University Press, New York, 348 pp. Price $3.50.

One hundred and fifty years ago there died an Englishman whose life had greatly influenced both his country and the world. James Edward Oglethorpe. What more fascinating story than that of the man who combined political sagacity, military leadership, skill for philanthropy and enjoyment of the best in literature and learning!

Boswell, his intimate friend, more than once urged him to furnish him material for writing his biography saying: "I know of no man whose life would be more interesting. The great Oglethorpe himself on the ground that the life of a private man was not worthy of public notice. Thus the world became the loser for his modesty and reserve. To lose his death a meager half-dozen biographies have been written. Because the best sources have come to light in the last two decades, Mr. Kittinger has worked five years ago on the book which has just now come from the publishers. While no attempt is made to "fictionalize" the story, it gives the reader by the nature and variety of activities in this vivid life. The author does not gloss over the faults and weaknesses, but the Oglethorpe himself in his own words in their true light.

Most Georgians know Oglethorpe only as the founder of their colony. It may be surprising to learn that 21 years he was a member of parliament, using his influence as "an opponent of royal extravagance, a guide in the intricacies of the law, a proponent of anti-continental isolation and an ardent advocate for the spiritual improvement of his countrymen."

His spirit ran a pace ahead of his time. In 1732 he was one of the whole in what we ought only to have under our consideration: our colonies are all a part of our own country, and we are already in a respect to all. Ettinger wisely adds: "Had George III and Lord North shared these judgments, Oglethorpe himself might have been great."

Adams as first minister of the United States to the Court of St. James. When his public life is over, most great men are remembered for their glorious days that have passed. For Oglethorpe, the last 15 of his 87 years are rich and full in a new realm of literature and art. He proved a factor to Johnson when the latter was only 27 years old and unknown. He lent encouragement to Boswell when his first volume appeared. He sustained Goldsmith in adversity and acclaimed him in achievement. He debated politics with Burke and applauded Goldsmith and Reynolds in their respective arts.

All students of history should welcome this carefully compiled account. It is a masterpiece of research and regard for accuracy. On almost every page are footnote references to source material. The book contains a half-century of letters, a map and an index.

Utter Frankness.

NO VILLAIN NEED BE. By Vardis Fisher. Doubleday, Doran Company, New York. 387 pp. $2.50.

Vardis Fisher has produced his best work to date in "No Villain Need Be." This book has the earmarks of a best seller. The author furnishes a complete and accurate picture of the life of his hero, leaving it stark in its nakedness, and in problem into the present-day conception of civilization, shaken to its very foundations. Any one who reads this book will find it a degree of utter frankness cannot be called beautiful, for beauty is to be found only in idealism. Illumined in the white light of a modern and accurate and in so doing reveal their faulty foundations. Searching further it finds life to be a tumultuous riot of conflicting dogmas and a sham decency in which all mortals indulge for the maintenance of a misconceived social order.

Vardis Hunter will live long in our minds after the book has been laid aside. In him we may see the reflection of our own erring personalities. To succumb to the temptation of existence and to arise, erecting upon the ashes of memory, a new life. Seeking new standards and new concepts of living, Vardis Hunter is a philosopher, but his methods in all of their brutality are, in that they expose the slumbering skeletons that are the bones of our modern society.

CHICAGO SPOT COTTON.
CHICAGO, March 28.—Spot cotton closed steady, middling 5 points up at 12.20.

AVERAGE PRICE.
NEW ORLEANS, March 28.—The average price of middling cotton today at 10 southern spot markets was 11.90 cents a pound; government subsidy, 0.31 of a cent a pound.

NEW ORLEANS, March 28.—Cotton held steady today, working up from 2 to 4 points in quiet trading. Improved foreign markets and purchasing for the purpose of evening up accounts over the weekend imparted firmness to both new and old crop positions.

Some of the buying at New Orleans was reportedly for foreign account. Price fixing in July and May for trade interests was noted.

Speculative interests, who had bought cotton in the week furnished most of the contracts. The market finished the week with prices at their best levels of the day.

Continued dryness in the western half of the belt induced some speculative buying in October and January.

Volume of business was still restricted, but proceeded at a better level than on the opening sessions of this month.

Little news emanated from the capital. Reports that the Commodity Credit Corporation would not extend loans on cotton after March 31, this year, attracted little attention as only 50,000 bales of cotton are said to be in receipt of this action.

Port receipts, 8,000; season, 6,491,410; last season, 4,120,988. Exports, 6,931; season, 4,751,708; last season, 3,540,905. Stocks, 2,135,569. Cotton on shipboard at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston were $5.50; last week, 79,400. New Orleans at southern markets were $8.01.

COTTON PRICES HIGHER ON NEW YORK BOARD

NEW YORK, March 28.—Cotton was moderately higher today on trade buying and covering accompanied by reports of a tight spot situation in the south and continued drought in the southwest. July sold up to 10.95 and closed at 10.90 with the general market ending very steady at net advances of 4 1/2 to 5 1/2.

An advance of 2 to 6 points occurred at the opening on renewed trade buying in the near months. There was some buying of the new crop in response to its relatively steady showing in Liverpool.

The initial bulk met some hedging and week-old realizing, but this was absorbed on slight price backs and the best prices of the day were made in late trading.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 77,000 bales against 82,000 last year.

Liverpool Cotton.

LIVERPOOL, March 28.—Trading in spot cotton was quiet here today. Prices were steady. There were no new contracts.

Middling 7.75; strictly good middling 7.15; good middling 6.85; strictly good ordinary 6.55; strictly good 6.25. Futures opened steady. Prices were 2 to 3 points from the day, while closing prices were up 1/2 to 1 point from the day.

CURB SHARES DECLINE AS TRADING IS LIGHT

Electric Bond & Share Is Actively Traded, Closes 1-4 of Point Higher.

NEW YORK, March 28.—(AP)—Curb market stocks backed and filled in a narrow range today with the trend a bit of the offside in most groups. Trading was light.

Electric Bond & Share was again heavily traded in. After dipping a small fraction during the first hour support appeared and the stock worked up to 23 7/8 at the close where it was 1-4 higher.

Shares ending in the advancing column included City Auto Storage, Woolley Petroleum and a number of the inactive specialties.

Losers included American Gas, Atlas Corporation, Aluminum Company, Newmont Mining, Creole Petroleum and Sherwin-Williams. Sunshine Mining and United Gas preferred were among shares ending unchanged.

Transfers of 234,000 shares compared with 288,000 last Saturday.

BANK OF FRANCE ACTS TO HOLD GOLD SUPPLY

Paris Raises in Discount Rate Is Attributed to Uneasiness Over Rhine.

PARIS, March 28.—(AP)—With the French franc and other gold currencies under international financial fire, the Bank of France acted today to protect its gold supply.

The bank's extraordinary action, raised the discount rate to 5 percent from 3 1/2 percent, the first increase since last November 25. The move was the first since the situation and fears that the French government might decide on inflation of the franc were regarded as contributory causes to the rise.

Investors and speculators were disposing of their francs in great quantities in the world's foreign exchange markets. They were selling their francs and buying United States dollars and British pounds.

(United States dollars, apparently, were the preferred medium of reinvestment, for the dollar quotation gained 3-8 cent to the pound in the London foreign exchange market, while both pounds and dollars advanced in relation to the franc. Despite the manipulation of the official exchange control fund on the London market, the franc fell off from 75.05 to 75.04 to the pound.)

The action of the bank regents was most unusual, inasmuch as any change in the bank rate is almost always announced on Thursdays and the regents assembly on Saturdays.

They decided to increase not only the discount rate but to make a similar increase in the rate for 30-day loans and to increase the rate for loans on stocks from 5 to 6 percent.

The price on the government securities, slipped slightly from the short day's trading, but it was believed the bank action would bolster up the market over the week-end.

In the local foreign exchange market, the value of the franc in relation to the dollar fell 2-12 centimes, closing officially at 15.1925 francs (6.58 cents) to the dollar.

Despite the strong gold withdrawals, the gold coverage on French banknotes was reported at 80 percent.

The information journal, declared: "Neither considerations of foreign policy, financial policy, nor internal policy would justify any new monetary action." Information added, however, that the market was displaced with the prospect of the Hitler election victory tomorrow in Germany.

Albany Club Elects Officers for Year At Recent Meeting

Albany clubwomen elected the following officers at the March meeting: Mrs. R. H. Waugh, president; Mrs. Earl Fowler, first vice president; Mrs. J. R. Mathews, second vice president; Mrs. A. D. Galt, recording secretary; Mrs. M. O. Efrid, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. W. F. Jefferson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Spencer Walden, treasurer; Mrs. David Brown, parliamentarian, and Mrs. A. C. Oliver, press reporter.

Mrs. C. E. Glauser, of Quitman, second district president, talked on "Why Federate," and was introduced by Mrs. H. T. McIntosh, president of the club. Mrs. George Sabados was chairman of the nominating committee, and Mrs. T. A. West, chairman of the arts and crafts department, announced that her department would have charge of an art display and luncheon for the April meeting. Mrs. Earl Fowler, program chairman, presented Mrs. T. C. Lackland Jr., in two readings, "When Love and Beauty Meet," by Mae Nichols, and a humorous character impersonation of a "High School Flapper."

Mrs. Glauser stressed the importance of federation work. She stated federation could only achieve success through the work done by the local clubs that comprise the districts, the districts in turn comprise the state federation and the state federations comprise the general federation, which is the largest organization of women in the world. The federation conducts a broad educational and welfare program and labors to initiate properly safeguarded legislation, sponsors adult education and literacy programs.

Mrs. Glauser referred to the Tallulah Falls school, owned and operated by the Georgia State Federation of Women's Clubs and their friends, urging clubs to work a bit harder and do as much as possible toward the upkeep of this school, which is for the education and care of mountain children. Mrs. A. D. Galt accompanied Mrs. O. D. Culpepper, who sang vocal selections.

City of Augusta 2 Centuries Old

By MRS. H. B. RITCHIE, of Athens, State President.

Augusta, one of the loveliest of all the southern cities and the hostess city for the 1936 convention of the Georgia federation, is a year more than two centuries old. In 1935 she celebrated with appropriate ceremonies the founding of the English settlement which is now an important commercial, industrial and educational center. Brief portraits of various events in Augusta's history follow:

Before the coming of the white men—The striking feature of the little Augusta was then (1835) as it is now and ever will be while waters seek the sea, the noble river which bathes her northern limits. Not only was it her great feature but it was her cause. Because a water highway could connect her with Savannah and then with the mother country and the world, Augusta came into existence. How beautiful was her tutelary river then! The ex had not denuded her banks! The plowshare and not reduced its hillside to red powder to stain forever its crystal waters. Noble forests came down to its very edge: "Primitive nature, grand forests, noble rivers, song birds, the jasmine, the wild honeysuckle, the bay, and the magnolia about its paths create essential spirit."—Mayor Joseph B. Cumming, celebration of the centennial.

The Coming of De Soto to Silver Bluff, 1540—De Soto advanced in the direction of Cuttachaqui. The cañca came out of the village, seated in a chair of state, which was borne by some of the principal men to the water's edge. In her passage across the river she was accompanied by her chief men and other subjects in canoes. Having landed, she approached the spot where De Soto awaited her and addressed him with courteous words of welcome. Drawing from over her head a long string of pearls she suspended it about the governor's neck in token of amity. In acknowledgement of her gift and as a pledge of peace and friendship, De Soto, removing from his finger a ring of gold set with a ruby, gently placed it upon her finger. The hospitality of her town was generously extended. During the latter portion of the Spanish sojourn the queen had become so much incensed at the outrages perpetrated upon her subjects that she refused to furnish guides and tamemes. The governor placed her under guard and compelled her on foot, escorted by her female attendants, to accompany him. Jones' History of Georgia.

Beginning of Augusta, 1735—"Mr. Oglethorpe did not neglect the establishment and maintenance of necessary posts in other quarters (than Savannah). In 1735 the town of Augusta was marked out and the next year a garrison was detailed for its defense. Warehouses were built and furnished with goods suitable for the Indian trade. This point became a general resort and it is estimated that at an early date not less than 800 persons were here engaged in commerce." Jones' History of Georgia.

Oglethorpe's Visit to Augusta—"Upon arriving at Fort Augusta, he was there prostrated by a severe fever. While thus suffering he was visited by chiefs from the Chickasaws and Cherokees. The latter complained and threatened revenge for certain practices of traders. Upon inquiring into the matter the general ascertained that some unlicensed traders were true causes of the calamity. They were at length appeased and departed with the assurance that they might apprehend no trouble in dealing with the licensed traders from Georgia, as permits were never granted to those unworthy of confidence." Jones' History of Georgia.

Augusta As Capital Celebrates American Independence, 1783—"On Wednesday last when the great and joyful news of peace reached this place properly authenticated a very elegant and sumptuous entertainment was provided when upwards of 300 ladies and gentlemen dined under a large bower made for the purpose. At 1 o'clock there were 13 discharges of cannon and after dinner the following toasts were drunk, each succeeded by the firing of artillery: The independent state of America, the governor and the state, his most Christian majesty, our first good and generous ally, the United Provinces of Holland, the congress of the United States, his excellency, General Washington; the officers and the army, the officers and the navy, Comte Rochambeau and his army, the American commissioners for making peace, may the liberties of America be as lasting as time. The company retired to Mr. Fox's, where there was a ball and supper. The evening concluded with illuminations, bonfires, rockets and every other demonstration of joy suitable to the occasion, and with the greatest peace and harmony." From Georgia Gazette of May 29, 1783.

General Lafayette's Visit to Augusta, 1825—"A procession met him at the steamboat landing as follows: Music, chief marshal and staff, committee of arrangements, detachment of hussars, General Lafayette in a phaeton drawn by four horses, son and suite of Lafayette in a barouche drawn by two horses, troop of hussars, general officers, citizens on horseback, United States artillery, etc., a banquet followed, at which the distinguished visitor was toasted as follows: "The man whose sovereignty is above that of kings—Lafayette, who reigns in the hearts of a whole people." History of Augusta, Jones and Dutcher.

General Lee Visits Augusta, 1870—"But if it was rest he wanted, he did not find it. He had to hold a reception nearly the whole afternoon. Crowds came, wounded soldiers, servants, workmen, the sweetest little children—namesakes—with bouquets of japonicas, friends of other days, several of Lee's old generals. The people must have thronged Lee, for it is recorded that a boy of 13 who stood by the side of the general and looked up at him in reverence. The lad's name was Woodrow Wilson." Freeman's Lee.

Augusta retains all the romance of her history, all the glory of her hospitality, all the charm of her distinguished citizenry. Her visitors still acclaim her fame and drink gladly of her waters that a return visit may be assured. Augusta extends to Georgia federation and its guests a cordial invitation for April 21-24, 1936.

Revision of By-Laws Sent Clubwomen.

The revision of by-laws has been sent with the official call to each member of the executive board and to each club president and delegate, and should be studied carefully along with the present by-laws. Each should take her yearbook to the convention in order to follow the full text more intelligently. If any club president or delegate finds it impossible to attend the convention she should hand her call, revision and credential card to her appointee or alternate so that she also may have the information necessary. All clubwomen, whether delegates or not, will be cordially welcomed to all business sessions and social functions.

In the words of Lena Madeline Phillips, "Do not expect the impossible. Conventions are planned, directed and carried out by human beings. Unless one courts disappointments she will not expect perfection of them. Nor should one demand that leaders be supermen. Believe they are doing their best, and realize that they, too, have frailties and limitations." Continuing, Miss Phillips says: "Be prepared to find yourself a less conspicuous person in this large circle than you are in the small circle of your home town. A convention is an aggregate of the leaders of many communities. All cannot be at the speakers' table, on the receiving line, or prominent in every function. Be ready to overlook slight injuries to your pride. Accept it as just one of those things which always happen. Be a good sport!"

Vidalia Clubwomen Hear Mrs. Jenkins.

At the March meeting of the Vidalia Woman's Club members had the pleasure of hearing as guest speaker Mrs. John Jenkins, of Athens, who was introduced by Mrs. W. L. Oliver, leader of the program. Mrs. Jenkins spoke of the "Eighteenth Century's

Mrs. A. B. Conger, second vice president and chairman of program, Georgia federation, spent several days in Atlanta this week completing details for the Augusta program for the state convention. She left Thursday to attend the second district executive board meeting in Thomasville.

Mrs. Howard McCall was signally honored at the state D. A. R. convention in Savannah by having the patriotic fund for historical research named for her in recognition of her valuable work in this activity. It will be known as the "Mrs. Howard McCall fund."

Albany Woman's Club had as guest speaker at the recent luncheon, Mrs. C. E. Glauser, of Quitman, who had as her subject, "Education."

Baxley Woman's Club donated $10 to the student-aid fund which is raised each year by clubs of the state for the purpose of assisting worthy students.

Cordially welcomed into the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs are three new groups: Parent-Teacher Association of Stapleton, president, Mrs. E. J. Stapleton; Houghton Junior Woman's Club, Miss Sarah Francis Holland, president, and Summerville Junior Woman's Club, Mrs. James Jackson, sponsor. The glad hand is extended to each member of these organizations.

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, former president of general federation, was featured last week on the program of Phillips H. Lord, "Gang Busters," having for her subject, "What American Women Can Do To Help Reduce Crime." Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Co-mer, has a letter of thanks from Mr. Lord for her communication relative to the appearance of Mrs. Poole, and for her expressed desire to spread the gospel of crime prevention.

The attractiveness of the locale, the fact that this is the first council in Mrs. Roberta Lawson's administration, and the excellent transportation facilities, all support the conviction that the Miami meeting, April 27 to May 1, will be one of the best of the parent organization. Mrs. T. V. Moore, president and general federation director for Florida, is chairman of the local council board.

Congratulations to Millen Woman's Club on the new community house and a beautiful colonial footstool to grace the fireside have been received by Mrs. Chapple Chandler, club chairman of the better homes committee.

Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the University of Georgia System, has accepted the appointment to a membership on the advisory committee of the education department of General Federation of Women's Clubs made by the chairman, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore. Mrs. Whitehurst will be guest of Georgia Federation at the state convention in April.

After hectic trips from one point to another our circuit-riding federation president arrived recently for a speaking appointment in Macon. While partaking refreshments, there came over the air the announcement, "Our next selection will be dedicated to the president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, and is 'I Feel Like a Feather in a Breeze. Flitting From Bow to Bow.'"

The first evening of the general federation council on April 27, has been designated as "Miami night" when in addition to the addresses of welcome and other speeches there will be a dinner given by the Florida women for the board of directors and distinguished guests. The junior clubwomen will entertain on the following evening, termed "Tropical Night," staging their program on an island in the pool of the Miami Biltmore hotel. Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole will speak on this occasion.

Brunswick Woman's Club entertained at a bridge-tee and fashion show at the King and Prince Club, on St. Simons Island, assembling over 100 women. Spring fashions were modeled. Mrs. J. B. Abrams giving a description of the gowns. Accompanying music was played by Mrs. Bertha Stevenson.

Special feature of the meeting of the Canton Woman's Club last Friday was in the form of a welcome gesture to a new neighbor, Coker hospital. Dr. Coker accepted an invitation for tea and upon arrival was showered with towels and bath cloths to be used in the fine new hospital.

At the March meeting of Winder Woman's Club, Miss Alice Drake, district home demonstration agent from the extension department of the University of Georgia, was speaker, her talk giving special emphasis on home making.

Mrs. Albert Hill, vice president-at-large of Georgia federation, will be speaker at the meeting of Athens Woman's Club on Tuesday, her subject being "The State Institutions."

Good wishes are extended the Ellijah Woman's Club upon the auspicious occasion of the dedication of the new clubhouse on April 1.

Fannie Royce Richards was hostess to the Chatsworth Juniors Wednesday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Richards, on Dalton road.

"Shirley Temple" Resemblance Contest

NO PREMIER at Grauman's famous Chinese Theatre was ever more thrilling! more astir with happy anticipation! excitement! Saturday, at 11 o'clock, was the judging in the "Shirley Temple" Resemblance Contest in High's Children's Dept., 3rd Floor.

The galaxy of youthful beauty—the outpouring of parents and friends—brought interest to a high pitch. And, had Shirley, herself, been present—she'd have rubbed her eyes in amazement—for there were verily hundreds and hundreds of little girls—so closely resembling the little star that the judges had wrinkled brows coming to a decision.

High's congratulates the three winners—and there are no words flattering enough to praise the beauty and loveliness of the hundreds of others who took part.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 29, 1936.

Civil Service Given Huge Majority Over Party Patronage in Poll

Voters Favor Merit Test For All Emergency Jobs

Patronage System Upheld by Minority Who Say It Keeps Parties Alive.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, March 28.—In one of the largest majorities ever rolled up in an Institute poll, American public opinion has given the lie to the famous Jacksonian principle: "To the victors belong the spoils."

Any act, proposal, group, or man seeking to root out party patronage in the filling of government jobs in order to widen and expand the Civil Service system has the unequivocal support of a majority of the voting public. Frankly, the size of this majority surprised the Institute and was not anticipated by even the most ardent advocates of the merit system.

The question asked was whether government jobs should be awarded to those who help elect the party or to those who receive the highest marks in Civil Service examinations. Here is what the voters replied:

"Give jobs to those who qualify in Civil Service examinations," said 88%.

"Give jobs to faithful party workers," said 12%.

This was not all. This was a vote on a theory, a principle. But the next question on the ballot brought the Civil Service issue down to brass tacks in contemporary politics. The New Deal has added approximately 235,000 jobs to the direct, full-time federal pay roll but only one in 107, according to a recent study, is under Civil Service regulation. "Spoils!" cry the defenders of the merit system, to which democrats reply: "The emergency was grave; a thousand things needed doing. We couldn't wait for the slow routine of Civil Service to fill new positions."

Which side is the public on? Today, for the first time, the answer is known. To the question: "Should all Washington employees of the special emergency agencies created by the present administration be placed under Civil Service?" the public replied as follows:

"Yes," said 69%.

"No," said 31%.

This is a vote of approximately 7 to 3 in favor of putting employees of the RFC, the Resettlement Administration, the Housing Administration and a host of other New Deal bureaus under the merit system.

Voters who uphold the opposite position, that of party patronage, generally contend that if patronage were removed the parties would lose vitality, that there would be no incentive for members to get out and work for election.

A Vital Issue.

The Civil Service issue has already been catapulted into the presidential campaign. Republicans talk of the "pernicious bureaucracy" of the Roosevelt administration. The President has replied, indirectly, in a letter to the League of Women Voters, militant champion of Civil Service, that he himself believes there is no question of "greater moment or broader effects" than the enlargement of the merit system.

But in a sense the Civil Service question transcends the petty politics of today or tomorrow.

The development of an able, intelligent and efficient body of public servants grows more vital, according to observers, every time the federal government extends its influence over private lives and business as it has during the present depression. When a government undertakes to guarantee the economic security of its individual citizens, the argument runs, it has adopted a task which calls for a minimum of political manipulation and a maximum of wise, prudent administration. Wrote Civil Service Commissioner Leonard D. White in Fortune: "Already this baffling peace-time problem (war on depression) has caused greater changes in government structure and administration than the crowded years of the war, and the end is not yet."

One thing today's poll shows is that the American public, usually wise, sometimes foolish, but always powerful, has already perceived that these changes in administrative structure will increasingly call for public workers removed from partisan politics and selected for WHAT they know, not WHOM they know.

An Accurate Cross-section.

The number of ballots distributed in today's poll was approximately 100,000. They went by mail and by 204 personal interviewers to a cross-section of the entire voting population of the country—to the common man. Any gourmet knows that it would be inadequate to sample a lemon pie by eating only the fluffy meringue on the surface or by nibbling the bottom crust. The sample of public opinion in today's poll includes the top, the bottom, and the middle in correct proportion.

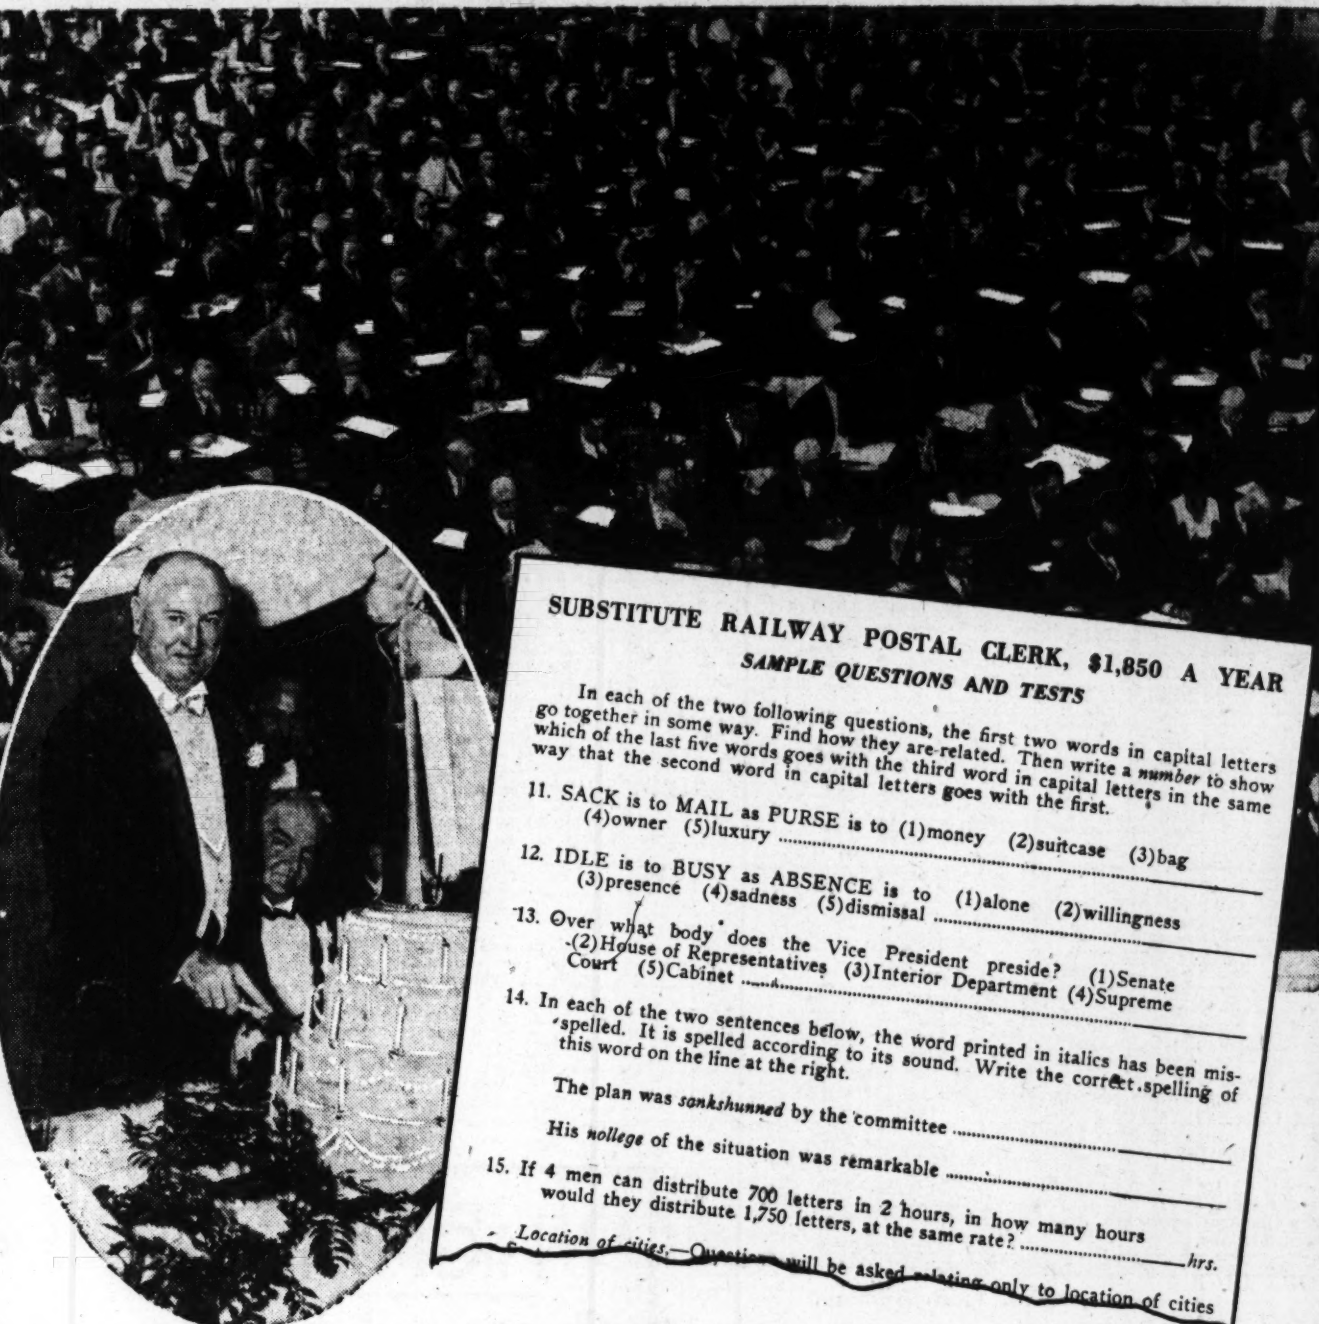

How the Parties Voted.

The issue of Civil Service finds the rank and file of republicans, democrats and socialists riding side by side in the same roller coaster for once. Democrats are 85% in favor of Civil Service, republicans 91%, socialists 93%. It is quite probable that Civil Service reform will be a plank in the platforms of one or more of the parties even though the leaders subsequently pay no more than lip service to it.

On the question of putting the emergency administration employees in Washington under the merit system all three parties are again agreed. The democratic vote in favor of this proposal is 68%, the republican vote 74%, the socialist vote 74%.

Civil Service Vs. Patronage: A Leading Political Issue of Today

Above: Applicants taking a civil service examination. Right: Sample questions on a Federal civil service test for railway postal clerk. Left: James A. Farley, chief patronage dispenser for the administration, which is under fire by republicans for filling many newly-created jobs without bringing them under civil service. Mr. Farley replies that the national emergency could not wait on the slow routine of civil service procedure.

Selecting Question.

It has often been said that the results of a poll depend on the manner in which the question is asked.

The poll on civil service is a good example of the care exercised by the Institute of Public Opinion in selecting and phrasing its questions.

At least 100 versions were prepared by the Institute staff and by experts in psychology and government before the final questions were adopted. Mr. Pendleton Herring, of the Department of Government at Harvard University, submitted several dozen touching all phases of the civil service problem. The Psychological Corporation of America, a nation-wide organization of leading psychologists, not only made additional suggestions but tested the wording of several questions by submitting them to a small group of voters, and was able as a result to suggest phrasings that would be clear and impartial.

The next step was to submit the best questions to the editors of the 73 newspapers now publishing "America Speaks." With their approval, the Institute of Public Opinion included the selected questions on a test ballot to make absolutely certain that the issue was stated clearly and with the least possible bias. After being satisfied that these conditions had been met, the questions were placed on the regular ballots, and distributed to approximately 100,000 voters.

Next Week—G. O. P. Candidates

Hotter and hotter grows the race today, and the Institute of Public Opinion gazes into no crystals. But the next weekly poll of the Institute of Public Opinion will indicate what the republican voters of the United States think about these men; whom the voters favor and why they favor him. Ballots sent to an accurate cross-section of the voters will provide this answer.

Watch for America Speaks, the weekly poll of the Institute of Public Opinion, in next week's Constitution.

Filling Emergency Jobs By Merit Poses Riddle

NEW YORK, March 28.—The results of the poll reported today, showing an overwhelming majority in favor of civil service, give rise to a number of nice political riddles. One is this: Suppose for a moment the will of the people were followed and the employees of the so-called New Deal "emergency" administrations were put under civil service. This could be done by examination, with the jobs parceled out to those receiving the highest marks. But it could also be done in at least two other ways, and therein lies a caution.

The bureau chiefs could pick not the first man on the list, but one of the first three. This practice is already established procedure in the filling of civil service jobs, and political chiefs of both parties have had no difficulty in finding on the lists the political candidates they wish to reward.

The second method would be for congress or the President, working with the civil service commission, to "cover" employees into the civil service by a blanket order. Such a method, it applied to the emergency bureaus, would obviously be milk and honey for democrats but rather rough on republicans since it would tend to keep democratic incumbents in office more or less permanently.

Then if a republican administration were elected and the emergency bureaus abolished, these democratic office holders would still remain on the civil service preferred list and be eligible for appointments to other bureaus. Human nature being what it is, the incoming republicans would be sorely tempted to juggle the civil service lists and evade the spirit of the regulations in order to get republicans into jobs instead. Hence a reform begun with the aim of strengthening civil service might end in perpetuating its worst faults.

Since the New Deal began, the President has approved 11 specific bills exempting from the merit system more than 41,000 jobs in New Deal agencies. The general theory was that it would be a mistake to put these and other positions under civil service since they were of a temporary emergency character and would probably be abolished when the crisis was over. It is interesting to note, however, that during the war crisis the Wilson administration succeeded in increasing the number of civil service posts by more than 300,000 in one year.

In all fairness it must be said, however, that there has been a trend recently toward bringing some of the newer federal agencies under the civil service as, for instance, the social security board, the S. E. C., the labor relations board and others. Furthermore, several New Deal agencies, notably the TVA, have developed merit systems of their own.

In 1884, the year after the civil service law was passed, approximately 10.5 per cent of the jobs in the executive branch of the government were subject to civil service examinations. The growth since that time is shown in the following table:

Year	Per Cent of Executive Positions Subject to Civil Service
1894	25.5
1904	51.2
1914	67.2
1924	74.8
1935	87.0

Thus from a beginning of 10.5 per cent the proportion rose to a high of over 80 per cent under Hoover, but has now sunk to 57 per cent.

NATION WANTS POSTMASTERS SELECTED BY CIVIL SERVICE

"Should all postmasters hereafter be selected by civil service examinations?" This question was one of three asked of voters in the poll reported today.

It drew an overwhelming affirmative of 66 per cent.

The vote cut across party lines. More than eight out of every ten democrats voted for the proposal, and nearly nine out of every ten republicans. It was carried in all states of the Union by majorities ranging from a low of 64 per cent in Delaware to a high of 98 per cent in Idaho.

The vote was timely, because it amounted, in substance, to a national referendum on a bill now pending before the tribunals of the people in Washington.

Introduced in the house by Representative Robert Ramspeck, democrat, of Georgia, this measure would place first, second and third class postmasters under civil service. A companion bill was introduced in the house by Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming. Both measures are buried near the bottom of the legislative hopper and there is little concentrated congressional support behind them. It would probably take a special ruling from the rules committee of both branches of congress to dig them up, observers say.

The O'Mahoney-Ramspeck bills provide an interesting illustration of the political squabbles that pop and fizz around the civil service issue. At the present time candidates for the first three classes of postmastership have to take examinations, but the top three on the list are certified to the postmaster general and he may take his pick. Thus while lip service is paid to the merit system, political appointments can be made, for leaders of both parties have had little trouble finding men on the lists whom they wish to appoint.

The O'Mahoney-Ramspeck bills seek to correct this practice. But they have aroused the violent opposition of republican congressmen. The reason is simple. The Ramspeck bill provides that the first three classes of postmasterships shall be filled by the "reappointment and classification" of the incumbent postmasters, without competition. In simple words, this means that most of the present democratic postmasters would be given their jobs for life.

Congressional observers say that the chances for enactment of the Ramspeck bill at this session are slim indeed.

The above graph shows the percentage of jobs in the executive branch of the federal government subject to examination, 1884-1935.

declared that the emergency bureaus would be run more efficiently, and that everyone should have an equal chance for a job.

Present United States Civil Service Commission

Following the death of President Garfield, Congress passed the civil service law and created a commission to supervise the filling of government jobs brought under the law by presidential order or by act of Congress. The commission members today are (above) Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillan, Harry B. Mitchell (president), and Leonard D. White.

The assassination of President Garfield in a Washington railway station, July 2, 1881, by a disappointed office seeker named Charles J. Guiteau, crystallized the movement for the civil service system. The President lingered through the summer and died Sept. 19, 1881. His death hastened the reforms which President Grant and President Hayes had tried unsuccessfully to put into effect.

HOKE SMITH BEGINS BASEBALL GAMES

Under the supervision of Mr. J. L. Cook and Mrs. K. B. Edwards, the physical education instructors of Hoke Smith Junior High school, the boys and girls have organized basketball teams. The teams play against one another. The playing is done after school hours. They have begun a tournament and there is extreme rivalry shown on all sides.

The teams competing in the tournament are comprised of members of the Hoke Smith Athletic Association. The athletic association was formed because of the need for money for sporting goods. The need arose, of course, because of unnecessary roughness on equipment. A membership fee of ten cents was charged and upon paying this fee the student was given a membership card with his name and the date on it. This card entitled the owner to attend any athletic function free of charge for one semester.

The members of the winning teams will be awarded a school letter to sew on their sweaters.

High 5 enjoyed making some paintings of the early spring flowers.

High and Low 6 are still practicing their chorus work. Last week we went to visit Peoples Street school. Twenty-four of us went on the street car. We enjoyed it very much.

High 1 like to write in their new spelling tablets.

Low 4 have finished their "Ten Cent Store" and are now making toys for it.

High 2 are enjoying the story about Chirpers.

High 3-1 are finding ways to improve their community by the study of delightful Dutch community life. They are also working on a program for "Follow the Fleet," current feature picture at the Fox theater, to make reviewers dig deep for new superlatives.

Irving Berlin has written seven new songs to test the vocal excellence of Astaire, Miss Rogers, and a newcomer to the screen, the lovely Harriet Hilliard, and to provide the rhythms for the tantalizing toes of the queen of tap-dancing, Ginger Rogers. The new picture, "Follow the Fleet," is a real "down to earth" musical, employing a logical and meaty story, every day habits.

Low 4 have finished the Egyptian border for their room and are now making large palm trees.

High 4-1 made pots with tulips in them, for their mothers. They are going to practice on their bird play to be given soon.

High 5 are working on a Viking play, "The Founding of Greenland." Low 5 have finished their spelling contest and have awarded the prize.

High 5-1 have been studying pioneer life. They are making friezes of the modes of transportation and pioneer homes. They are also writing plays about pioneers.

Donat, in Subtle Comedy, Is Star Of Paramount Theater Feature

Robert Donat, the stage and screen star who thrilled the world as "The Count of Monte Cristo," is the star at the Paramount theater in the new romantic spy thriller, "The 39 Steps," with Madeleine Carroll as his feminine lead.

He impersonates a gallant gentleman who is wanted by the police for murder and other sundry affairs. Donat, who has a flair for subtle comedy and lightning speed, makes his newest screen role alive and adventurous.

As Richard Hannay, his cinematic career is punctuated by hairbreadth escapes, daring exploits, cross-country travel, and female entanglements. Coolly and calmly he flies in the face of danger, arouses suspicion, meddles in strange plots and strange mysteries, and finally emerges, smiling, gay, and unvanquished. It is in such a mood, in fact, that he plunges into a political meeting hall in a small Scottish town and boldly impersonates the star speaker of the evening.

This scene, incidentally, is one of the amusing highlights of the film. Through the combined efforts of Donat's masterly acting and Alfred Hitchcock's superb directing it emerges as a complete burlesque of every political meeting ever held on the face of the earth. There is the thin, nervous candidate who looks at his nails and wriggles his feet for lack of some other form of personal expression. Very much present also is the "grand old man" of such gatherings with his colossal moustache, his gargantuan watch chain and his grandiose manner. The motley crew is further swelled by the presence of the diminutive secretary with a pince-nez and the dried-up, withered, but nevertheless world-wise dowager who smiles benignly and serves tea after the meeting ends.

Donat, orating briskly from the speaker's platform (in spite of the handoffs on his wrists) gives a keen performance of the professional politician. His speech is high-sounding and pompous with commonplace talk and well-worn platitudes. His manner is properly ingratiating. His point is perfect. What makes it so intriguingly humorous to the audience is the fact that the speech also accurately describes the hero's plight, of which his listeners are entirely unaware, for a beautiful blonde is betraying him to the police, who are at his heels.

This comedy scene is only one of the many which Alfred Hitchcock directed with that master touch he understands so well.

Myrna Loy, Montgomery Score In 'Petticoat Fever' at Grand

A girl practically resigned to her forthcoming marriage to a blustery, wealthy Englishman, and a young man mooned for a year in a remote Labrador wireless station, are chief characters in "Petticoat Fever," film version of the successful Broadway comedy, now at Loew's Grand theater. Myrna Loy is seen as the fiancée, and Robert Montgomery is the radio operator. Reginald Owen, as Miss Loy's fiancé, heads the able supporting cast.

Myrna meets Montgomery when the plane in which she and her fiancé are traveling is out of gasoline. They are forced to land in a lonely field near Montgomery's station, and they seek refuge in his headquarters. Montgomery has not seen a white woman for a year. The vision of the beautiful Miss Loy arouses his determination to keep her, even if he must treat her and her fiancé as virtual prisoners, sending out false messages when Owen dictates radiograms for aid.

In the station, the situation soon develops into a combat between Montgomery and Owen for the girl's love. Owen sees that Miss Loy is charmed by Montgomery's directness and ardor, and he plans a ruse to escape. Holding Montgomery off with a pistol, he takes the dog-trail, calling to Miss Loy to follow. But she is unwilling to go, and sends instead the Eskimo servant girl, wrapped up in her hooded fur parka. Owen travels many miles before he discovers the identity of his companion.

Then Montgomery's former fiancée arrives at the station. She has jilted him because his prospects were poor, but now she announces that she has changed her mind, that she is ready to marry him after all. This is the situation when Owen, dragging the Eskimo girl with him, returns.

"Petticoat Fever" proves to be a gay and romantic entertainment, one whose brisk manner benefits considerably by the expert acting of Miss Loy, Montgomery and a fine supporting cast.

BUCKHEAD BILLS ATTRACTIVE FILMS

Hepburn, Sylvia Sidney and Horton Head Stars on Programs.

The Buckhead is one of four theaters playing "Dancing Feet" first-run in Atlanta today and tomorrow. Ben Lyon, Joan Marsh, Eddie Nugent and Isabel Jewell play the leading roles.

Sylvia Sidney stars in "Mary Burns, Fugitive," to be shown Tuesday. The story traces the tragic experiences of a girl caught in the web of the law through an innocent friendship with a man she did not know was a public enemy. Melvyn Douglas, Alan Baxter, Pert Kelton and Wallace Ford are in the cast.

The picture for Wednesday is "Crime and Punishment," featuring Edward Arnold, Peter Lorre, Marian Marsh, Tala Birell and Robert Allen. The film tells the story of a brilliant student who turns murderer. Katharine Hepburn's genius for inimitable comedy is given full sway in "Sylvia Scarlett," which comes to the screen Thursday. The picture is rich in adventure, romance and colorful drama. Cary Grant and Brian Aherne give excellent support.

With all the whimsy, pathos and genuine comedy at his command, Edward Everett Horton renders a portrait of a small town hero who had to take a number of kicks to get wise to himself in "Your Uncle Dudley," the romantic comedy to be shown Friday. Others in the cast are Lois

Hilton Siamese Twins Head Bill Opening at Capitol Theater Today

The most intimate persons in the world arrive in Atlanta today and the appearance of Daisy and Violet Hilton, America's Siamese twins, at the Capitol theater, will doubtless excite the interest of local students of psychology.

The Hilton sisters are quite happy in their union and have no desire to be separated. They are in harmony mentally and physically. The singleness and loneliness of the detached human are foreign to them.

The Hilton sisters, however, are not the only entertainment that the Capitol will offer on its stage, because the sisters are bringing along their all-star vaudeville revue with a cast of 25 stage and radio stars, including Dale Stevens and his famous NBC broadcasting orchestra.

The Hilton sisters' unit is the most costly yet booked at the Capitol, and it was secured by the management especially for appreciation week, which the Capitol is celebrating this week. By offering a special stage and screen program at no advance in prices, the Capitol management hopes in a small measure to show its appreciation to patrons for their loyalty and patronage.

The new Warner Brothers' production, "Boulder Dam," which colorfully exploits the exciting incidents connected with the construction of the mighty power project, is the screen feature to be offered in conjunction with the Hilton sisters' unit. The stars are Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis and Lyle Talbot.

The picture is crammed with dynamic drama, daredevil action, heroic deeds and thrilling incidents in addition to its romance. Miss Ellis also adds a colorful touch to the picture by singing two songs specially written for the production.

The Capitol opens its box office at 1:20 o'clock Sunday afternoon with the first screen subject on the screen at 2 o'clock. The first stage show is presented around 2:15 o'clock.

Radio Comedian Jack Benny Stars In 'It's in the Air' at the Rialto

Jack Benny, radio comedian whose weekly broadcasts on Sunday night have been accorded first place in many national popularity votes, is making his debut on the screen in the star role of "It's in the Air," feature attraction now showing at the Rialto theater.

It is safe to say that the tens of thousands of Benny fans of the radio will not be disappointed when they see him in the picture. He is just as attractive in looks as he sounds and his fun adapts itself splendidly to the new medium.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer made the picture, with Charles F. Reisner directing. The story is an original for the screen by Byron Morgan and Lew Lipton and it has been given every advantage of setting and support that is possible.

The supporting cast contains many of the most popular names of the screen today, topped by Ted Healy, Una Merkel, Nat Pendleton, Mary Carlisle, Greta Mitchell, Harvey Stephens, Al Shean and many others.

The story, complicated as every good comedy must be, centers around a crooked gambler who tries to "go straight" in order to win back the estranged wife with whom he is still desperately in love. It involves a stratospheric flight; a great resort hotel, slick businessmen, flirty dowagers and debutantes and a "bailing out" from the balloon at a height of 10,000 feet.

Manager W. T. Murray again has made his entire program entertainingly packed from start to finish. It will be at the Rialto for the full seven-day week, including Sunday and closing next Thursday night.

NEW CENTER THEATER OPENS AT EARLY DATE

Early opening of the new Center theater, on the same Whitehall street site which was famous as the Vaudeville theater, years ago, was promised yesterday by L. S. Bach, owner and operator of the new house.

The new theater will have the latest type sound system and modern air conditions, Mr. Bach stated. There will be every convenience, including spacious rest rooms, and it is hoped that the theater will not only be a popular house of entertainment but that it will likewise prove an acceptable "shopper's rest" especially for ladies. Outstanding product from the major producing studios will provide the screen features.

'Trail of Lonesome Pine' Is Held For Its Second Week at Georgia

Color films, for years the dream of the motion picture, have finally arrived, and the finished product, as demonstrated by Walter Wanger's all Technicolor production of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which is now being held over at the Georgia theater, far surpasses all the claims which publicity men have been making for it. "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is in full color, but that statement doesn't nearly cover the facts. Color can be vague, or it can be too prominent, but in this film color has been so superbly handled, so intelligently used, that after the first moment of pleasant surprise, the onlooker is not even aware that he is seeing a film! It is so natural, so lifelike, so clear that the illusion of watching an actual scene being enacted before one's eyes is created, and maintained throughout the picture.

The film version of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is a faithful adaptation of John Fox Jr.'s classic, Sylvia Sydney, Fred MacMurray, Henry Ford and the balance of the well chosen cast bring the immortal characters to life, and one feels all the intensity of the primitive passions and emotions which are the heritage of the simple mountain folk. The work of little four-year-old "Spanky" McFarland deserves special mention. This little fellow has been entrusted with an extremely important role, as Buddie, the youngest of the Tolliver clan, and he delivers a sterling performance.

The story of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is a familiar one, telling of a feud between the Tollivers and the Falins in the wild Cumberland mountain region, and the efforts of an engineer from the outside world to bring the idea of civilization and modern progress into the lives of the mountain clans.

Action, dialogue and photography have been skillfully blended by Director Henry Hathaway; each member of the cast is outstanding in his part; but the real hero of the production is color, which makes "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" one of the truly great pictures of all time.

Today and tomorrow the Ponce de Leon theater will present for the first time in Atlanta "Dancing Feet" with Ben Lyon, Joan Marsh, Eddie Nugent and Isabel Jewell. As special added attractions also will be offered "The March of Time" and a Silly Symphony by Walt Disney, "Who Killed Cock Robin."

Tuesday only Francis Lederer and Frances Dee will be co-starred in "The Gay Deception."

Wednesday only "Way Down East" will feature Henry Fonda and Rosabelle Hudson. There are many popular supporting players in the cast including Slim Summerville, Astrid Allwyn and Andy Devine.

Thursday and Friday the ever popular Ginger Rogers will appear in "In Person," one of her latest pictures in which she is assisted by George Brent. Saturday James Dunn will be seen in Vivia Delmar's drama "Bad Boy" with Dorothy Wilson and Louise Fazenda.

Friday presents "The 39 Steps," a new romantic comedy with George Brent as the leading man. The supporting cast includes Grant Mitchell, Alan Mowbray and others.

Friday presents Frank Parker, radio singer, in a film musical "Sweet Surrender." Tamara of "Roberta" is co-starred with the tenor. Others featured are Helen Lynd and Russ Brown.

Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey will be the treat for Saturday in the new comedy, "The Rainmakers," a clever satire.

Kindergarten Library Dedication Memorializes Little Dot Meador

By Sally Forth.

A FITTING tribute to a smiling baby face and winsome baby ways, recently stilling by the dark Angel of Death, was the children's library dedicated last Tuesday to the precious memory of little Doris Meador, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Meador.

Doris, who was known to her little playmates as Dot, enrolled at the kindergarten of Moreland Avenue school last September, and though her sunny presence only brightened the schoolroom three short months, she became so enshrined in the hearts of her associates that they sought some way of expressing their irreparable loss at her passing. A kindergarten library was suggested by the mothers who form the kindergarten Parent-Teacher Association, of which Mrs. Meador was a prominent and valued member.

Almost immediately hundreds of books for little children of kindergarten age were contributed by loving friends. In one corner of the large schoolroom, shelves were built and flanked on either side by comfortable seats.

When it was all finished and books, many of which were gifts from Dot's parents, were installed on the shelves, an appropriate dedication service was held. Mrs. M. B. Albright, the little girl's teacher, presided over the service, and among those present from a distance were her grandmother, Mrs. W. G. Meador, and her aunt, Miss Mildred Meador, of Gainesville. In addition to the books, Mr. and Mrs. Meador also presented many of Dot's toys, her tricycle, scooter, chairs, and numerous other things, for the daily use of her kindergarten playmates.

Dot bore the name of her lovely mother, the former Doris Pittman, of Sumner. She was the adored granddaughter of Mrs. Charles Pittman, of Sumner, and of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Meador, of Gainesville. The poignant memory of her appealing charms, green in the hearts of her adoring family, is repeated in the hearts of a host of friends, for her engaging baby ways capti-and danced at Brookhaven without another couple. When sultry August came around, so did Don, and Lib was soon wearing a beautiful square-cut diamond, indicative of their approaching marriage. Don is originally from Alabama, but he and Lib will reside in Monroe, La., where he is prominently associated in business.

WHEN charming Rosebud Leide had a birthday party several evenings ago, she'd invited a group of her close friends to dinner at her home. Of course, she received many attractive presents, but what dismayed Rosebud was that the present from her mother and father was a tiny miniature de luxe sedan wrapped in cellophane. Rosebud was enthused over the present very much, but one might suspect that she was a tiny bit disappointed.

However, when the guests were departing, what should she see parked in front of her home but an exact replica of the tiny automobile in life size, and wrapped in cellophane, too. Rosebud is quite enthused over her handsome gift, and she spends a large part of her time giving her friends the treat of riding in her new car.

GLIMPSED here and there, Emily Evans garbed in a blue evening dress which matched her pretty blue eyes, and dancing to the lilting music at the Driving Club dinner-dance. Mrs. G. F. Ferguson wearing a chic black straw hat banded in white pique and held in place with a white pique band encircling the back of her dark hair. The wild waves at St. Simon's enticing Mamie and Lewis Gregg from their seashore cottage. Lois Patillo Hill supervising the planting of her garden at her farm on Chamblee road, and feeding her friendly little goat that romps and plays like a child. Mrs. Everett Strupper Jr. looking very smart in a black frock flowered in green, worn with green bag and gloves and a becoming black hat. The altar of the church was banked with handsome palms and ferns, interspersed with seven-branched cathedral candelabra holding burning white tapers. Several large floor baskets of Easter lilies were placed among the greenery and clusters of lilies marked the pews reserved for the families.

Library Service Chairman Gives Suggestions for Greater Service

Mrs. George H. Slappey, library service chairman of Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, makes suggestions to library service chairmen in reply to inquiries made in regard to the new WPA opportunity for greater local library service in the following article:

"Since the WPA offers only labor it is very necessary to enlist the support of local institutions, clubs and interested citizens if best results are to be achieved. 'Parent-Teacher Meetings' have been formed in several counties. This group might receive a nucleus of books for a countywide demonstration from private or club libraries in a demonstration of what better library service would mean to the community. Library interest might be increased by the library worker to discuss books and reading leading to the contribution of magazines and books and to the use of a co-operative library service.

"In some communities the sponsoring agency for this local library service would be the board of education of the county or city, or the school superintendent. In the interest of the board, this coupling of educational and library interest is very apt to be the most productive of movements because the training of the child in the school toward the intelligent use of the library seems the best way for the educator to encourage individual initiative and he is handicapped without the library as an available laboratory for this sort of education.

"Carnegie library boards are most often sponsoring this wider exchange of reading material over larger areas. The Federation of Women's Clubs are deeply interested in the movement and are often the sponsor. And perhaps the best sponsor of all is an organization of a 'library service' group out of a representative member from every club and organization, in a district service. Any sponsoring agency will need, of course, the help of the Georgia Library Commission, and this is eagerly proffered.

"As to the source of books: There may be funds from the county or city boards of education, sometimes organized and co-ordinated with the help of the Georgia Library Commission into district service since district service offers seems the most economically maintainable in a permanent library program. Sponsors of the library movement are sometimes making personal gifts and are organizing their clubs into activities which means gifts: town libraries, knowing the commercial value to a town, in becoming the exchange library center for the county or district, are often making substantial gifts. Legislative appropriations are, of course, the support to look forward to.

"Here are some of the things the WPA workers may help you to do in your community: Opening main or branch libraries in public institutions such as hospitals, prison camps, etc.; opening main or branch libraries for additional hours; organizing story hours and reading clubs for children; making contacts between adult education groups, such as the Parent-Teacher 'Parent Education' groups; writing book reviews and making posters, and in other ways aiding library publicity; making lists for individual readers or groups; sending notifications of special books in the library to interested persons; aiding children to use reference materials; teaching care of books and use of the library; classification and recommendation of free material; and recommendation of free material.

"A special demonstration of the service of the WPA librarian will be made at a special library service conference held at the convention of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers in Macon, in April; all library service chairmen who can post of its P.T.A.

Due to the many inquiries of garden clubs entering floats in the Dogwood Festival parade, the Garden Center gives the following suggestions which will be of help to clubs in doubt as to artificial flowers and placing of the name of the club on floats: It is necessary for the name of the club to be carried, on or in front, of each float, that to be decided by the club themselves. An attractive way is to have a banner bearing the name of the club carried in front of each float.

Naturally, artificial flowers will be the property of garden club members and should certainly not be cut from the woods. The parade, held on April 20, will start from the city hall at 4 o'clock p. m. The floats will not be judged on points, but on the general artistic effect. Judges for the floats will be announced later.

Substantial prizes will be given and the names of the participating clubs will be listed and included in the program which will be sent out all over the country. In the purposes of garden clubs the one "to aid in civic improvements" is included and this is an opportunity and privilege extended to the garden clubs of Atlanta which is unprecedented.

The following clubs are hostesses at the Garden Center this week: Monday morning, Crepe Myrtle; Tuesday, West End Civic; Wednesday, Peony; Thursday, Deatur; Friday, West End Garden Club; and Saturday, Cascade.

Springhill Club.

Spring Hill Garden Club met Friday at the home of Mrs. Paul Lovelace. Mrs. A. H. Carson read "What Is the Audubon Society," Mrs. Fred Morris read an article on the bird preserve in DeKalb county. Mrs. C. J. Hohenstutz, chairman of the nominating committee, brought in the slate and all officers were unanimously re-elected. Delegates to the Garden Clubs of Georgia convention in Albany are Mrs. R. L. McIntire and Mrs. Robert Mable.

A bird contest was featured and Miss G. C. Green and Mrs. T. F. Dowda were awarded prizes. The attendance prizes were won by Mrs. S. R. McGillis. Mrs. Fred Morris was given the most prize, wooden lovebirds, in the monthly flower exhibit Mrs. H. A. Hutching won first place. Mrs. S. R. McGillis, second, and Mrs. Paul Lovelace, third. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. F. M. Collier, April 10, at 2 o'clock.

Garden Club Activities Are of Interest

It's the Season for Spraying

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

All spraying, like Gaul, is divided into three parts. The two parts that we are most interested in are spraying for the two classes of insects, chewing and sucking, and the third division is spraying for diseases such as mildew, black spot, rust, etc.

Chewing Insects. Because of the method of control we generally combine the lapping insects and chewing insects into the same class, calling them chewing insects. This is done because of the fact that they may be controlled in exactly the same manner. Except in the case of those chewing insects that carry on their feeding in protected places, such as stem borers and cane borers, they may all be controlled by the use of a stomach poison or by powerful contact poisons. The two most common stomach poisons, generally used, are arsenate of lead and calcium arsenate, although our more old-fashioned gardeners like to use Paris green.

Artenate of lead in general is considered better than the other two because of the fact that it serves as a repellent and has a certain amount of fungicide value. Most of the sucking insects thrust the mouth parts through the outside coating and feed on the juices, thus avoiding death, if these plants have been sprayed or dusted with a stomach poison. These poisons may be applied either as a dust or as a wet spray, the dusting method being the easiest to carry on, while the liquid method is the cheapest and in a great many instances more effective. In dusting the material should be applied in as powdery a form as possible, in order that it may be applied in a cloud. If it is applied as a liquid spray, this spray should be as misty as possible.

Sucking Insects. Due to the peculiar way in which sucking insects feed it is necessary that a contact insecticide of some kind be used. The standard insecticide for these insects is nicotine-sulphate, and is generally offered in a commercial way on a 40 per cent solution. This is a very powerful contact spray and will kill the common insects and plant lice if applied at the rate of one ounce to six gallons of water.

Several oil sprays are prepared for dormant use for killing sucking insects only attack the under side of the sects and aphids and to prevent to a certain extent, aphid eggs. Pyrethrum, either in liquor or powder form, has the power of giving off gas which paralyzes or asphyxiates insects. These are not sufficiently concentrated to be dangerous to animals or man. Pyrethrum sprays may also be used on chewing insects but must be applied in a more concentrated solution as they are harder to asphyxiate than are the common plant lice.

Fungicides. There is a very interesting story connected with the discovery of Bordeaux mixture as a control for fungus diseases on plants.

It seems that in Bordeaux there were a great many grape orchards. It also was true at that time, during the 19th century, that there were a great many little boys and that these boys and those grapes were attracted to each other to the misfortune of the owners of the grape orchards. For some reason, one of the owners of one of the vineyards had some copper sulphate and he dusted it on his grape vines in order that the grapes would be discolored and the little boys would be afraid to eat them.

Much to his amazement he found that not only were the little boys repelled, but that the mildew, which they had presumed was impossible to control, was effectively controlled. And so our now most common fungicide and the base of most of our patented preparations was discovered. Bordeaux mixture cannot be used for scale on peaches.

Bordeaux can be used, however, on almost all of the vegetable and most of the common fruits and berries, and most of the flowers.

For black spot on roses, a mixture of nine parts sulphur and one part of arsenate of lead, commonly called Massey Dust, is more effective than Bordeaux mixture.

Red Spider. There is probably more trouble from red spider on the evergreens, particularly the cedars, used around the home, than any other one insect or disease that attacks these plants. To control these effectively, it is necessary to spray them several times with a good oil emulsion spray. These insects only attack the under side of the

To Preside at Albany Conclave

Mrs. T. H. McHatten, of Athens, president of the Garden Club of Georgia, who presides at the eighth convention of the Garden Club of Georgia, to be held on Thursday and Friday in Albany. Members of Albany Garden Club will be hostesses to the convention, which will be attended by prominent delegates, and the two-day session will be replete with brilliant social affairs and important business sessions.

leaves under a delicate silken web, there they feed by sucking the juices. They may be controlled in addition to the use of the oil emulsion sprays, by dusting heavily with sulphur. When they attack cotton plants farmers generally control them with an oil emulsion spray.

Bean Beetles. Mexican bean beetle is probably the most terrifying insect that we have in the garden, as it not only attacks beans but also other vegetables as well as flowers. The adult beetle beetle, a light brown beetle with black marks, feeds on the leaves of the plants while the grubs feed on the roots. Calcium arsenate, magnesian arsenate or a pyrethrum spray may be used for their control.

Snappedragon Wilt. One of the most heart-breaking diseases in the garden is snappedragon wilt which also attacks asters. This may be controlled by a thorough spraying of the plant with Bordeaux mixture or Samesan. Be sure that the crown of the plant is thoroughly sprayed at the same time as the other spraying is carried on.

Ants. The honey-loving ants are easily controlled as there are a number of mixtures offered under various names on the market for their control. The most common mixture is syrup-arsenate of lead and water, in the proper proportions. However, this will not control those ants that do not love honey.

This second class of ants may be killed by a fumigant of some heavier than air gas, such as carbon bisulphide, or paradichlorobenzene, which must be forced into their runs.

Flying ants, sometimes called termites, are the most difficult of all to kill and are also the most damaging ones, as they destroy any wood which they attack. The state board of entomology recommends a mixture of sodium arsenite in a solution about 5 per cent. This must be applied in a very misty spray under as high pressure as possible.

WHAT TO DO IN MARCH.

MULCHING: This is the last chance for giving the rose and perennial bed a thorough mulching with peat moss and sheep manure. This mulch will hold moisture in the beds throughout the spring and summer and of vital importance. A mixture of sheep manure, peat moss and woods earth is best.

FERTILIZING: A fairly heavy application of bone meal sheep manure should be broadcast over the lawn, as well as around the shrubbery, perennials and roses. Use raw bone meal for bulbs and perennials.

PRUNING: March is the best month for pruning all kinds of bush roses. Her on the heavy side of pruning rather than on the light side. Most varieties of roses can be pruned from 8 to 12 inches from the ground. They should be given a thorough spraying with Bordeaux or Massey Dust directly after this pruning.

SPRINTING: Now is the time for the last dormant spraying of fruit trees.

Questions, Answers On Garden Subjects

By Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown.

Question: I have a cape jasmine which is dying at the ends of the branches although the bottom it appears to be flourishing. It is in a sunny location.

Answer: I would wait until the plant puts out its leaves, then prune all dead wood out. The past winter has been severe on cape jasmynes, though I think that most of them will come back.

Question: I have a clump of bamboo that does not do well. What do you advise to make it grow strong and green?

Answer: I would cut it back and fertilize with well rotted manure. Bamboo likes moisture and does best in a sunny location, but I have found that it takes a year or two to really establish itself. But when it does it is lovely and also can be generously divided.

Question: Do you dampen the dirt with the primrose seed before putting in the icebox, and how long before plants bloom when they come up?

Answer: I show enough consideration to my electric refrigerator to use a tin pan or a new wooden box when planting seed in it. For primroses I use one-half leaf mold (sifted) or peat moss and the other half of garden soil and sand. I have it as damp as I would for any other seed bed. Plant your seed, cover lightly with peat moss, put just under the freezing unit, let it stay for three weeks having it close enough to freeze the top of the soil.

When you take it out keep in the shade, in the basement is a good place. Never let it dry out, the little seedlings will come up like magic. Then they must be transplanted into a nursery bed and well cared for all summer, taking care not to let pill bugs and snails eat them. In the fall plant them along the primrose path that you wish to make and next spring they will reward you for all of your efforts with blossom. Divide them, or at least replant them, each summer after they bloom.

I will take this opportunity to thank each of you for your interest and co-operation in the Spring Garden school sponsored by The Constitution. If your memory fails you, just write your questions to me in Decatur, Ga.

State D. A. R. Good Citizenship Pilgrimage Is Won by Fairburn Girl

By MRS. THOMAS COKE MELL, of Atlanta, State Treasurer, Georgia D. A. R.

The idea of the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizenship Pilgrimage was advanced by Honorable Ruth Bryan Owen at the D. A. R. congress April, 1934. That each state select a girl from high school upon those qualities which make good citizenship, namely: Honor, service, courage, leadership, scholarship. All expenses to be paid by the state societies for their pilgrim.

In April, 1935, 17 states sent girls to Washington, and it is hoped that this year a girl will be chosen from each of the 48 states for the pilgrimage.

At the request of Mark Smith, of Thomaston, president of the Georgia High School Association, who conducted the contest in Georgia, 67 high schools in the state responded. A committee formed from the state education department, an officer of the D. A. R. state society met with Mr. Smith in February when the selection was made. Lillie Belle Drake, of Campbell High school, Fairburn, was the winner. The girls will reach Washington on April 15 where they will be under the care of an officer, Mrs. Charles J. Bullock, official hostess, appointed by the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution. They will remain until Tuesday, the twenty-first. Sightseeing trips and entertainments will be provided. Everything will be done to make the visit a happy one.

The Georgia Society, D. A. R., is joining with other patriotic societies in creating a fund to assist Miss Ruth Blair to purchase valuable old manuscripts and documents of Georgia to be placed in the genealogical room at Rhodes Memorial Hall. The Georgia D. A. R. fund, to be known as the Mrs. Howard McCall Sr. fund, in honor of one of Georgia's most prominent and best-loved daughters, in recognition of her loyal and devoted service to the organization.

The Lucy Peel Memorial committee wish to announce that they have 15 copies of Volume I, "Historical Collections Georgia Chapters," at $2.15, also the "Index" to Volume I at 35 cents plus 10 cents postage. Please send in orders for Volume II, III, IV at $1 each with 15 cents for postage. Send check and orders to Mrs. W. F. Dykes, 570 Ridgeway road, N. E., Atlanta, Ga.

Georgia Garden Club Renders Service Toward Progress

By MRS. ED DORSEY JR., Publicity Chairman for Garden Club of Georgia.

That the Garden Club of Georgia is rendering a distinct and significant service in the progress of the state is evidenced by the co-operation of state officials. People in every section are following the progressive leadership of its efficient president, Mrs. Thomas Hubbard McHatten, of Athens. During her two-year administration the federation has gained in power, more clubs have come into the organization, greater activities have been carried on and the federation has lent aid and co-operation to many organizations. Mrs. McHatten has been extremely active in the matter of conservation and roadside beautification, has supported all worth-while civic movements and has endeavored in every way possible to encourage the love of beauty in Georgia.

Active interest has been aroused among Georgians in the conservation of Georgia's natural resources. This is a worthy undertaking and has been given the support of the thinking people of the state and is imperatively necessary, if Georgia is to preserve her abundant natural advantages for future generations. The economic value of natural resources is inestimable, the esthetic value of forests, streams and plant life is above price and Georgia has become conservation conscious. Such a constructive stand taken by the Garden Club of Georgia will lend much to the preservation of this great heritage. This program of activities carried on by the club will not only maintain but enhance the pleasure and revenue which may be derived from these boundless resources.

When the Garden Club meets for its annual convention in Albany this week, Mrs. McHatten, the president, will preside and a review of the year's work will be given through club reports and reports from state chairmen. An interesting program has been planned. Albany is celebrating her centennial and every effort is being made to further the pleasure of visitors.

In every foot there are three important arches:

The child must develop his own arch—in childhood the arch structures are not strong but plastic. The three arches have three weight-bearing points—1: the heel—2: the joint of the great toe—3: the joint of the little toe. Tested English Complexions know only this Beauty Care

ONLY the English, perhaps, take beauty into account in the very offices of government. They pause at tea-time to welcome some of the world's loveliest complexions. The grey old terraces of Parliament become the perfect setting for faces radiant and young.

Would you make your own the simple and sensible beauty regime that almost always guards these English complexions? It comes from the House of Yardley, and it takes only a few moments a day.

First, a daily face bath with Yardley's gentle English Lavender Soap must never be neglected. It's the best way to keep your skin clear, fresh and glowing.

Then a liberal application of Yardley's snowy English Complexion Cream . . . you'll find it entirely different from any other. (You may also use Yardley's Night Cream, as many Englishwomen do, if your skin is overly dry. And Yardley's Foundation, a special powder base.)

Then, the finishing mist of Yardley's English Lavender Powder - so fresh and lastingly vital that you'll marvel at its beauty power.

All these good things are within your reach. Fine stores everywhere carry them, together with Yardley bath products and perfumes. Send for the new booklet AC-2, "Beauty Secrets from Bond Street." THE YARDLEY MIRROR-FACT - a bright idea - brand new! - in the beauty world. Mirror on the outside where the light is and the powder isn't. (No peering and polishing before you can see yourself!) And it slides back, revealing hinged powder and rouge compartments that make a midget dressing table. You'll find the whole slender gold-framed trinket the essence of smart simplicity. In a little watch pocket to keep it gleaming and lovely, with Yardley's exquisite cake or loose powder and fresh, subtle rouges. Boxed as a gift, for yourself and others - $3.50.

TARZAN'S
PERIL

WITH ALL THE SPEED AND POWER AT HIS COMMAND, TARZAN FOUGHT THROUGH THE RAGING STORM TO AID HIS FRIENDS.

HE WAS STILL FAR AWAY, HOWEVER, WHEN THE TOWERING WALL OF WATER ROARED DOWN THE RAVINE TOWARD DICK AND GLORIA.

WITH TERRIFIED SHRIEKS, SOME OF THEIR APE BODY-GUARDS SCURRIED UP THE STEEP SIDES OF THE CANYON.

BUT KON-GAH, WHO OWED HIS LIFE TO THE JUNGLE LORD, CRIED OUT, "SAVE MAN-THINGS, OR TARZAN, OUR KING, BE ANGRY".

HE SWEEPED GLORIA UP IN HIS ARMS WHILE ANOTHER BIG BULL SEIZED DICK AND FLUNG HIM ACROSS A MASSIVE SHOULDER.

THUS BURDENED, THE TWO APES BEGAN THEIR PERILOUS ASCENT OF THE CRAGGY CANYON WALLS.

"COURAGE!" DICK CALLED TO GLORIA. "THERE IS STILL HOPE." BUT IN HIS HEART HE FELT THEY WERE DOOMED.

NOW THE APES CLUTCHED A TREE THAT JUTTED OUT FROM THE ROCKS. LOOSENED BY THE RAIN, IT GAVE WAY!

ROOTS RIPPED FROM THE SHALLOW SOIL AND THE FOUR UNFORTUNATES PLUNGED BACKWARD INTO THE ABYSS.

TARZAN ARRIVED AT THE BRINK OF THE RAVINE JUST-AS THEY STRUCK THE CHURNING WATERS BELOW.

TO AID THEM SEEMED IMPOSSIBLE. HOW COULD ANY CREATURE LIVE IN THAT ANGRY FLOOD?

YET TARZAN PLUNGED IN TO SAVE THEM.... OR DIE IN THE EFFORT!

NEXT WEEK: TARZAN'S CALAMITY

Merle Oberon as Lola Montez—from a painting by Artemis, famous woman Greek artist. Miss Oberon had the portrait made to use in her efforts to persuade Producer Samuel Goldwyn to let her appear on the screen as the dancer who was a favorite of royalty nearly a century ago.

THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER

Personal, but Not Confidential

REGINALD DENNY
and Basil Rathbone

as Benvolio and Tybalt in "Romeo and Juliet" are two of the most amusing men in the colony. Together, around the sets, they clown continually and twice lately have entertained guests for me—guests who will return to their homes singing their praises and adding to their fan mail.

At the moment Denny feels the need of discovering a heavyweight. In fact, he is almost sure he has unearthed one in the person of an extra, who has shoulders like Dempsey's and a punch like Braddock's. Sure of championship possibilities, Denny wishes to take on the duties of manager, along with all his other responsibilities.

Nor is this the first time he has been on the lookout for talent. Some time ago he decided to resurrect his old "Leather Pusher" series, which he tried to buy from Universal. While the deal was pending, he made a great find. This time he chose for the hero of his pictures a stalwart prizefighter from San Francisco. All enthusiasm, Denny asked him how he would like to become a picture star.

The big fellow hemmed and hawed and finally confessed that he thought it looked too much like a "sisy" to go into "fillums." So Denny gave him up. Just as well. Universal decided to revive "The Leather Pushers" and Reginald couldn't have bought them anyway.

Rathbone was looking positively regal, swathed in a black velvet costume, with draped cloak. About his neck was a priceless Florentine collar, set with huge cabochon emeralds. He expresses himself as delighted with his role and reminisced concerning his long association as an actor with the Benson Shakespearian Repertoire Players. Benson, who headed the company, was in large measure responsible for the flourishing condition of the Stratford-on-Avon movement, which has gained such hold on the imagination of Britons as well as visitors from all over the world.

Otto Kruger, appearing in Universal's "Dracula's Daughter," finds it easy to entertain guests who come on the set to visit him. He sits down at the piano and plays Mendelssohn's Pastorale, or some other piece of classical music, which allows him to skip answers to pleasing and complimentary remarks.

He has the piano so that he may practice, as he is trying to get in his several half-hours a day. He is a concert pianist and pipe organist.

WHEN the Countess de Frasso gave a red and white party in honor of Elsa Maxwell, her guests managed to achieve some startling effects.

James Cagney appeared wearing a suit of dead white with a flaming red necktie.

John Barrymore came in red trousers, white sash, short white mess jacket and a red necktie. He wore an antique ruby ring.

Miss Elaine Barry appeared in a white dress, with a red carnation, Carmen tyle, over one ear. She is not a beauty, but her appearance is striking. Her eyes are black, her skin olive and her carriage graceful.

Marlene Dietrich wore a dull crimson dress, with white flowers over the shoulder. A white lace mantilla and white Spanish comb provided interesting touches, while her face was dead white, with a mouth painted in bright red, like a crimson gash.

Dolores Del Rio wore a flowing white gown, with red trimmings.

Lili Damita's gown was of Greek design, her toe-nails done in red to match her fingernails. She wore a white sari studded with crimson spangles.

The most comfortable sofa in the house concealed a recording apparatus which reported the conversation of the guests. Later, Countess de Frasso read the records softly, while the guests looked embarrassed. The sofa accommodated four persons and the sound device took down the double remarks.

Cora Sue Collins gave a theater party the other afternoon. She entertained several of her friends at a performance of the Cornish Puppeteers at the Ebell Club Theater.

Among her guests was little Carolyn Wiles, daughter of Otis Wiles, of the M-G-M publicity department. When Carolyn returned home, her father asked her if she would tell her schoolmates about the party.

"No," she declared, "I certainly won't. When Freddie Bartholomew and I went to the Fourth of July celebration and later to the rodeo, I told them about it and they said I was you-know-what, Daddy. So now I tell them nothing."

Among Miss Collins' guests were the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joe E. Brown, the Goetz children, nieces of Louis B. Mayer, Juanita Quigley and others. Shirley Temple had a cold and couldn't come.

SNAKES may have a fatal fascination for snake charmers, but they certainly have none for me. Dear, dear, I went over to see W. C. Fields on his circus set for "Poppy" at Paramount the other day, only to run into the snake charmer charming the snakes for a group of open-mouthed onlookers.

There she was all done up in an 1880 costume/trying to get Miss Boa Constrictor to open her mouth and show off for the ladies and gentlemen. Miss Boa was coiled around in a neat box, lapping up admiration, apparently, now and then giving vent to a lazy yawn and looking coy.

It was all very posh, no doubt, but my sole idea was to get away from there and over to the safety zone where Mr. Fields was working out the dialog for his next sequence. When spoken to about Miss Boa, he squirmed and announced that the beastie was just a little playmate, who meant no harm to anyone—least of all to visiting reporters, who kept her, along with other actors, before the public.

"No harm to man or beast" is apparently the Fields motto. But as for Miss Boa—you may have her—or you, or you—

Frank MacGrath is probably the only stand-in in Hollywood who has a stand-in.

He is the stand-in for Warner Baxter, now deep in the throes of "Zero Hour." Unfortunately, "Zero Hour" progressed as the Santa Anita Race Track reached its zenith during one of the most successful and exciting seasons in race history.

MacGrath is a racing addict, hence his need for a stand-in to stand in as a stand-in for him, while he went to the races. Baxter wished for a stand-in to take his place as the star, but nobody offered to suggest a substitute.

MR. AND MRS. LESLIE

HOWARD serve tea every Sunday afternoon. They use the same George IV tea service as when at home. It is the one piece of household furniture they carry with them from their house in Dorking, England. Two butlers serve tea in ceremonious fashion because Mrs. Howard believes that a man should have every comfort in his house, regardless of expense.

The Howard menage is better staffed than nine out of 10 houses in Beverly Hills, Bel Air and Brentwood.

Janet Beecher never attends previews of pictures in which she appears. As a matter of fact, it isn't necessary. Her family goes en masse and tells her the verdict. Her mother, her son, her sister, Mrs. Howard Tyng, and her brother-in-law, her cook, her chauffeur, her maid and the gardener relay their impressions next morning.

JOAN CRAWFORD has learned what happens when someone else impersonates her on the telephone. Incidentally, she has discovered that none of her friends believe her when she says: "This is Joan Crawford speaking."

Intent on giving a reception for Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, Miss Crawford, who seldom entertains, decided to give a slightly personal touch by calling up her friends instead of telegraphing or sending them engraved invitations.

She declares that she will never be so foolish again. One and another and another, not believing her, answered her in a very rude manner when she told them her name. Many of them were not at home until she had made six or seven attempts. One or two replied: "Oh, yes, you're Joan Crawford. Well, I'm Greta Garbo," or in the case of the men, "Fine, you're Miss Crawford and I'm Wallace Beery," or "So, isn't that just dandy, Miss Crawford. You've made a mistake; I'm Edward VIII."

However, in most cases she managed to convince them finally of her real identity and they burst out laughing and accepted her gracious invitation. One exception was Sylvia Sidney, who said she liked to get her sleep Sunday mornings and that anyway she didn't know Miss Crawford, so she was positive she wouldn't call her. This was true, but Joan has always been a great admirer of Miss Sidney and knowing her love for music, decided to ask her to meet Stokowski.

With a phone bill of $185 and a bruised spirit, Miss Crawford nevertheless gave one of the most delightful and interesting parties of the season at the French Room in the Ambassador Hotel. Her charming husband, Franchot Tone, proved himself a gracious and agreeable host. Musical Los Angeles and musical Hollywood welcomed the composer and his wife.

The Dionne babies are creating a sensation in Hollywood. They have taken all the flint hearts and changed them into maudlin sentimentalists. Even hard-boiled columnists are dripping with emotional adjectives. At that, they are pretty cute babies, as you will see in "The Country Doctor."

ALAN MOWBRAY gave a luncheon the other day at the Vendome, his honor guests being Countess de Marsey and her daughter, Jacqueline, who are in Hollywood on their annual visit from their villa near Paris and their chateau in Normandy.

Mowbray's favorite luncheon dish is sole Marguery and a delicious Bordeaux wine, vintage of 1910. During the luncheon the host was reminded twice of his War days. Once, when he discovered that the chateau of the Countess de Marsey is in almost exactly the same location as the one in which he received his Croix de Guerre. The other occurred when he learned that Michael, a Belgian, the Vendome maitre de hotel, was in his regiment.

Charles Boyer, wearing a blue serge jerkin, minus tie, told entertainingly of his friendship with the King of Egypt and persuaded Mowbray to speak French, from which he shies until he has had a glass of wine, at least.

Count de Rougemont, Madeline Carroll, Joan Bennett and several others came along and the table in the Vendome might have been one on the boulevards of Paris.

Polo has taken on an added attraction at the Riviera Club. Between chukkers, they introduce whippets, with the names of various stars. Players place their bets and excitement reaches fever pitch. The stands are full of famous players and in the field one sees Darryl Zanuck, Big Boy Williams, Hal Roach, Walt Disney, Robert Montgomery and others.

Afterward everybody goes over to Snowy Baker's bungalow for a cup of tea.

My Next Door Neighbors by Merle Oberon

THAT old saying to the effect that people are just alike the world over is bro-midic and quite untrue. They are not at all alike. They are as different as culture, customs, costumes, background, environment, political life, social life and nature's vagaries can make them.

Emotionally, they react somewhat alike, the human heart being what it is. But civilization (so-called) would present a much more stupid picture than it does if we were all the same.

I am offering this as a "lead" because I am told all American editors insist on "leads." They believe it starts one off properly and its purpose is to attract the attention of readers, causing them to neglect their bacon and eggs or breakfast coffee, while going on to the next paragraph and the next and the next.

So, I may as well be considered as having taken off. Now all I have to do is to let you in on my neighborhood, which I assure you is entirely different from any other neighborhood in the world. Because the people in it are all quite different from other people—and much more charming than most.

Mind you, I have had near neighbors in Tasmania, Calcutta, London and Paris, so I know what to expect of neighbors in various languages and can speak with some authority.

First, you must imagine our locale. This is necessary to the rest of the script. We live on that curve of beach known as Santa Monica. I am sure it is one of the most captivating places on earth.

Not only are my neighbors charming; they are intensely interesting to millions of people. They are famous personalities, known from one end of the globe to the other, yet living quietly, simply and finding amusement in small things. In my wildest dreams I never imagined myself living near these celebrities, of whom I used to read in magazines. Watching them on the screen, how could I hope to know them in real life?

I live next door to Juliet, ordinarily known as Norma Shearer, or, in private life Mrs. Irving Thalberg.

What nice neighbors, the Thalbergs. They have no objection, at all, it, in the early morning, before I hurry to the studio, I hop into a bathing suit and leap across the fence, landing in the pleasantly warmed pool for a swim in the brisk morning air. Norma usually waves from a window and joins me.

Of course, being in motion pictures, we are all rabid picture-goers. But none of us has to drive back 20 miles into Hollywood to see first runs.

Miss Oberon here describes, among other things, the time when a youthful neighbor honored her with a present of a very dead fish.

Irving Thalberg has a splendid projection room in the drawing room of his home. He and Norma invite the neighbors in to see the latest films and pre-releases. We sit around in comfortable arm chairs, smoking, perhaps, clad in our beach clothes if it is in the summer. Nice neighbors, say I!

David Niven is another neighbor. A former British Army lieutenant, David is one of the most amusing men in Hollywood. He numbers among his intimates some of the most interesting men in the world and as they pass through Hollywood he makes sure all of us meet them. He couldn't escape us if he tried; we would all appear for some reason—to borrow a cup of sugar, an egg or a tennis racquet.

In summer, David's house is a sort of base for aquatic operations. To his beach place come Ronald Colman, Herbert Marshall, Nigel Bruce and dozens of others equally fascinating and amusing.

SOMETIMES we have the whole crowd for dinner. All of us neighbors get together and serve a late meal outdoors. The latest thing is a portable barbecue pit, easily set in the sand.

Then, after everyone has achieved a tremendous appetite from swimming and running on the beach, David and Bart Marshall and I don big white aprons and white chef's caps, broil steaks and chops in the open, serving them cafeteria style. We first dip the steaks or chops in a sauce of olive oil, ground pepper, with perhaps a soupçon of garlic and then throw them on the grill over the live coals. I defy a king to offer a better dinner.

Miriam Hopkins, my teammate in "These Three," also one of Mr. Goldwyn's stars, lives only a few doors down the line. She has the former Samuel Goldwyn beach home. Miriam also has a grand projection room which is great for the neighbors. If we have already seen the picture being shown by Norma and Irving, all we have to do is trudge across the sands to Miriam's house and inquire as to the program on the screen there. "They'll have to start staging prologs by Sid Grauman in the regular theaters to get us," David Niven says.

NATURALLY, Douglas Fairbanks has a fine gymnasium outfit in his front yard. There are bars on which to swing, rowing machines and all the paraphernalia. These exercising machines are marvelous for the figure. I work out on them regularly, since Douglas is such a nice neighbor.

In order to stand in well with one's neighbors, it is necessary to be a good neighbor. One trick is to keep the ice-box full of things children like. Norma Shearer has a splendid son of 4, Irving Thalberg, Jr., who is a pal of mine. Irving, Jr., and I patrol the beach together, but he admits when his infant sister, Katarina Thalberg, grows up, he'll throw me over for her company. "Ah," I sigh, "men are always like that."

It isn't safe to give young Irving a present. I went fishing one time and gave him a fish I had caught. He immediately insisted on going fishing himself. He had no luck, but the fishmarkets were open and he bought the biggest sole he could find. This he brought to me, steeped in his mother's best perfume and garnished with a spray of orchids.

Irving insisted that his mother accompany him to my house for the presentation ceremonies. Her face was a study in conflicting emotions as she held her nose and motioned to me, behind his back.

LATER we had a burial service for the sole, this being my only inspiration for disposing of it. Irving fell in with the plan at once, but that night the cook discovered he had carried the thing pretty far. He had buried a large roast of beef intended for dinner, a large chocolate cake and various other delicacies.

My neighbors, all engaged in my own field of endeavor, are generous in their efforts to help me. It is no mean privilege to ask for suggestions from Norma Shearer or Irving Thalberg or Douglas Fairbanks or Miriam Hopkins.

Generally, I prefer staying at home to going away for a vacation. Why not? I have the blue Pacific in my front yard; the towering Palisades in my back yard; all these charming neighbors to the right and left of me.

It is difficult for me to realize that I am also a moving picture actress. All I can remember is that I am a little British girl who has suddenly found herself a friend of the great people of whom I used to dream and to whom I am now a next door neighbor.

Why look elsewhere for Paradise?

Little Irving Thalberg, Jr., can be depended upon to provide most of the excitement in the neighborhood.

BRIDGE ACCORDING TO CULBERTSON

By ELY CULBERTSON.

OPENING BID IS EASIER THAN A RAISE.

ALMOST all contract players—expert, average, or dub—find it easier to make opening bids and rebids than to raise or take out a partner. With long suits and honor tricks staring them comfortably in the face, it is a comparatively simple matter to express these holdings in bidding terminology. There is very little strain on the imagination; good eyesight and reasonable articulateness are the prime considerations.

It is in the intelligent bidding of the responding hand that imagination becomes the all-important factor. With only a few face cards or distribution alone to dovetail with partner's expressed holding, the measuring devices, such as point counts, supplied by various authorities can be only none too dependable crutches, to be abandoned as soon as possible.

This is particularly true in those cases where the partner is not the opening bidder, but has overcalled or made a takeout double of an opponent's bid. The fate of the hand may now rest squarely on the responder.

Let us suppose that you are sitting North and hold ♠ K 10 8 ♥ K 9 8 ♦ Q 10 6 3 ♣ 7 5 2. Neither side vulnerable, East has opened the bidding with one heart and your partner has overcalled with one spade. West passes, and it is up to you. Should you bid or pass? Here is the proper way to reason:

Your partner had at his command a great variety of bids, each denoting different strength. He could have made a jump bid, two spades, urging but not forcing a bid from you. He could have passed. Actually he bid one spade. Now fit his bid into its proper position among the possibilities and you will have solved your problem. He must have a fair hand, but not a really good one, you will discover, and hence your own holding is not good enough to justify the game-try which a raise by you would indicate. You would, in fact, have to strengthen your hand by several playing tricks to justify a raise, thus:

Obviously this hand is two to three tricks stronger in playability. Yet you should bid only two spades on it. If partner had a strong overcall, almost justifying one of the stronger bids, he could signify it by going on.

Now let us consider the question of taking out partner's overcall. The situation is the same as before—one heart by East, one spade by partner.

You hold ♠ 6 2 ♥ 8 5 3 ♦ A K J 5 3 ♣ 7 5 3. Should you bid or pass?

Well, look at it this way: If your partner had opened the bidding with one spade you would respond two diamonds in fear and trembling. Doesn't that answer the question? Why should you make the same bid now, when there is no real obligation on you to make any response?

Self-questionnaires of this type are invaluable in determining whether to bid or pass.

The purpose of all bidding is to convey information to partner and to receive it in return. Herein lies the importance of conventionalizing the meaning of certain bids—bids over takeout doubles, bids in response to takeout doubles, bids and passes when partner has doubled and right hand opponent has redoubled.

Sometimes, however, we are prevented from conveying important information to partner during the auction because, anxious though we may

Bridge Problem

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1♥	Pass	2♦
Pass	3♦	Pass	4♦
Pass	4 N. T.	Pass	6♦
Pass	Pass	Pass

This hand was played in the recent world bridge Olympic. How does East make his slam contract? (See solution below.)

SOLUTION: South opens spade queen. East wins and lays down diamond king as precautionary measure in case South has all four diamonds. Discovering this to be true, East leads a heart to the jack, which North wins. North returns a spade, and after taking the ace East leads a diamond. South plays the ten and West takes the queen. East then ruffs a heart and takes another diamond finesse. He then ruffs a heart with his last trump. Dummy is put in with the club ace to cash the ace of diamonds, on which East throws his losing spade. East's clubs then win the last trick.

be to tell him our story, we lack the other requirements to speak our piece. Many tragedies have occurred through the anxiety of players who, believing they have valuable information to convey, accomplish their worthy purpose only at the expense of misinforming partner regarding their actual strength.

Reluctantly though you do so, pass you must—and hope that the vital information may somehow be conveyed in the play. Here, for instance, is an example:

NORTH

♠ K Q 6
♥ 8 6 5
♦ K 10 8 7 3

WEST

♥ K Q J 7
♦ Q 5

SOUTH

♠ A J 7 5 4
♥ A 3 3
♦ 6 4 3

The bidding (neither side vulnerable):

West	North	East	South
1♣	1♦	Pass	1♠
2♣	Pass	2 N. T.	Pass
3 N. T.	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's first overcall was decidedly shaded; hence, though he yearned to announce his good spade support, he could not do so without conveying the impression of far greater strength than he had. East had a close free raise of clubs at his first opportunity; when West rebid he

The Planets—Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON

Bernice Denton Pierson, eminent astrologer, has prepared this forecast in brief for a handy reference convenient to Constitution readers. This guide will aid you, for it indicates the most auspicious time to begin any new endeavor, whether it be business, social or domestic.

MARCH 29—SUNDAY: A combination of influences predominating before 3:25 p. m. may cause you to look on the darker side of things, or bring you interferences. A feeling of despondency does not aid you in social contacts or in domestic matters. Therefore, it will be better to shun anything that looks risky, defer important decisions, and use discretion in dealings with the opposite sex. From 3:25 p. m. until 9:04 p. m. your attitude is more cheerful, and this period favors religious matters, literary efforts, writings and travel. After 9:04 p. m. you will be inclined to look through "rose colored glasses," and will see affairs as you wish them to be, rather than as they are; therefore, guard against deception in all things.

MARCH 30—MONDAY: Before 10:51 a. m. may be well used for finishing up tasks that were hard to bring to a conclusion, or that were laborious in their nature, but the entire day is not auspicious for new things. Desires to accept new risks, if indulged in, are apt to encounter complications. You will have a tendency toward hastiness or forcefulness, which should be curbed.

MARCH 31—TUESDAY: Before 8:31 a. m. is the better part of the day, when you will deal with more diplomacy where others are concerned. Therefore, try to attend at this to matters requiring immediate attention. After 8:31 a. m. and continuing throughout the day and evening, restlessness and uneasiness and too much stubborn pride will be easily felt, so you may want to push on with what you are doing. Do not enter into sudden action, and avoid disagreements.

APRIL 1—WEDNESDAY: The entire day and until 11:13 p. m. is very disruptive. New beginnings today do not have the necessary thought behind them. While your mind will be active enough, you do not come to correct decisions. Indecision marks the entire day. Be extra cautious in real estate transactions, travel, artistic affairs, machinery and tools.

APRIL 2—THURSDAY: The morning hours are not as favorable as afternoon; however, the entire day is favorable for general activities. Amusements, adornment, artistic ideas, hardware and mechanical works are most favored.

APRIL 3—FRIDAY: Before 8:13 a. m. you will receive welcome through friends or through dealings with them. Amusement interests, agreements, cultural pursuits should make good progress at this time. After 8:13 a. m. and continuing throughout the evening, you are likely to change your mind too often and be uncertain as to which course to pursue. Use moderation in property interests, liquids, travel, contracts, people in authority and in mechanical interests.

APRIL 4—SATURDAY: Before 7:10 a. m. your desires are likely to be larger than you can afford and new beginnings are apt to run into wastefulness and extravagance. If shopping today, be sure you have not purchased more than you can decided the time had come for action. Since East had failed to bid no-trump over one diamond, South assumed that his stoppers were in spades and therefore opened the diamond six.

Dummy played the queen, and North here found the opportunity to convey by his play the information he could not give in the bidding. It took but a moment to see that declarer had five club tricks and three diamonds—and needed only one additional trick for his contract. Hence South must hold the aces of both spades and hearts or the contract could not be defeated. If North played the king of diamonds South might win the first heart trick and continued a diamond, hoping that North, if he did not have the jack and 10 of diamonds, would hold at least the jack, together with the queen and 10 of spades. The important thing was to tell South that the diamond suit was hopeless and thus insure a spade shift. North therefore played the deuce of diamonds.

Hoping for a duck of one round of hearts if he concealed the solidity of the clubs, declarer played the heart king immediately, but South took the ace and could not fail to make the shift to spades which his partner's low diamond begged for.

TODAY'S QUESTIONS.

Question: What is the correct call, first hand, not vulnerable, on the following hand:

♠ A K ♥ A K ♦ K Q 7 5 3 ♣ K 5 3 2

Answer: The hand contains 5 1-2 honor tricks but has six losers; therefore you should bid only one diamond.

Question: What is the proper bid on this hand, both sides vulnerable, North-South part score of 60? North (dealer) holds:

♠ A Q J ♥ A K J ♦ K Q J ♣ A K 8 4

Answer: Bid three no-trump.

"Small Town Girl," the Ben Ames Williams novel, is being made into a motion picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Reviews of New Films

By The Boulevardier

NOW that Hollywood has discovered biography, there's no end to the variety of personages who—lured from their tombs by a chance to get into pictures—will, within the next few months, live their lives again (more or less accurately) upon the screen.

"Mary of Scotland" is learning how properly to bind a snood around her bonnie bright hair at R-K-O. where mutterings of a film about the famous Dr. Samuel Johnson are also heard. Warner Brothers are following up their incursion into the French Academy of Medicine with "Pasteur" by taking over the beginnings of the English army nursing services with Florence Nightingale in "The Angel of Mercy."

Notwithstanding the attention given to foreign celebrities, including the Dionne quintuplets, it looks as though a cycle of American heroes and heroines were in order. The big question seems to be whether America has produced enough heroes and heroines to go around. From Colonial times right up to the presentday, not a notable can raise his head without getting pounced upon by the scenario department.

Diamond Jim Brady, Annie Oakley and Dr. Samuel A. Mudd were but trail-blazers for those to follow. The Swiss-American, John Sutter, is at this moment in process of discovering "Sutter's Gold" at Universal. One studio alone (Paramount) is about to immortalize on celluloid no less than three of the American renowned: "Buffalo Bill, Sam Houston and Houdini. And at M-G-M. "The Great Ziegfeld" fills the sound stages with bizarre costumes and beautiful melodies.

Though there were previews in the past few days which owed nothing to biography, the two chief pictures leaned heavily on American biographical-historical backgrounds. "A Message to Garcia" brings back the Spanish-American War; "The Robin Hood of El Dorado" brings back the aftermath of those earlier hostilities when California ceased to belong to Mexico.

"Petticoat Fever."

Presenting Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy in delightful filmization of the Mark Reed comedy hit. Recommended. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Amid snow drifts and ice barriers, romance blooms at 50 below! Fur clad and parka covered, Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy fall in love—for the first time since "When Ladies Meet."

Dascom Dinsmore (Robert Montgomery), wireless operator in charge of an ice-bound station, 90 miles from the nearest settlement, is the loneliest man in Labrador. He hasn't seen a white woman for a year. So when Irene Campion (Myrna Loy) and her blustery fiancé, Sir James Felton (Reginald Owen), find his lonely tower after their plane has crashed, he is more than delighted. So delighted, in fact, that he holds the two virtual prisoners, sending phony messages instead of the ones they give him, and barring them from using his dog team. Meanwhile he goes about the task of holding Felton (Owen) off with one hand, and making love to Irene (Myrna) with the other. It soon becomes a case of rivalry between the two men, with Dinsmore (Montgomery) rapidly advancing.

However, the prisoners execute a plan for freedom. Holding Dinsmore off with a gun, Felton runs for the shed, calling after Irene to follow. It is six hours later that the doughty Englishman finds he has been duped and that an Eskimo servant girl, not Irene, is under the hooded fur parka. And while he has been freezing in the shed, which under the management of Dinsmore's man-servant, has been executing circles in ice, Dinsmore himself has completely won Irene, who agrees to marry him.

"You must be cold," murmurs Robert Montgomery to Myrna Loy, in his best you-must-be-cold manner, while Reginald Owen looks his distrust in this scene from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Petticoat Fever."

Trouble comes next day when

Clara Wilson, one-time Dinsmore's fiancée, who stood him up, arrives, ready to marry him. The jig is up. Irene goes off in a huff with Felton, to the boat that brought Clara. Dinsmore, facing a preacher called in from the settlement, dolefully picks up his morning mail. A letter advises him that he has just come into a fortune with the death of an uncle. He now understands Clara's motive. With a whoop, he rushes into his sled, in true Robert Montgomery fashion, arrives at the ship in time to break up a wedding ceremony and changes places with the ill-starred Felton.

The situations, both ludicrous and dramatic, in this delightful comedy, promise particular interest and enjoyment to all who saw that memorable picture "When Ladies Meet."

Recent-pictures which have been reviewed and recommended in Screen & Radio Weekly are as follows: "Ah, Wilderness" (M-G-M.); "The Story of Louis Pasteur" (Warner Brothers); "Professional Soldier" (Twentieth Century-Fox); "Ceiling Zero" (Warner Brothers); "The Petrified Forest" (Warner Brothers); "Rose Marie" (M-G-M.); "Anything Goes" (Paramount); "The Lady Consents" (R-K-O-Radio); "Milky Way" (Paramount); "Desire" (Paramount); "Love on a Bet" (R-K-O-Radio); "Next Time We Love" (Universal); "Little Lord Fauntleroy" (M-G-M.); "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" (Paramount); "Modern Times" (United Artists); "These Three" (United Artists); "The Country Doctor" (Twentieth Century-Fox).

ON THE LOTS With Candid Reporter

VOICE STEPS OUT.

In her forthcoming picture, "The King Steps Out," Grace Moore sets a new top for screen vocalists by climbing to two notes above high C. This comes about not because Miss Moore has widened the range of her voice but because the screen, at least at Columbia studios, has extended the range and refined the character of its sound recording.

A new soundproof recording room mounted on springs (literally a room within a room), the non-directional microphone and other technical advances not only enable the star to reach a new peak but also bring about something of a revolution in recording practice.

Usual procedure in the studios is to have the singer make a sound track, match the action to the music when it is played back on the set. This often has unconvincing results. For her latest picture, Miss Moore sang and acted at the same time. In studio parlance, she "recorded direct."

This involved seven days of singing instead of two or three, inasmuch as the star had to sing a song over and over as changes were made from close-ups to medium shots, from medium shots to long shots.

SKYROCKET.

The current rage at Warner-First National is Errol Flynn, the Irish lad on whom the studio staked a pot of gold when it thrust him into the leading role of "Captain Blood" virtually without experience as an actor. The film is paying out so handsomely and Flynn is getting so much fan mail that he has become the fair-haired boy of the moment around the lot.

Besides "The Charge of the Light Brigade," which will be one of the studio's most ambitious projects of the year, Flynn will do "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and a remake of "The Sea Hawk." While these are all roles of action and adventure, the Warners have hopes of Flynn as a drawing room actor as well, and so they have put him down for the male leads in "Another Dawn," with Kay Francis, and "Caesar's Wife," with Olivia de Havilland.

LIGHT MAGIC.

In a barber shop scene in "Big Brown Eyes," Joan Bennett, manicurist, talks with Cary Grant, detective. As the camera grinds, a colored lamp plays on Miss Bennett's face, tints it magenta. Thus her eyes, china blue, photograph brown. As Miss Bennett and Grant read their lines, barbers work up lather. But you wouldn't want to shave with it for it is made of whipped cream. Ordinary soap, it seems, dries too fast.

PUZZLE.

From a letter received by the fan mail department at R-K-O-Radio, sent by a Notre Dame College student to Ginger Rogers:

"I would have sent you an invitation to the Notre Dame-U. S. C. football game next fall (in which I shall play—I hope) but I have already sealed the letter."

"The Walking Dead."

Boris Karloff is less a monster than usual but the picture is eerie enough to please those who like to have their spines chilled. Acceptable. Warner Brothers.

Interesting psychology, the horror picture. Some people go for a thrill, some for a laugh, and there have been those who went to scoff and remained to pray—for a bottle of smelling salts. Boris Karloff himself, the monster man of Hollywood, has a cultivated and gentle voice, raises geraniums and violets in his front yard, and says horror pictures answer a human yearn for bogey stories. His real name, by the bye, is William Henry Pratt, and he likes being a monster because the monster always dies "and fans write in such nice letters being sorry for you, especially children."

In "The Walking Dead," though, Karloff as John Ellman isn't actually a monster. A musician unjustly charged with a crime, Ellman goes to the electric chair, from which Dr. Saunders (Edmund Gwenn) quickly snatches him and by a mechanism fascinating to watch—a kind of Lindbergh artificial heart—restores him to life again. At least, Ellman lives so far as his reflexes are concerned, but, while he walks around, he isn't the same, and no wonder.

For one thing, he can't recall many of the events preceding his demise. On the other hand, he has an uncanny knowledge as to the conspiracy that caused his execution, and this information is something he lacked before. Besides, his brief dallying with death has given him the ability to spot the guilty, no matter how innocent they look. Add to this the fact that certain music, heard on his way to the chair, spurs him to retaliate upon his enemies, and you have a nicely eerie kettle of fish.

Naturally, the crooked attorney Nolan (Ricardo Cortez) and the other sinful members of the gang that framed poor Ellman are no little disturbed when their victim returns to look straight into their brains, read their black thoughts, and drive 'em to violent fates. There shines a glimmer of romance between Nancy (the beautiful Marguerite Churchill) and Jimmy (Warren Hull) to brighten the darkness that hangs over practically everyone else, and it is still shining when Ellman again meets death—this time by a bullet—and brings the picture to an end.

The photography, full of strange shadows, adds much to the general effectiveness of ghostly backgrounds. Lacking in some of the frightfulness of former Karloff films, "The Walking Dead," nevertheless, will prove acceptable to those who cherish their shudders.

Diet and Beauty by Barbara Stanwyck

HIGH HO, EVERYBODY! Who ever would think that I, Barbara Stanwyck, beauty editor for one article. Since I may never get another chance, it's in my mind to speak a piece about Hollywood. You've been treated to a lot of nonsense about this town and its population. Neither is half as fantastic as you've heard tell.

If you ever lived next door to an actor, you'd find him surprisingly like yourself. Acting is his job of work just as yours may be clerking in the corner drugstore. In his home he has the same sort of problems that you have. He is interested in the same things. He has to worry about his children; his relatives, both by nature and by law; his health and his taxes. He is just as pressed for time and, oftener than you'd think, he is pressed for money, too, standards and demands being what they are.

I'll bet you're saying, All right, all right. But what's that got to do with the beauty advice she's supposed to be passing out?" It's like this. If I tell you what I do about my personal appearance I want to do it as one neighbor to another, exchanging "helpful hints" over the back fence, and not as a creature wrapped in glamour and set apart from ordinary folks.

First let's dig into this diet business. Of all the silly publicity that has been broadcast from Hollywood, the most harmful is about diets. I am in a position to talk because much has been written about my celery diet and about how every time I want to lose a few pounds I munch celery to the exclusion of everything else and shed weight like a snowball melting in the sun.

HERE is the real celery story from one who certainly should know. The only reason I am telling is out of honest-to-goodness sisterly kindness. You must not play around with Barbara Stanwyck's famous celery reducing diet. I did it once. I shall never do it again.

After one lazy summer at the beach I found myself too heavy to photograph as well as R-K-O has a right to expect. And never forget, while making your figure calculations, that we who earn our living by being photographed have to be thinner than you should be.

I was beginning a picture and I wanted to reduce quickly. It happens that by nature I am one of those peculiar humans who would rather cut out than down, if you follow me. No doubt that is why I figured out the celery stunt instead of being reasonable. I knew celery is healthful in itself. Hospitals specialize in celery broth, creamed celery and so forth. It contains valuable mineral salt. It is bulky and the large percentage of water makes it filling. When a person is starving hungry and is fool enough to deny herself real nourishment, anything filling is merciful.

So I decided to live on raw celery for a while and see what happened. I didn't ask anybody with scientific knowledge. I just decided. Except for my eye-opener of morning coffee I had nothing but celery for 10 days. I chewed hundreds of stalks until the very sight of celery made me wince. And in 10 days I went from 127 to 112 pounds. Very pretty! Only at the end of the time I had to go meekly to a doctor and begin a long campaign to build up my dangerously low strength. Moral: NEVER attempt any strenuous diet without first consulting your physician.

Now, if you will be content to reduce slowly, which is the only right and proper way, a menu of celery one day a week with the exercise of a little self-restraint the rest of the time isn't a bad plan. But don't you ever dare to go on an exclusive celery diet because you've heard that's what Barbara Stanwyck does. She does not!

My physician recommends a fruit juice fast once a month as a means of discouraging excess weight and toning up the system at the same time. He does it himself, which should be impressive testimony.

THIS is the way to go about it. Fortifying yourself the first day with your morning coffee, take two tablespoons of milk of magnesia. Then as often as you feel like it throughout the day drink a glass of orange, tomato, grapefruit, pineapple juice or lemon juice in water. You may stick to one kind or alternate as you choose. The second morning you take a teaspoon of milk of magnesia and follow the same program of fruit juice and nothing else.

If you feel well you may continue the fast for a third day. But that's enough and do not do it oftener than once a month. Be sure to include the milk of magnesia. It will keep the excess of fruit acid from making your skin break out.

Speaking of skin, I don't use cold cream except to remove my screen make-up. No beauty editor is likely to allow me to pinch-hit for her again after that admission. But I'm not advising anybody else to do as I do. In the first place, I have an oily skin.

In the second place, I do not use any make-up away from the studio. Lipstick, yes, but otherwise I do not even put powder on my face. I love to see make-up on other women, so it isn't that I am prejudiced against it. It just doesn't seem to suit me.

Between pictures I get so used to going without any goo on my face that I invariably have trouble the first few days on a film. The grease paint makes me feel stiff-faced and then I forget and rub my fingers around my mouth and chin, which is a strong habit of mine. That can't be done with motion picture make-up without leaving smears. I'm constantly having to be patched up.

I KEEP my skin tanned all the time, summer and winter. That makes going without make-up more becoming. The only thing I do for my complexion is to wash well with an imported English soap recommended to me by a famous dermatologist.

I always carry several little pads of absorbent cotton in a compact case in my handbag. Wherever I happen to be I can dip one of them in cold water and wipe off the dust and oil that gathers on my face. It freshens up my appearance and takes the place of a powder puff with me.

A sun arc lamp keeps me tanned when the sun of heaven fails me—as it does part of the time even in California. Every day of my life I have a real sun bath if it is possible and otherwise I spend seven minutes under the lamp. My whole body is exposed, of course. It has proved a protection against colds and, for that reason, I am starting the lamp treatments for my little son on days when he can't have real sun baths.

It has always seemed to me that the woman who lets more than a week go by without washing her hair isn't as fastidious as she might be. My hair has no natural curl and perhaps the way I manage it may be of some help to others whom the gods have discriminated against. I wear it in a fairly long bob and, since nothing is more unattractive than straight and straggling wisps hanging about the neck, I have a good permanent wave put in the ends, for about three inches.

But I never have a complete permanent all over my head. Instead, just enough finger wave is set into the top after every shampoo to make it shape up well around my face. I can't stand curling solutions, so the wave is set with plain water. Unfortunately it doesn't last very long, but shampoos should be frequent anyway.

Beware of taking up freak diets, Miss Stanwyck warns. She outlines, in this article, a fruit juice diet which she considers sensible.

He Played a Hunch

Allan Jones Gave Up a Stage Contract to Travel to Hollywood, and Leading Role in 'Show Boat' Is Outcome of Young Singer's Sudden Decision

By Barney Hutchison

THE situation was just this: Allan Jones had a job; he was making good money; because of a contract, he was assured of good money for two more years; he had a chance to enter motion pictures at less money plus a gamble with the future.

"You're crazy if you take the chance," said his manager.

"I'm crazy if I don't," said Jones.

That is how Allan Jones, now playing opposite Irene Dunne in the Universal production of "Show Boat" came to the screen. One year ago he was just another tenor wandering around Hollywood. After several months he was given a small part with Jean Harlow in "Reckless." Then he was cast as the juvenile lead with the Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera." That did the trick. Carl Laemmle, Jr., saw the young man's performance in this picture and lost no time in signing him for the leading male role of Gaylord Ravenal in "Show Boat." Before he could accept the offer, he was committed to complete a role in "Rose Marie." Now, because he preferred to follow his own judgment, although it meant great sacrifice at the time, Allan Jones is sitting at the top of the heap. In the short period of 12 months, at that.

"I'm a lucky fellow," he said as he strolled along the levee set, waiting for Director James Whale to go with a scene for "Show Boat." "I played a hunch when I chose the screen over the stage. My stage contract had two years to run and that piece of paper was iron-clad. I begged for a release but it did no good. I was forced to buy off the remainder of the contract. I paid plenty and I'm still paying. However, things are turning out fine. Always play your hunches. That's a tip."

BUT as Allan Jones related incidents in his life, the hunch theory faded. More and more it became apparent that he has a habit of meeting situations face to face. His decisions are made coldly and deliberately. Once made, he is willing to stand on them. Here is a man who definitely knew what he wanted.

Allan Jones always wanted to be a singer. He knew this when he was 10 years old, just six years after his first public appearance. When Allan was 4, his father, who possessed a fine tenor voice, dressed up his son in his Sunday best, took him to a little church in Scranton, Pa., where Allan was born, propped him up in front of the congregation, and let him sing. What the listeners thought has not been handed down but it was a red-letter day in the life of the father. Unable to use his voice professionally himself, he was determined that Allan some day would have the singing career denied the father because of economic pressure and necessity.

As soon as he was able, Allan Jones was forced to help the family financially by running errands and doing odd jobs. His father gave him what voice training he could. In addition, the boy sang in church on Sundays. When he was ready for high school, his future was clearly fixed in his own mind. He, and others, knew that he had a fine voice. He wanted to complete his high school education and then go on with music. Both required money. All right, he would get the money.

"THAT'S why my youth was different from the usual lad's," says Jones. "I did not have the ordinary pleasures—athletics, parties and those mild romances that seem so important at the time. While the others were out having fun, I was working. I studied when I could, perhaps in the back seat of my boss' car at midnight while I waited for him. Sometimes in an elevator when I was employed as an operator. Sometimes I could snatch a few minutes when carrying out my duties as messenger boy in a bank. But there was no time for fun.

"I got my meals in my last two years of high school by working as manager of the cafeteria. A little extra money came my way when I ran the concessions on music school of New York University. And here he met a man who was to shape his career from that time on—Claude Warford, a professor of music at the university.

"Warford worked with me in all his spare time," says Jones. "I owe him more than I can ever repay. He was more than my teacher, he was, and still is, my very dear friend."

At the end of the year Warford asked the young man what he planned to do in the summer. Allan was faced, as usual, with the problem of money and said so.

"It seems a shame," went on Warford. "I wish you could join my summer class in Paris. It wouldn't cost a great deal and it would do you a world of good."

THE solution to the problem was worked out in Allan Jones' mind that night. It was taking a long chance but it was worth it.

"As I look back on it now," he says, "it was a nervy thing to do. Nevertheless, that trip abroad meant everything in the world to me at the moment so I was willing to do anything in order to make the journey possible. I rented an auditorium, and gave my word for a guarantee. I talked a printer friend of mine into running off the tickets. Then I asked my close friends to help me sell them. They did, bless them, and a young man close to collapse through worry and work went out on the platform that night and sang. I did not know until the next morning that, after all expenses had been deducted, I had more than $1,100 for my own use. It was a joyful cable I sent to Warford that I could join him in Paris in a fortnight."

Upon his return to this country he was booked for a solid year of concerts, and-ing in New York City where he shared top billing with Anna Case. The following summer he accompanied Warford abroad, devoting all of his time to study. In Manhattan again for the winter, he refused to go out on the road but sang in concert a few times at Carnegie Hall. Then to Deauville in the spring, where he played three months as guest tenor at the opera house there.

HE accepted fall engagements in Canada but realized, at their completion, that the bottom was falling out of the concert field. To make matters worse, in the financial crash of 1929 he lost what money he had saved. This meant 'hustle to eat. He did what he had always done in the past. He sought a job singing in church and was lucky enough to be placed under contract to St. Bartholomew's in New York. He sang every Sunday for $3,000 a year.

"This forced me to cut corners financially because an actor has a tremendous overhead whether he works or not. So, when I was offered a contract to run a period of five years, I signed in a hurry.

"I was under the impression that most of my work would be either in or around New York, but this was not the case. I was sent to St. Louis immediately for a summer with the Municipal Opera Company. It was very pleasant. Sometimes it meant singing, in the open air, to more than 10,000 persons at a single performance. I returned to St. Louis the two following summers. There I played 'Show Boat.'

"But the winters were something else again. Pleading for chances in New York meant nothing. I was sent out on the road from Florida to Chicago and back again. A few motion picture nibbles made me wonder. Finally I decided to make the break. I bought the remainder of the contract and here I am.

"No one but an actor can realize what success in motion pictures really means. In Hollywood, a player has a chance to put down roots, to have a home of his own.

"My plans for the future are rather indefinite at the present moment. How the public accepts me in 'Show Boat,' my first real big screen role, will undoubtedly have a great deal to do with what is to come."

Hollywood Hostesses Vary the Menu with Surprises
Such as 'Teaspoons' and Roller Skating Parties

By Grace Kingsley

"HOLLYWOOD plays when it works and works when it plays," said a Hollywood wit.

Probably that man had just spent a bad half hour at one of the more painfully correct Hollywood affairs given for the visiting firemen or a foreign prince or something, and was feeling a little sore, and not in a state of mind to look at things altogether in the right light.

For Hollywood, socially speaking, certainly has its moments!

It can work as hard at being stiff and formal as any old diplomatic or court circle in Europe. And then again it can take its pleasures like a kid. One of these up-to-date kids, to be sure, but still a kid.

And Hollywood hostesses certainly give each other tough competition when it comes to thinking up fresh and snappy ideas in entertaining, and of solving the question of what to do with the guest who is a wash-out.

Naturally there are a hundred different notions as to what a good time is and how to get it.

Some hostesses, for instance, are parlor game addicts, and greet the guest with a fanatical light in the eye when announcing a new-born game; others favor the impromptu entertainment idea, corraling the gifted guest the minute he enters the room, requesting that he perform his magic tricks or do acrobatics or play the harp. Then others believe in letting well enough alone—just turn the guests loose amid a lot of food and drink and conversation and hope for the best.

There are also Hollywood hostesses who feel that their social obligations can be liquidated in one big whoopee party, let the chips fall where they may; and still others who think that each and every other hostess who has entertained her and hers should be carefully rewarded with a dinner or theater party, no matter if she folds up with nervous prostration the minute it is all over.

THE VERY latest secret of entertaining is the surprise fad. Just surprise a guest into a high fever and a hostess feels her day has not been wasted.

Take Ann Sothorn, for instance. Guests are talking yet about that party she gave not long ago, and some have scars to show for it. For when Ann's guests arrived at her house on the fateful night, each was handed a pair of roller skates and told to do his worst! Everybody skated whether he could or not—at least once around the block. I wish you could have seen the look that came over the faces of some of the guests when they were handed those skates.

George Murphy, of course, could cut figure eights without any trouble, and it was all just a walkaway for Ida Lupino, but what Paul Kelly went through I'd hate to tell you. But the victims themselves will tell you it was swell fun.

Then there was Ginger Rogers and her art surprise party.

Ginger is a creature of many wild but fleeting ambitions which have included everything from pottery-making to the Japanese tea ceremony. While rummaging through a catch-all closet and getting tangled up in discarded pottery wheels and what-not, she conceived her fell purpose. In furtherance of it she gathered up charcoal, pastel crayons, oils, canvas, and sent out invitations to 10 friends to come to a party at her home, not giving the slightest hint what she intended doing to them when they got there. When they arrived she had them choose which medium as artists they would like to work in, dealt out the props and set them to work. Some of the guests looked a little blank at first, others merely kidded around, but most of them went to work seriously.

And it was amazing what a lot of talent, hitherto entirely unsuspected, was brought to light. Ginger gave a prize to Betty Furness for the best drawing, and then we all had supper. Ginger said she thought her guests had earned it!

CAROLE LOMBARD

went in hard for the surprise stuff when she took over one of the amusement concessions on the Santa Monica Pier. The most glamorous stars, including Marlene Dietrich and Claudette Colbert, found themselves whirling in the revolving barrels, suffering the embarrassment of the cave of winds, and looking at their beautiful features all distorted in the Fun House mirrors. Everybody thought it was fun, though, and even Louise Fazenda, who lost her skirt in the cave of winds, had a big laugh, while Marlene Dietrich took it in good part when her famous legs were a little blistered from sliding down the chute.

"I don't believe in these cut-and-dried parties," said Carole. "Guests have more fun in action than in just sitting around gossiping."

Then there was the surprise awaiting the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Warren William when they entered the new playroom just decorated by Walter Bruce, artist, with a mural showing tropical scenes. All the guests gave screams of delight or timidity, according to their various natures, when they beheld loose in the room real live monkeys and cockatoos! The monkeys occasionally grabbed a guest's glass to sip from it, and the cockatoos added raucous notes to the general noise after the party got under way. The simians broke a few glasses, but on the whole behaved themselves surprisingly well.

BETTE DAVIS

gave a unique surprise party at a stag dinner for her husband, Harmon O. Nelson, on his birthday. When the dinner was over, Bette came into the dining room and announced that some feminine entertainers had been engaged to appear in songs, dances and one-act plays. The stags preened themselves, and then—in came their wives and sweethearts, arrayed as dancers and entertainers! Most of the pseudo entertainers had had stage experience, and they danced, sang and acted in blackouts until the wee, small hours.

"That was good missionary work on my part," declared Bette, "for some of those men hadn't appreciated their wives' cleverness!"

The Saints and Sinners party given by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mundin was something entirely new in Hollywood. Mrs. Mundin gave everybody angels' scenery, wings and all, when they first arrived, and they had a lot of fun trying to behave as they thought angels should, even to playing a harp which had been rented for the occasion.

"Then they put on black sinners' robes," exentertaining the rest of the party, the stunts they must do being determined by a committee.

"Silly, but a lot of fun," says Paula.

The dignified Peggy Wood has introduced another frivolous game to Hollywood. She says she thought it up all of a sudden one day when she was having a tea party and things seemed to be slowing down. The game is called Blowing the Feather.

All guests take hold of a sheet and hold it up under their chins. A feather is placed on the sheet, and each player blows it, the idea being to keep it from touching the player. The first one touched is out; the last one wins the game. Playing the game not long ago were Kitty Carlisle, Fred and Paula Stone, John Emerson and Anita Loos and John V. A. Weaver. Anita Loos won.

Preston Foster says one of the gayest parties he ever gave grew out of a Christmas prank played on him by one of his friends. Foster and his wife gave a party to which a friend brought him as a joke a toy boat—the kind in which you light a candle to provide power. Foster and the donor took the boat to the bath tub to try it out, and had such a good time they forgot about the rest of the guests. So Foster decided that there was no reason why other people wouldn't enjoy the same thing, and decided on a glorifying kid party with mechanical toys provided for the guests.

There were toy automobiles and fire-engines, machine guns and boats, soldiers, airplanes, cookstoves and all the rest.

Ann Sothorn surprised her friends by giving them roller skates when they arrived at her house. Peggy Wood invented the Blowing the Feather game (below).

Pat O'Brien (right) serves a meal outdoors to a group including Joe E. Brown, Jack La Rue, Glenda Farrell, James Cagney and Bradley Page.

plained Mrs. Mundin, "and acted more like themselves!"

Inevitably there are what you might call high-brow hostesses, who love to present "intelligence tests" and such-like stunts to their guests. Joan Crawford springs her favorite "observation test" game whenever she can get just the right people together.

The rules of the observation test demand that each participant write a short story of several hundred words and fully developed plot. At the bottom of his page each writer puts 10 questions based on references in his text. Each player reads his story aloud, then asks the questions—such as, "What color are the hero's eyes?" "What is the nurse's first name?" "What was the name of the bank that was robbed?" and even questions relating to yet more trivial and obscure particulars of the story. Whoever answers the most questions wins a prize. Una Merkel won the prize not long ago. Included among those who have played are Franchot Tone, Clifton Webb, Una and her husband, Ronald Burla, and Marlene Dietrich.

"All these players," explained Joan, "are very keen observers, and it's a rapid-fire game when they play it. But it's a little hard on a guest who is tired from working all day."

Steffi Duna took a fancy for performing on the toy electric stove and turned out some good if tiny pancakes; Big Boy Williams' automobile crashed with John Carroll's toy train; Alan Mowbray sailed his boat until it sank, and Preston did the wildest stunts with his toy airplane.

A truly good time is reported to have been had by all.

DOLORES DEL RIO

believes that most guests enjoy either complete relaxation or lively exercise. Her swimming pool and tennis court are seldom idle on Sundays and holidays.

Dick Powell thinks formality should always be dispensed with at parties. He entertains at home on Sunday afternoons, in open house fashion, and often cooks for the guests himself.

Mrs. Pat O'Brien believes that a hostess should have a good time at her own party.

"If you are enjoying yourself," she said, "it is a pretty good sign that your guests are having a good time, too. A nervous and over-anxious hostess makes stiff and nervous guests."

Binnie Barnes and Racquel Torres think a party should be a three-ring circus, with the guests all doing as they please.

"Give them plenty to eat and drink, and just let them alone!" says Racquel.

is held by some hosts and hostesses that parties are primarily for fun.

Paula Stone and her friends play Teaspoons at the tea danasants which she gives at her home. Teaspoons are placed on a table around which the guests are gathered, the number of spoons being just one less than the number of guests. The players make a grab for the spoons, and the one who doesn't succeed in getting a spoon has to forfeit something on his person. Finally everybody has been caught teaspoon-less, and then the players must redeem their forfeited belongings by singing, dancing or otherwise

One Actor Who Won't Go Hollywood

By Lyle Rooks

FOUND: An actor who never will go Hollywood!

He is a young fellow by the name of James Stewart and he has life all wrapped up in a prize package labeled "Long term contract from M-G-M."

Having sized up the gentleman, my English history came back to me in a flash (I'm that quick) and I thought out a lovely lead for this story. It seemed a swell idea to start off by saying that a certain king of England named James Stuart lost his head, but here was a James Stewart who wouldn't lose his. On cautiously checking up, I find that it was another royal Stuart named Charles who lost his head. So I was just, as Fred Astaire put it, building up to an awful letdown.

Anyway the point still holds. James Stewart, of Indiana, Pa., and Hollywood, Calif., isn't going to lose his head or his sense of proportion. I'm betting on that, just as I am betting that he is going to click in a most exceptional way.

Young Stewart has had amazing luck. He's doing very well at the thing he most wants to do. Two pictures, in the first of which his part was no more than a trifle, and then he was shot into a leading role opposite Margaret Sullavan. First he appeared briefly in "Murder Man." He was the no-account brother of Jeanette MacDonald in "Rose Marie" and next time he was la Sullavan's lover in "Next Time We Love."

Critics hail his work as mature and distinguished. Everybody praises this lanky newcomer. Director Woody Van Dyke says, "He's a whale of a good actor."

ALTHOUGH he isn't handsome, Jimmy has a way about him. He is enormously tall and so lean he sort of caves in at the midriff. There's a slow drawl in his speech and he stammers a bit when he gets enthusiastic. One lock of hair keeps falling on his forehead until feminine fingers itch to do something about it. He is a bachelor and successful. It isn't sensible to suppose these super-lovely nymphs who over-run the Hollywoods will remain exactly unaware of his existence.

With half an eye you can see the situation has all the elements of a prime case of that malignant form of swollen ego known as going Hollywood. But this time it won't happen. Courageous of me to make such a flat statement. I do so from the vantage point of having officiated at the first interview Jimmy ever had to suffer through. I caught him in a pristine state of being himself, without any guard up.

"I haven't seen 'Rose Marie' yet, but they tell me you are immense," I ventured.

"Well, when you do see it don't wink or you'll miss me," he grinned.

I commented on the raves over his performance in "Next Time We Love," which had just been previewed.

"I don't know how I did. I haven't seen the picture. I guess nobody remembered to tell me there was going to be a preview." It didn't occur to Jimmy to be upset because he, the leading man, hadn't been invited. He's that modest.

JAMES STEWART

did not break any nursing bottles on the tin lids of property trunks. He did not come up the hard route through cheap vaudeville, piloted by ambitious, theatrical-minded parents who forced his talent.

"Nothing much ever happened to me," he drawled. "I was born in a small town and I lived right there until I went to college. My experiences were the same as those of a million average boys. The only difference between me and any of the rest of them is that instead of going into my father's hardware business when I was through school and marrying a childhood sweetheart and settling down, I got side-tracked into the theater. It was almost an accident."

In that normal, average, American small town, which held him until he'd grown to be a man, lies more reason why Stewart won't go Hollywood. Pretty hard to get away from a background like that. It salts the blood and dictates the moral reactions. It will keep him from toppling overboard into the heady waters of self-glorification no matter how fantastically successful he may become in pictures.

His parents looked at him blankly when he came home from a summer with a stock company at Falmouth, on Cape Cod, with a momentous announcement. He had undertaken the Falmouth engagement after his graduation from Princeton as a lark and for no more important reason than that he had never seen the sea.

"I'm going to Broadway! I've got a part in a show's that opening in New York. Maybe it won't last. Maybe you'll get a hurry-up call to finance me home after a while. But I want to have a try at being an actor."

THE senior Stewarts looked blank because they were too wise and well bred to make a scene.

At Princeton, James Stewart, of Indiana, Pa., had studied to be an architect. There is, too, such a place as Indiana, Pa. In self-protection against those who tell him it's a gag, James looked up history and discovered the town of Indiana is older than the State of Indiana by a considerable. His father before him had gone to Princeton. And there is another steady influence. Princeton can't be shrugged off lightly. He was in several Triangle Club shows at the university, but he swears he never had a serious thought about taking up acting as a profession. However, it was due to those Triangle appearances that friends asked him to join them in the Falmouth summer stock company. It must have been fate that decreed the play "Goodbye Again" was to be tried out in Falmouth that summer. Jimmy was given a part in it and when the show went to New York he was invited to go along. It ran for a year.

"Other plays followed," he remembers, "eight of them in three years, which is a sufficient number to indicate that they were certainly not all hits. I was never altogether sure I wanted to be an actor until I was in 'Yellow Jack,' which Guthrie McClintic produced. That wasn't a hit either, strangely enough. Boy, what a play!"

"I want to-play character parts. There's no fun in romantic leads. What could be more stupid than to spend your life dressed up like a tailor's dummy and walking through roles that make no demands? I don't care how small a part is if it means something."

DIDN'T I tell you? This actor never will buy himself 50 suits and condescend to smile a bored smile in the direction of fluttering fans. He has no illusions about being a big gift to the screen or the ladies. He won't balk at criticism either. He thoroughly enjoyed what one critic said of him in his last New York play. It was a dismal business, to hear him tell it. He was playing with a real Austrian actress in a play about Austria and he strove for an Austrian accent. The critic observed that "Mr. Stewart wandered through his part like a confused tourist on the shores of the Danube."

Now then, James Stewart, my lad, don't you go and make a monkey of me after you've had a few years of the large success I have predicted for you. Don't let me hear some day that James Stewart has just received his third divorce and is entertaining the Hollywood near-Four Hundred in Hollywood near-orgies almost nightly in his twenty-room mansion with its mammoth Roman bath swimming pool and its far-flung tennis courts and orchid houses. I couldn't stand it!

Stewart's first important screen assignment was with Jeanette MacDonald in the musical picture, "Rose Marie."

You've Got to Have COLOR

By Sara Day

COLOR is the dominant note of the Spring fashion parade. Designers have dipped their brushes in the vibrant colors of field and garden flowers to paint the most glowing fashion picture we've had in many a year. There are the soft enticing pastel lavenders of the lilac, the pinks and yellows of the primrose, the bright blue of the bachelor button, the gay red of the rose, entrancing purples of the violet and pansy and the brilliant yellow of the daisy.

The floral motif is dominant in both color and design, for flower patterns are woven into many of the new Spring fabrics. You'll want to buy at least one or two prints in the biggest and brightest floral patterns you can find, to wear under a navy blue or black coat. You'll tuck your hands into gloves of the pastel flower tones, wear flowers on your hats and on your lapels and huge bouquets of them on the décolletage of your evening gown.

Combine several colors in one outfit. Give your imagination free reign when you buy accessories. Buy scarfs, flowers, hankies, bags and even shoes in bright blue or purple, yellow, green, London tan or raspberry red to go with that navy blue, gray or black tailleur.

ALL sorts of figures from matches to animals form designs in materials for afternoon frocks. Maureen O'Sullivan has a fascinating spring frock with a design of architect's squares in red and blue on a background of white crepe. The skirt is shirred at the waistline and neck. The sleeves are full and elbow length. With this Maureen wears a crownless hat (very smart) in a natural color straw; for decoration it has, of course, a bunch of gayly colored posies. Her bag is the last word in spring accessories, of braided straw and trimmed with a bunch of fruit.

Another type of afternoon dress which illustrates two very strong fashion trends is Worn by Anne Shirley. It is a floral print in shades of green and black on a white background, which makes it smart, and when you add a pleated, starched chiffon jabot at the neckline, it becomes doubly smart.

Dinner and evening dresses bring a grand assortment of materials, colors and styles. You may go dramatic in a dress of stiff taffeta, you may be youthful in a floral printed crepe or crisp net, or be ephemeral in chiffon. The neatest trick of all is to cover the arms and throat with a layer of lace or chiffon, over a revealingly brief slip.

Chiffon is being revived this season and with all good reason. Nothing is prettier on the dance floor. Helen Taylor, designer for Walter Wanger productions, made an entrancing chiffon dance frock for Margaret Sullivan to wear in "The Moon's Our Home." It should be called moonlight and roses, for rhinestones are strewn with a generous hand over the delicate pink of the full pleated skirt and draped bodice. She wears rhinestone-sprinkled chiffon gloves with it, too.

THE very essence of spring and youth is embodied in a lovely flowered dinner frock which Loretta Young, Twentieth Century-Fox actress, has added to her wardrobe. A deep circular flounce, printed in white and yellow daisies and brilliant red poppies on a black background, is applied on a princess top printed in smaller white and yellow daisies. With this she carries a huge hanky of black silk net. The V neckline is accentuated by a jeweled clip picking up the red of the flower tones.

NEXT to color contrast in fashion importance comes the suit, and if you take a tip from Hollywood you'll add more than one suit to your spring wardrobe. Day or night you'll find the suit an appropriate costume. There are suits of the strictly man-tailored variety, suits with dashing bolero jackets, suits whose coats sport Chinese kimono sleeves, suits with coats that have full swagger backs and dinner suits with little jackets that suggest brother's tuxedo. But whatever manner of suit it is, it will have that broad-shouldered look sometimes gained by padding and sometimes by plaiting or shirring. It is fashionable this spring to be broad-shouldered and wasp-waisted.

The flowered dinner frock worn by Loretta Young (top) gains color from white and yellow daisies and red poppies. Anne Shirley (center) is shown wearing a floral print in shades of green and black. Maureen O'Sullivan (below) utilizes chevrons on a background of white.

DID JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

Mother Drowns Baby Son In Fear of Hunger; Jury Dooms Her by Mistake

By PETER LEVINS.

ONE hot afternoon last August a desperate mother, broke, jobless, at the end of her resources and in the depths of despair, drowned her two-year-old son in a creek a few miles out of Newburgh, N. Y. She dressed the body in fresh clothes and then went direct to the police, saying she killed the child because she could not bear to see him hungry.

Today that woman, Mrs. Dorothy Sherwood, is in the death house at Sing Sing.

How did she land in the death house? That is difficult to explain. The verdict was a total surprise to everybody, including the prosecutor. True, the jury recommended mercy but in this state such a recommendation means nothing, and the court was compelled to fix the penalty at death. Mrs. Sherwood is now occupying a cell adjacent to the one occupied by Mrs. Mary Creighton, the mass murderer.

The drowning of her son, Jimmy, was the culminating act of Dorothy Sherwood's unhappy life, the final frantic attempt at escape from a relentlessly hard world. The act was her admission of defeat, and in a certain sense it amounted to suicide. All the evidence indicates this. No one has denied that her child was the most precious—the last precious—thing left in her shattered life.

Nevertheless, she is in Sing Sing, sentenced to die.

This victim of a jury's misunderstanding was born in a hovel in the slums of East St. Louis, Ill., February 7, 1908. Her father, Thomas W. Caskey, had been a foundry worker and an itinerant preacher. Her mother, Florence Sorgia, the third of Caskey's five or six wives, developed into a sickly woman, unable to do any work. Dorothy began doing housework when she was seven years old.

Drudgery Kept Her From Play as Child.

The mother died when Dorothy was nine, and immediately Caskey placed the child in the care of a family who were janitors of a public school. Soon after the father enlisted in the medical corps and was sent to Austin, Texas. Dorothy never had any chance to play, as other little girls did, because she had to do housework, had to clean and dust classrooms and such drudgery.

Six months of this, and then, at the suggestion of a sympathetic adult, she wrote to her father, telling him of her miserable existence.

Caskey came north and took the child back to Austin, where he placed her in an orphanage. This was better, but as she was one of the oldest girls in the institution, she had innumerable duties to perform in caring for the smaller children. A few months later Caskey married and Dorothy went to live with him and his new wife. But within a few weeks the marriage collapsed, the newlyweds separated, and Dorothy went back to the orphanage.

She remained there now for 13 months. She developed a hatred of orphan asylums, a horror of them which was to affect her later life considerably.

The war over, Caskey took her back to East St. Louis, where Ada Carr became Wife No. 6. But again, within a few months, husband and wife separated. Caskey then got a job with the Salvation Army, was transferred to Des Moines, Iowa, and placed Dorothy, not yet 12 years old, in the home of a Salvation Army family. The child attended school, did house work, attended services, and had no chance to play.

This sort of life continued for four years, Dorothy passing from one family to another, and from one city to another in the middle west. She got through grammar school and one year of high school. By the time she was 16 she was so thoroughly fed up with household drudgery, unrelieved by any of the usual excitements and diversions of her age, that she ran away from a family she was living with in Milwaukee and went to Chicago.

But she had no money, and she could not find a job. In the end she had to appeal to the Salvation Army, and they decided she should return to Milwaukee. They sent her back, she stood it another six months, and again she fled. For a while she worked as a wrapper, and then a cash girl, in a St. Louis department store. Then she was a waitress at $10 a week. Then she joined the Salvation Army.

Five months in Hot Springs, Ark., another period in Paris, Texas, a few weeks in Texarkana, Texas, and again the urge for a pleasanter, more exciting life gripped her, and she went back to St. Louis. That was in the fall of 1923, and she was now an exceedingly pretty girl of 17.

She was working long hours as a waitress when she saw an advertisement for chorus girls. She had never danced in her life, yet she landed a job, and the show closed a few months later in Danville, Ill. She discovered that for sheer hard work nothing could be worse than the chorus, but at least there was the hope of better jobs to come. A friend in the show took her to Chicago, where presently they both joined the chorus in a Columbia burlesque.

All this may be rather monotonous reading, but that was her life. We should know all these things, and the other events that followed, if we are ever going to understand the forces which drove her to Moodna creek that afternoon last August.

The Columbia show closed in New York in June, 1926. She got other odd jobs, and in October landed in the Stone and Pollard show in Scranton, Pa. The electrician with the company was a little man named Fred Sherwood. She and he became good friends.

Dorothy worked from 10 a. m. until 2 o'clock the following morning, and there was little time for diversion. She and Sherwood played cards together back stage between numbers, and went to lunch together. There is every possibility that before very long, as the show moved from town to town, they slept together. Such companionships have a way of developing in such situations.

They were married April 2, 1927. The ceremony was performed on the stage of the Empire theater, in Chicago, as a publicity stunt for the show. The big climax of the entertainment came when a bevy of local firemen presented the bride with a stock of baby clothes.

Mrs. Sherwood was to need these clothes sooner than the audience realized.

A few weeks later, the show having closed for the summer, the newlyweds went to the home of Sherwood's mother, Mrs. Maud Sherwood, in Newburgh, N. Y. By this time Dorothy knew definitely, if she did not before, that she was pregnant. They had no money, Fred's mother had no money, so they went to Callicoon, N. Y., where Fred's grandmother had a big house. Two months later she died, her pension stopped, and they returned to Newburgh.

Jobs Fail—Then, Back to Newburgh.

In September, Sherwood got work with a show called "Bringing Up Father," and his bride went along with him. By early December they were back in Newburgh. Fred got a job in Schenectady, but it folded after only a few weeks. The baby, a daughter, whom they named Dorothy May, was born at Mrs. Maud Sherwood's home, December 28.

And three weeks later, because the family was broke, the young mother went to New York in search of work.

She got a job in the chorus at the Olympic theater, Fred obtained work as an assistant electrician at Proctor's Fifth Avenue theater. The 10 a. m. to midnight stretch proved too much for Dorothy, and she collapsed, and again they were back in Newburgh.

So it went until the fall of 1928, when life really smiled on them, for Sherwood got a job as a motion picture operator in the Park theater, Newburgh, at $55 a week. His wife was able to quit her job as waitress; for the first time in her life she was able to have a few things beyond the bare necessities.

Then Fred's mother suffered a heart attack, and went to live with a daughter (now dead) in Callicoon. She begged them to let her have Baby Dorothy with her while she recuperated—the grandmother was intensely devoted to the child, for she had been like a mother to young

DID JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

Dotty in the periods when Dorothy Sr. had to be away on the road. They brought the child to her, and she remained in Callicoon.

The story moves on to 1932. In September, of that year Dorothy again became pregnant. In November Fred contracted rheumatism, which first hit him in the legs, and later reached his arms. Eventually it became so bad that he could hardly operate his projection machine. He had to miss many days of work.

Dorothy's second child, a boy whom they named James, was born May 19, 1933. When the news was brought to her that she had borne a son she was deliciously happy, for she had wanted a son more than anything in the world. (And if the reader thinks we are making this up, please get rid of the idea.)

Sherwood lost his job, and had trouble holding other jobs. His wife wanted to cut loose from him—if she had ever really loved him that feeling had passed—but she stuck to him because she could not bear the thought of being separated from her son. They lived from hand to month—and in June, 1934, they learned that Fred had tuberculosis.

He was placed in Odell's sanitarium in Newburgh. Dorothy worked as a waitress, making $5 a week in wages and about $5 in tips. People suggested putting Jimmy in a home, but she said she would never do that. People offered to take care of him, but she said that he was hers, and she would keep him. She lived on the edge of nothing, as she had almost all her life, but her child fared well.

In October, 1934, she lost her job and went on relief. She received her rent and her food from the relief people, but no money. A bitter winter passed. In March she got another job as a waitress.

Fred died on April 18, 1935. He was buried in Callicoon on Easter Sunday, and the widow went back to Newburgh with her son. She was working in the Garden restaurant there.

Early the following June Dorothy Sherwood made the acquaintance of Jesse B. Earle, a customer at the restaurant.

Now, as so often happens in cases of this kind, Mrs. Sherwood did not learn as much about Earle as she might have. All she learned was what he told her, which was somewhat inaccurate. He told her he was a federal man, working out of New York and Washington, and that he was separated from his wife, who was in California. He told her that he had been assigned to a local case, and that he was living at the Washington hotel in Newburgh.

Lied About Job—

And About Wife.

The fact was that Jesse Earle was not a federal man. He had once been a prohibition agent, had resigned in December, 1926, and a few months later had been indicted by a federal grand jury for conspiracy to divert alcohol for bootleg purposes. Before that he had been arrested for carrying a gun and received 30 days.

The fact was, further, that he had a wife and two children, with whom he was living in Middletown.

Mrs. Sherwood went out with him the first time on June 17. After that there were frequent meetings. Earle suggested that they live together, that he set up a home for her. He said that he was exceedingly fond of Jimmy—and he gave every evidence of being thoroughly attached to the child—and he wanted to establish a trust fund for the youngster. When the mother told him that she dreamed of sending him to military school, and to college, when he grew up, Earle promised he would see to that. He would get a divorce as soon as possible and they would live in California.

Now if you have followed this woman's story, you will understand that, after the life she had lived, she could not be expected to adhere to any puritanical code. Since childhood she had known little but hardship and incessant struggle.

Consequently it is easy to see why she might have been tremendously attracted by Earle's proposal, and why she became intimate with him. That she should give herself to him probably seemed to her a comparatively small return.

Thus she arrived at the happiest period, possibly, of her life. If not the happiest, then at least the most comforting. She foresaw now the end of all the worry, the fear of poverty, the uncertainty. At last she felt that she could face the future with comparative calmness and anticipation. What if Jesse had not proposed marriage? That might come later. She was confident that it would come later.

"Everything's going to be all right," she told Jimmy, hugging him ecstatically.

She and Earle took long drives in his car. Sometimes she entertained him in her room at Mrs. Margot Schoonmaker's at 205 Broadway. He told her to get ready to leave for California on August 1. She hugged her son, and thought of nothing else but this great fortune.

On July 28 she quit her job.

On August 1 Earle informed her that there would be a delay as he had to "break in a new man."

On August 12 he told her "everything was okay." They would leave for California on the 15th.

She did not see him again. She decided that he was detained in New York on business. The days passed. Her money dwindled. She owed Mrs. Schoonmaker for two weeks' rent.

On August 17 she met Jack Bernstein, a mutual friend, who told her he had seen Earle in town. She sat in the bay window of the house, waiting. Earle did not show up. Mrs. Schoonmaker told her that Earle had deceived her, that he was living with his wife. Dorothy refused to believe this.

August 19. She made inquiries about Earle, and discovered that the landlady had spoken the truth. Jesse Earle was living in Middletown with his family. Moreover, he was not a G-man, as he had told her. She did not sleep that night.

August 20. A horrible feeling of depression took possession of her. She had no money, no job. More than that, she had a feeling that she could not get a job again. Mrs. Schoonmaker informed her that she would have to give up her room as another boarder was coming. The landlady mentioned the money that was owed her. Mrs. Sherwood went out of the house and visited several restaurants. They told her there were no jobs. Later maybe, but not right now.

She returned home. Jimmy was playing in the parlor with the Schoonmaker children.

"Jimmy, do you want to go for a ride?" she asked. He came on the run.

A little while later she was wheeling him in his stroller along Broadway. It was a hot day but she walked fast. They reached Route 9-W, and went along this highway until they came to Caesar's lane, about three miles out of town. Mrs. Sherwood turned into the lane and pushed the carriage to a small creek, where she took off her child's shoes and stockings, and he waded in the shallow pool. She sat on a rock in the grass while he frolicked about. An hour or more went by. "Are you tired, Jimmy?" she asked.

He said he was.

"Play a little while longer," she said, "and then we'll go home."

A little while longer—and then he came toward her. She walked to meet him. She clasped him in her arms and turned him around so that he could not see her twisted face. She lifted him and kissed him. Then she fell forward, holding him tight in her arms.

Dorothy, it's a boy! You have a son! Oh, a son! Bring him to me! I want to see him! I want to see my son!

She took off the wet play suit and dressed the limp body in dry clothes. Then she took him in her arms and walked toward the highway. For a long while she sat on a log, holding him, then she started toward town, holding him.

A truck stopped. She climbed aboard. They dropped her at Broadway and Grant street. She walked into police headquarters. Lieutenant John Powell was on duty at the desk.

"Here he is," she said in a low, dead voice.

Powell looked up. "What's the trouble?"

"I killed him."

"What's that?"

"I drowned him."

"I Thought He Would Be Better Off Dead."

Powell stared at her, then at the child in her arms. "Where—did you do that?"

"Down in Caesar's lane. I couldn't take care of him any longer. I thought he would be better off dead."

She took out a handkerchief and wiped Jimmy's lips.

They took her to the Orange county jail at Goshen and charged her with first degree murder. District Attorney Henry Hirschberg, after consulting two alienists who examined the prisoner, announced that he would do "his legal best to send Dorothy Sherwood to the electric chair for the cold-blooded murder of her child." The authorities contended she killed her son to rid herself of an embarrassing and inconvenient object in the path of her elopement with an unnamed man.

She was indicted August 27. Stanley B. Johnson was appointed by the court to defend her, and on January 13, 1936, she went on trial for her life before Judge Jonathan D. Wilson in Newburgh.

The state took only a few hours to complete its case. Hirschberg in his opening asserted that the defendant need not have drowned her child, that "agencies of relief stood ready to help her and were ready to help her further." He told the jury that she "did not suffer from insanity or lack of moral sense. She chose to commit this wrong for reasons of her own."

He asked the jury to consider the evidence "coldly and without regard for human sympathy."

Defense Attorney Johnson said: "I will show that Dorothy Sherwood suffered a severe disappointment on the day her child died, and that it left her incapable to contemplate premeditation. Her love for her child amounted almost to an obsession. She would not see the child suffer. Where there was no more hope, reason fled."

The brief parade of prosecution witnesses gave their testimony. Had she killed the child? Yes, she had killed the child. Did she know right from wrong when she did it? Two state alienists, Dr. Robert W. Woodman and Dr. Frederick W. Seward

It Pays to Be Big-Hearted

By Betty Goodwin

NEXT TIME, Mister Editor, please let this writer have an easy assignment—such as interviewing a sound effect. Or translating a series of broadcasts by Mussolini, Emperor Haile Selassie and the St. Bernard dogs of the Alps.

But never again, please, send me out to get Jack Benny to talk seriously about himself. The first thing he said was, "You don't want a story about me. I haven't any Hidden Chapters in My Life. You know as well as I do that you can't write a story without a Hidden Chapter. And looka here, I'll show you what a punk prospect I am. I haven't even a Hitherto Undisclosed Love Affair. Now where are you? What can you write about?"

Only dimly, behind the rolling clouds of gray smoke, could I discern the sly smile and silver hair that are Jack's trademarks. The Benny big black cigar, in case you hadn't heard, has often been compared to the ever-burning torch under the Arc de Triomphe. Now and then some trouble-maker starts a whispering campaign to the effect that Jack discards his cigar while sleeping and showering, but he is always quick to deny the rumor.

"Now, here's your story," he went on. "Kenny Baker. There's a kid who's going to amount to something. Why, I want to tell you that Kenny—"

"But Mr. Benny," I protested, "we'll do a story about Kenny later. What the editor wants is a story about YOU. Here you are back in New York after months and months in Hollywood. We've GOT to have a story. Everybody's writing and asking!"

"That gives me an idea," he said, quietly, thoughtfully. "I'll give you something for Screen and Radio Weekly. I'll get Mary to write a poem for you."

JUST then Harry Conn, who is Benny's script-collaborator, stepped in and saved the day.

"Don't pay any attention to Jack," he whispered. "Come out here in the control room a minute and I'll give you a story."

He talked only a couple of minutes before the whole thing fitted together as the works fit into a watch. Jack's talking eternally about the other people in his show; the gay atmosphere of the rehearsal (because a Jack Benny rehearsal has none of the strain, none of the ragging, none of the seriousness that characterize most big-time rehearsals). Everything suddenly seemed quite clear, this story included.

The thing that makes Jack Benny different; the thing that makes you listeners love him, is really the simple old-fashioned trait of generosity. Most theatrical people and comedians particularly are selfish as they can be about the "fat parts" or the "laugh lines" of their show. The star gets the big piece of pie—or else why be a star?

WELL, there was a time (some of this I eventually wormed out of Benny, but most of it came from the people he works with) when Jack was exactly like all the rest. He began in vaudeville and in small circuits. He worked hard, kept busy most of the time—but he is the first to admit that he wasn't too good.

Those were the days when "playing the Palace" in New York was the apex of every vaudevillian's ambition. Finally, after years in the sticks, Jack got his chance at the Palace.

His act consisted of himself and a girl, but he didn't give the girl much. Just a line or two, here and there, to help him out.

When he sepped into the spotlight he almost ignored the girl altogether. This was his big moment. Why share any of the precious limelight? His reasoning was the typical reasoning of show business. "Grab the spot if it's on you or anywhere near you."

Jack played his hardest to that blase big city audience. He gagged and he fiddled. He smiled, shouted. He gave them the works.

"You kind of keep out of things, for a while," he tipped off the girl stooge.

But it wasn't for long. A week later Jack was back in the sticks, smarting under the knowledge that somehow, unbelievably, he hadn't made good.

There were hundreds of more nights in tank town hotels before Jack won a second chance at the Palace. Even then it wasn't what he really considered a break. He had to share his skit with another guy. Guy by the name of Lou Holtz. And, golly! What ideas that Holtz fellow had! Why, he wanted to mop up the floor with Benny! He turned Benny into a regular stooge. By the time the curtain was rung down Jack hadn't enough dignity left to patch a pinhole.

He'd been a goat, he'd been a chump—and he'd been a wow!

That was the turning point in his career. From that performance on Benny was big-time. He had learned the secret that has guided his every move in radio: "Never mind being the big shot. It's being the under-dog that pays!"

He spent more time than ever thinking up laugh-lines—and then he gave them away. He gave them to George Olsen and Ethel Shutta, when he made his air debut with them 'way back in 1932. He gave them to Mrs. Benny, when he finally persuaded her to join him behind the microphone under the name of Mary Livingston.

And speaking of Mary brings up a subject that is a story in itself. She isn't a bit nervous or concerned about rehearsals, so she had plenty of time to talk to me. She said quite frankly that the first few years of her marriage to Jack were not all that she had expected them to be. You see, Mary had been brought up as far as possible from the theatrical world. She thought a husband should go to work at 9 in the morning and come home at 5. She thought he had no business associating with chorus girls, who call everybody "darling" as a matter of course.

She thought—very definitely!—that she had made a mistake when she married an actor fellow who couldn't provide anything in the way of a home except a series of cheap hotel rooms, linked together by tiresome train trips.

Several times, when Jack's girl stooge was ill, Mary filled in behind the footlights, but it wasn't in her really to like the stage. The stage was the Enemy of the Home.

THEN one night, after Jack had turned to radio, he pressed her into service again. The script ran short. There was, in radio parlance, "one minute to fill." Jack beckoned insistently to Mrs. Benny and together they filled the minute with silly, pointless conversation.

"Now," said Mary, after the program was off the air.

"now I suppose the sponsor's sore. I'll bet I've ruined your career in radio—and just when I was beginning to see where we'd have a real home and ston home every night."

As it turned out, nobody was sore, least of all the radio audience. They sent in hundreds of letters asking who the new girl on the show was. "We like her voice," they wrote. "Let's have more of her."

THAT, my children, is the story of How Mary Livingston Came to Radio. Jack, having discovered the material advantages as well as the spiritual satisfaction of being big-hearted, gave her an increasingly large part in the broadcasts. Week by week and program by program he built her into a star. Of course, she didn't know what was happening to her. Most of the Benny-made stars haven't known what was happening to them. They speak lines, to oblige Jack. They treat him rather badly, it always seems to them, cracking jokes about him, talking back and acting sassy. And then one day they wake up to find themselves famous, the beneficiaries of the powerful "Benny build-up."

"If he wants to give lines away, if he wants stooges, why doesn't he go out and hire real actors?" you might very well ask.

The real reason is that Jack likes the non-professional way in which these singers, announcers, maestros, friends and relatives deliver their wisecracks. They're natural. They can get the laughs.

There, Mister Benny! I hope you're satisfied. You were right when you asked us to write the story about your pals. They can tell your story better than you can!

After some disappointments, Jack Benny learned that the best things came his way after he had stepped out of the spotlight in favor of his co-workers. All of which helps to explain his ranking in the top flight of radio's comedians.

What has become of Robert Young, who used to play romantic roles in such fine manner? How old is he, and what is his height and weight?

ADMIRER.

Mr. Young recently returned from England, where he appeared on the screen in "Secret Agent" and "It's Love Again," for Gaumont-British Pictures. He was born in Chicago, Ill., February 22, 1907, is 6 feet, weighs 160 pounds, has brown hair and eyes.

My brother and I have been arguing about who the man was that was always telephoning about his expected baby in "Four Hours to Kill," and would like you to settle the argument by telling us his name.

EDWARD R. KEARNEY.

Roscoe Karns.

If possible, I wish you would clear up one point in connection with "The Prisoner of Shark Island." In the picture, immediately after Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd (Warner Baxter) conquers the yellow fever epidemic in the prison, he is released as the result of a petition sent by the grateful prison officials to Washington. A friend, who is something of a delver into history, insists this is not in accordance with the facts. If so, what were they, and was the story altered just to give one of those sweet endings without which Hollywood seems to think no picture can be made?

CURIOS.

According to historians, instead of being freed, Dr. Mudd was sent back to a cell in compliance with a terse military order, and remained there two years. Then his wife gained an audience with President Johnson, and secured his pardon. We do not know whether the story was changed

DID JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

Sr., stated that, in their opinion, she did. (Later, two defense alienists, Dr. Charlotte Munn and Dr. Gerson Davidson, stated that, in their opinion, she didn't.) It was all a very simple matter for the prosecution—she killed the child, and she was sane.

Mrs. Sherwood told her own story on the stand—her childhood, marriage, the affair with Earle, the drowning.

"Did you love Jimmy?" her lawyer asked her.

"Oh, yes, very much. I always loved him."

"How did you feel when you were wheeling him down to Caesar's lane?"

"I don't know. I don't remember any feelings of any kind."

"Did you feel that you were doing right?"

"I just thought it had to be done—that it was the best thing to do."

"How did you feel after you drowned him? Did you feel calm?"

"Yes—calm."

"How does it seem to you now?"

"Like a bad dream. It doesn't seem real."

Mrs. Schoonmaker was a strong rebuttal witness for the state. She testified she told Mrs. Sherwood to "act like a woman" and stop running around with married men. She said that she had often told her boarder that she would take care of Jimmy so long as she had a roof over her head and a crust of bread. She denied, at first, that she had mentioned the rent that was owed her, but admitted it under cross-examination.

So the issue went to the jury. . . . Did she kill him and was she sane? Never mind the unnatural to give a soft ending, although those who prepared it certainly must have been familiar with the facts. At any rate, we think you will agree the picture was bitter enough.

Didn't Wallace Beery have a brother named Noah? What has become of him?

OLDTIMER.

Yes, Noah Beery has been in England for some time, making pictures.

What pictures has Joe Penner appeared in? Is he going to make any more?

WANNA BUY.

Penner appeared in two feature films, "Collegiate" and "College Rhythm," as well as many shorts. He is under long-term contract to R.-K.-O. Radio, which indicates that more pictures will be forthcoming.

What was the name of Richard Bennett's father? Was Richard born in England?

WILLIAM BENNETT.

George Washington Bennett. Richard was born at Deacon's Mills, Ind., May 21, 1875.

Who played the part of Puck in "A Midsummer Night's Dream?"

LAWRENCE REACH.

Mickey Rooney.

childhood, the endless labor through the years, the scoldings, the beatings, the horror of institutions, the frustrated hopes, the dread of hunger. . . . Never mind her cries of joy at having a son—did she know right from wrong? True, she was at the end of her rope. True, she was in despair. But what's that got to do with it? She killed him. She did it deliberately. She took extra clothes to dress him in. She went to the police. She was calm. . . .

After 3 hours and 55 minutes the jury returned to ask the court a question: Did the law permit a recommendation of mercy? Judge Wilson replied: "Of course the law does permit a recommendation of mercy. Does that answer your question?"

"Yes," said the foreman.

Six minutes later the jury announced a verdict of "guilty with a recommendation of mercy." It was apparent that they thought this recommendation would result in a life term for the defendant, as in New Jersey, but the court had no recourse but to sentence her to death.

Thousands Spring

To Her Defense.

The movement to save Dorothy Sherwood from this fate began almost the instant the trial ended. Calvin Myers, editor of the Newburgh News, wrote a front-page editorial denouncing the verdict, calling it a miscarriage of justice and a blot upon the name of Orange county. That was the first blast of a crusade which has now reached tremendous proportions.

Within a few days petitions were being circulated. Thousands of residents signed the plea in Mrs. Sherwood's behalf. Clubs, ministers, teachers, all sorts of organizations, approved the movement. More than 5,000 signatures have been obtained in Newburgh alone. Many women from distant parts of the country, women who knew Mrs. Sherwood in her childhood, have written Governor or Lehman. The Governor, incidentally, cannot act until the courts have finished with the case.

The clemency movement, under the leadership of Mrs. Jefferson Barnekov, of Bronxville, has spread over adjoining counties and will probably become nation-wide if the higher courts do not upset the erroneous verdict.

Margaret Mayo, the playwright, who lives in Harmon, said several days ago that in her opinion, Mrs. Sherwood's action was in keeping with "natural laws." She said that "her action was more nearly in line with nature as we see it expressed in animals. A wild animal, unable to feed its young, will destroy it rather than see it suffer."

"In this case we seek to persecute such a person, who has been forced into her position by a false state of civilization. I think the blame should be put on the shoulders of present-day society, which permitted her to exist in such a state of torture."
